Greenhouse Builders

This particular design of ball-bearing vent hanger is bolted to both the rafter and purlin, taking the place of the regular purlin knee.

Here is our Standard Ball-bearing Hanger all apart. It's built almost like a watch. But it has the strength. It stands the racket.

Standard Ball-bearing Hanger as it looks bolted to the rafter.

This Ball-bearing Vent Hanger Cuts Down Elbow Grease

FOR a long time we had been using a ball-bearing on some of our ventilating gears.

Then we equipped a shaft hanger with it, and can't help wondering why it wasn't done long before it was done.

Of course, it makes the apparatus run easier—a lot easier.

It does cost a bit more than the old hanger, but what of it?

If it takes a lot of the lug and tug out of the ventilating, what does the question of a little extra on the cost amount to?

But don't for a minute compare this ball-bearing hanger with those that have been rushed on the market in competition.

Look at the photograph of the parts shown above, and you will see how it is not skimped in any way.

In fact, it's made just like a bicycle bearing, or as any other dependable ball-bearing is made.

Although there seem to be quite a few parts, its construction is simplicity itself.

They all go together easily and fit into a surprisingly compact space.

If you still prefer the old hangers, we have them.

But once you have equipped a run of ridge sash with the ball-bearing ones, you will never go back to the old.

This ball-bearing hanger, in combination with our counterbalance gear, cuts elbow grease down to almost no grease at all.

A·B·C TRADE MARK "WATCH US GROW"

Scene at a Japanese Florist's.

Flowers are scarce and will continue to be scarce until you increase your production. By not having flowers to sell to the customer who calls to purchase them, you are eliminating a flower buyer. The increased demand for flowers has never been greater. It is up to the florist to hold intact the popularity of flowers and improve it by having on hand an assortment at all times.

To Flower Buyers

THE great demand caused by the influenza epidemic is still in effect. We have managed to fill all regular orders in full and in addition have helped our regular customers with extra lots of flowers when wanted, besides giving some Roses to new Customers.

Our prices charged on shipping orders have averaged less than what we could have sold the stock right here in the market. We have endeavored to help our customers in the matter of prices as much as possible, even at a loss to ourselves. This will continue to be our policy. The supply of roses will depend largely upon the weather conditions, and with a more moderate spell of weather than we have had lately, a larger supply of roses can be expected. For St. Valentine's Day, we urge our customers to send in their orders early, as there will no doubt be a great shortage.

Carnations will still continue short, as will the shorter length grade of Roses.

All miscellaneous flowers are very scarce, but we will do our best to buy any stock wanted which we do not grow ourselves and have on hand.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

We grow Chrysanthemums for the cut flower market and we grow a lot of them. We have culled our list of commercial sorts just as closely as we dare cull it. We buy the new ones and give them a chance to show merit, but we do not aim to keep in this list a variety that cannot be grown well by the average grower. If a variety needs special treatment or nursing to make it produce blooms that will sell, we don't grow it and we have not kept in this list those varieties which cannot be finished well with average treatment.

The list of Chrysanthemums we are offering for the season of 1920 shows some changes from last season. We have discarded some varieties and have kept only such as have shown themselves really needed to maintain a balance of color and season. This selection has eliminated many for which we may have calls during the planting season, but in the list presented we have the superior of the discarded variety.

C. H. Totty
William Turner
Yellow Wm. Turner
Wells' Late Pink

Rooted Cuttings: 75c per doz., $5.00 per 100, $40.00 per 1,000.

New Chrysanthemums for the Commercial Grower

2¼-inch, 25c each, $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100.

Sun Glow. An early, bright yellow of the Major Bonnaffon type, maturing October 25th. Exceptionally fine stem with the foliage extending to the bloom. Produces an exceedingly high percentage of perfect blooms.

Victory. A pure, glistening white with a decided waxy luster; fine stem and foliage. By stopping the plants September 10th and securing the bud that develops upon this break five or six weeks later, a fine crop may be had for Thanksgiving and after.

Other New and Valuable Sorts

Rooted Cuttings: 75c per doz., $5.00 per 100, $40.00 per 1,000.

2¼-inch, $1.00 per doz., $7.00 per 100, $55.00 per 1,000.

Barbara Davis. In color a rich shade of reddish bronze and entirely distinct from any other variety. It was disseminated by us in 1917 and has proved a decided acquisition either as a cut flower or as a pot plant. In habit of growth it is short-jointed and inclined to be dwarf, but makes good stems from early propagation. The flower is reflexed when fully open and is at its best just before maturing.

Golden Mistletoe (A. N. Pierson, Inc.). This variety, as shown by the name, is a sport of Mistletoe. The parent is our latest flowering variety, coming well into December. It is ball-shaped. An excellent companion for the parent. We have grown it in quantity and know that it will be a favorite.

General List of Choice Commercial Varieties

Rooted Cuttings: 50c per doz., $3.50 per 100, $30.00 per 1,000.

Pompon Chrysanthemums

NOVELTIES

Rooted Cuttings: 25c each, $2.50 per doz., $17.50 per 100; $150.00 per 1,000.

2¼-inch, 35c each, $3.00 per doz., $20.00 per 100.

Nellie Irwin (A. N. Pierson, Inc.). A true Pompon, clear, bright yellow in color with every desirable attribute in stem, foliage, plant habit and formation of the flower cluster. It comes into bloom about November 10th to 15th and holds well on the plant, which is very desirable when a variety is grown in large quantities for commercial cutting. It follows Golden Climax and precedes Romaine Warren. It is a Pompon variety which will find a welcome with the grower for the wholesale market, having strong, straight stems and bunching nicely. It is the best Pompon variety we have raised or offered for sale. We cut the last for Thanksgiving day trade and they were in perfect condition.

Pauline Wilcox (A. N. Pierson, Inc.). The form of the flower classes it as a decorative variety and it is the ideal decorative type. The habit of the plant and the flower sprays are very desirable. The stems are straight and strong and the flowers hold well apart in the clusters. The color is bronze with red and gold mixed, the tips of the petals being lighter, giving a very pleasing combination. In bloom November 5th. It is a gloriously colored variety and there is nothing like it. It is distinct and valuable.

blooms around November 20th. The growth is upright, the stems strong, holding the flower erect. Color is very attractive and, as there are no other varieties of this color in bloom at the same season, it will be a profitable one to grow. It is a Thanksgiving day bronze and a good one.

Helen Hubbard (A. N. Pierson, Inc.). This is the best crimson decorative we have ever grown. The lower petals are from two to two and one-half inches in length. The color is a rich, velvety crimson which does not fade. Growth is excellent. There are no other varieties in this color which can compare with it for cutting in sprays. This Harvard crimson is in bloom November 15th.

Lorraine Meech (A. N. Pierson, Inc.). Distinctly a novelty. We introduce this variety because so many of our customers have seen it and have asked for plants. Color is dull crimson with a golden-bronze reverse. The petals curl just enough to show both colors, which gives a very pleasing contrast. When fully open, a small yellow center shows, but this should, nevertheless, be classed as a Pompon. Growth is very good; foliage, dark green right up to the bud. In bloom November 10th.

New Pompons

Rooted Cuttings: $1.00 per doz., $8.00 per 100. 2¼-inch, $1.50 per doz., $10.00 per 100.

Becky McLane. In full crop just ready for Thanksgiving day. Could easily have been held to December this year. This gives you an idea of this valuable late-flowering Pompon. It is a small bronze, but richly colored and very popular. It is a strong, upright grower and makes good, single plants. The stems are stiff and straight. It will cut real money per square foot and it is a variety the market needs.

Christmas Gold. This small, golden-yellow, button Pompon was introduced last season. It flowers in early December, but has not proved as strong and healthy this season as it was last. It matured a fair crop and, from selected stock, we shall grow it again.

Cometa. Dark, rose-shaded magenta, a very attractive color which does not fade. Growth upright and strong. Excellent variety for disbudding. A seedling from Lillian Doty.

November Pearl. This new Pompon is of our own raising and is a seedling from Western Beauty. In color, a very beautiful soft shade of daybreak pink. It grows easily and cuts good sprays on strong stems. It is a fine flower of medium size and is a valuable acquisition to the list of November-flowering varieties.

Ouray. The best early, dark bronze. In bloom October 20th. The color is a dark mahogany brown and does not fade. The flowers are medium size and stems are wiry.

Uvalda. Very early white, maturing October 10th. A large flower and when fully opened is a pure, glistening white.

Vasco. This variety is exceptionally good for sprays. Should be classed as a decorative Chrysanthemum. Bright, glowing yellow, maturing October 17th.

White Gem. Pure white, button type. Ready November 15th. A free-growing, free-branching type that cuts quantity per square foot.

White Lillian Doty

We are often asked what Pompons are satisfactory out-of-doors. The following is a list selected from the varieties which we catalogue and from numerous others that we have had on trial. It applies to our conditions here in New England. Those Pompons which are not grown by us indoors and are classed with the hardy varieties are omitted here.

Single Chrysanthemums

NOVELTIES

Rooted Cuttings: $1.00 per doz., $10.00 per 100. 2¼-inch, $1.50 per doz., $12.00 per 100.

Elizabeth McDowell (A. N. Pierson, Inc.). This orange-bronze Single we believe to be the finest of all the single-flowered seedlings that we have raised. Not only is the color wonderfully fine in daylight, but the richness is greatly enhanced by artificial light. The plant is strong-growing and makes strong stems which carry the flowers well. These are well divided in the clusters. It packs nicely for a Single and we class it as the equal of any single-flowered variety in commerce. It is good for exhibition, for the high-class storeman and for the grower who retails.

Evelyn Bosworth (A. N. Pierson, Inc.). We must class this beautiful Novelty as a Single, but it is not a true Single, having six rows of petals. In habit of plant, it is strong-growing and the flower stems are strong and straight. The flower cluster is large, as the variety makes large sprays and carries buds well down the stem. These flower clusters are well divided and the individual flowers are not crowded. In color it may be classed as a bronze, but with a slight tint of salmon-pink. A very pleasing color and one that is always in demand. In flower November 5th to 15th.

Charter Oak (Foster). A clear, bright yellow Single variety which carries its flowers in large, strong-stemmed sprays, bearing from three to five flowers each. It makes a fair sized plant and will class as a good grower, but is not as heavy in foliage as its companions, Mrs. E. D. Godfrey, Margaret Waite and Miss Isabelle. It flowers late, coming into bloom during late November, and is the latest-flowering yellow Single variety we have grown or have seen. The form and character of the flower spray is ideal and the late-flowering characteristic greatly enhances the value of this to the grower. It would be good at any season and in December it is alone in its class.

Katherine Harley (A. N. Pierson, Inc.). The flower is a beautiful light bronze with the tips of the petals shading to a yellowish bronze. The combination gives a most pleasing shade of bronze. Very strong grower, has fine lustrous foliage and is in bloom by November 10th.

New Varieties

Rooted Cuttings: 75c per doz., $6.00 per 100. 2¼-inch, $1.25 per doz., $8.00 per 100.

Mrs. E. M. Horne. Light bronze-yellow shaded old-gold. The flowers, which are flat in form, are produced in good-sized, graceful sprays which bunch well. Growth vigorous and erect. Matures November 5th to 10th.

Molly Whitmore. Deep, golden-bronze, effectively suffused with terra cotta; distinct, deep yellow center. The well-formed flower carries three rays of petals which incurve slightly. This is a desirable trait where they are subject to shipping conditions or considerable handling. The growth being erect in character, this variety may be planted closer than the more branching kinds.

Peggy Bulkeley. We consider this variety one of the prettiest in our collection. The color is a soft yet luminous pink, changing as the flower matures to a delicate mauve-pink. The blooms are large, averaging four rays of petals which recurve gracefully from a golden-yellow center. The growth is vigorous and erect, producing large sprays which show the individual flowers to the best possible advantage. An ideal cut flower or pot plant variety. Matures November 10th to 15th.

New Anemone Chrysanthemums

Rooted Cuttings: 75c per doz., $6.00 per 100. 2¼-inch, $1.50 per doz., $8.00 per 100.

Pink Lady. A bright pink Anemone that has made an excellent showing. It is of medium size and true to type. Strong-stemmed. Flowers for Thanksgiving Day.

Pomona. An exquisite Anemone-flowered variety. Form perfect, several rows of ray florets of the purest white with a well-formed cushion which is white shading to straw at center. Excellent grown either to sprays or disbudded.

Volunteer. A very bright golden-yellow that will come into flower for Thanksgiving Day. Strong, stiff stems and needs little tying. It will produce a big cut of good market bloom.

Early-flowering Chrysanthemums for Outdoor Growing

The question of hardiness in the Chrysanthemum family is such that to call these hardy, as we have formerly done, is unfair, because so much depends upon the character of the soil and the drainage. Too much covering in Winter has ruined more plants than a cover of any kind has saved.

Some firms class these as Decorative varieties. Several in the list do well indoors, as among the Pompons and Singles there are those which do well outdoors. The varieties listed have larger blooms than the larger flowered Pompons, unless otherwise described.

NOVELTY

2¼-inch, 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $10.00 per 100.

Ruth Cumming (A. N. Pierson, Inc.). To those to whom the colors of Autumn appeal and who grow Chrysanthemums in the open, this novelty of our own raising will be welcome. We have been raising seedlings from Normandie, which is the finest example of the early-flowering outdoor type and this reddish bronze, decorative type seedling from Normandie has all the desirable characteristics of an outdoor variety. It has proven hardy in New England. It is dwarf and compact in growth. It suckers freely, making heavy clumps. It withstands the early frosts without injury. From October 15th to November 10th it has been a mass of color. It cuts and bunches nicely. Out-of-doors it is at home and indoors it will bloom early and give you a fine early bronze for the market.

General List

Rooted Cuttings: 60c per doz., $3.50 per 100, $30.00 per 1000.

2¼-inch, 75c per doz., $5.00 per 100, $45.00 per 1000.

Hamburg Late Pink Chrysanthemum

This photograph was taken December 28, 1919, and will give a good idea of what HAMBURG LATE PINK, looks like when grown to single stems and planted six inches each way.

Hamburg Late Pink is an improved late pink Maud Dean, having more petals and, if grown for late, will hardly ever show an open center.

The average grower of Chysanthemums must have varieties which are easy to handle, and from which he can cut as near 100% of perfect blooms as possible. Hamburg Late Pink has been grown for the last four years, and produces a very high proportion of good flowers. It is not an exhibition variety, but for late pink is one of the best for commercial purposes. It can be had in bloom the latter part of November, by taking an early bud, but some of the flowers will show open centers. By selecting late buds, after October 1, most of the flowers are cut during December, and would advise to select late buds, as the later buds will hardly ever show an open center, and some flowers can be had even in January.

Keeping qualities are excellent and where a graceful pink flower is wanted, Hamburg Late Pink cannot be surpassed.

Hamburg Late Pink will be disseminated in the Spring of 1920. Plants will be ready March 1, 1920, and all orders will be filled in rotation.

Get These Twin Winners Started Ringing Your Cash Register

Snow Queen

We call them "Twin Winners" because they came along about the same time and one sells as fast as the other.

Each is the result of a quarter century of Canna breeding by our Mr. Wintzer, who has developed more varieties of Cannas in commerce today than probably all other hybridizers together.

Mr. Wintzer says these two, each in its class, are the best he has achieved. One is a burning scarlet, the other a crystal white. Grown separately or near each other in contrast, they attract the most enthusiastic admiration of all the Cannas in our collection of over a hundred varieties.

To enable every florist to work up his own stock of these Twin Winners we are making a special offer, as below. Order early; it will cause us both pain if we have to send back our regrets and your money.

The President

This immense new flaming scarlet has come into wider use more quickly than any other Canna we ever introduced. It is an offspring of the famous Firebird. The President leads the red varieties in the quality and also the quantity of its bloom. The flowers are 7 inches across; the individual petals are firm and long standing, and do not burn, and the trusses stand up stiff on strong stems. The foliage is rich green and burnproof in the hottest weather. Height, 4 feet.

One, 50c; 10, $3; 25, $6; 100 for $20, net, f. o. b. West Grove.

Snow Queen

Unquestionably the queen of all white Cannas. Mr. Wintzer has been striving especially for a perfect white Canna for many years. He says Snow Queen far excels anything he has succeeded in getting heretofore. The individual flowers are 6 inches across, the petals 2½ inches broad. There is an occasional hint of pink, in faint dots, in the petals, but from a few feet away the effect is a crystal, dazzling white. The large bloom clusters are borne in the greatest abundance, held well above the luxuriant foliage. Height, 4 feet.

Price: 1, $1; 10, $6; 25, $12; $40.00 per 100.

Also, There's The Super-Six Set

While you're sending for the Snow Queen and President, include also a Super-Six set, 6 bulbs each of these six Super Lily-Cannas.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Owing to the very great increase in price of all materials used in packing of plants, we find it necessary to make a small charge for same, as follows, much lower than the percentage plan:

Full size cases.....$1.50 each
Three-quarter size cases..... 1.00 each
Small size cases..... .50 each

Would suggest taking plants in paper pots whenever possible. It is a big saving in both packing and express charges.

FIRST in Retail Delivery

DEPARTMENT store service is the laboratory of retail delivery. Not only is it the most searching test to which a delivery truck can be put, it is also the most sensitive recorder of results.

Department stores must have the best delivery equipment. For years they have been testing out all grades and makes in search of the most efficient truck. The weeding-out process is still on. But steadily and surely White Trucks are being standardized in the largest and most important retail fleets. In metropolitan centres they are the very backbone of department store delivery service. There are now 1639 White Trucks in the service of 224 Dry Goods and Department Stores.

White Truck performance in department store service is so widely and favorably known that it has become the standard for the whole retail delivery field. Comparative records everywhere show that White Trucks do the most work for the least money.

Smaller truck users can advantageously follow department store methods in purchasing and operating delivery equipment. There is no more reliable example.

Making Good With MILADY

Because Milady filled a popular want of the florist it has met with wonderful success. As a side line — something to make the dull hours profitable and the busy hours more so — it has proven itself a winner and no mistake. If you have not had your territory assigned we advise you to write or wire — we have already been compelled to refuse territories because they have been assigned to "earlier risers" — those who wired.

What started with a steady stream has developed into a torrent. Letters, telegrams came flying so thick that we had a hard time digging out. We were not so far ahead of the times as we had thought. The florist has been watching his drug store neighbor "clean up" on profitable money-makers and has been wondering why he, too, can not make side lines pay him a profit.

From Maine to California, from Ontario to Texas the inquiries came. Some of these are reproduced below.

What those who know say:

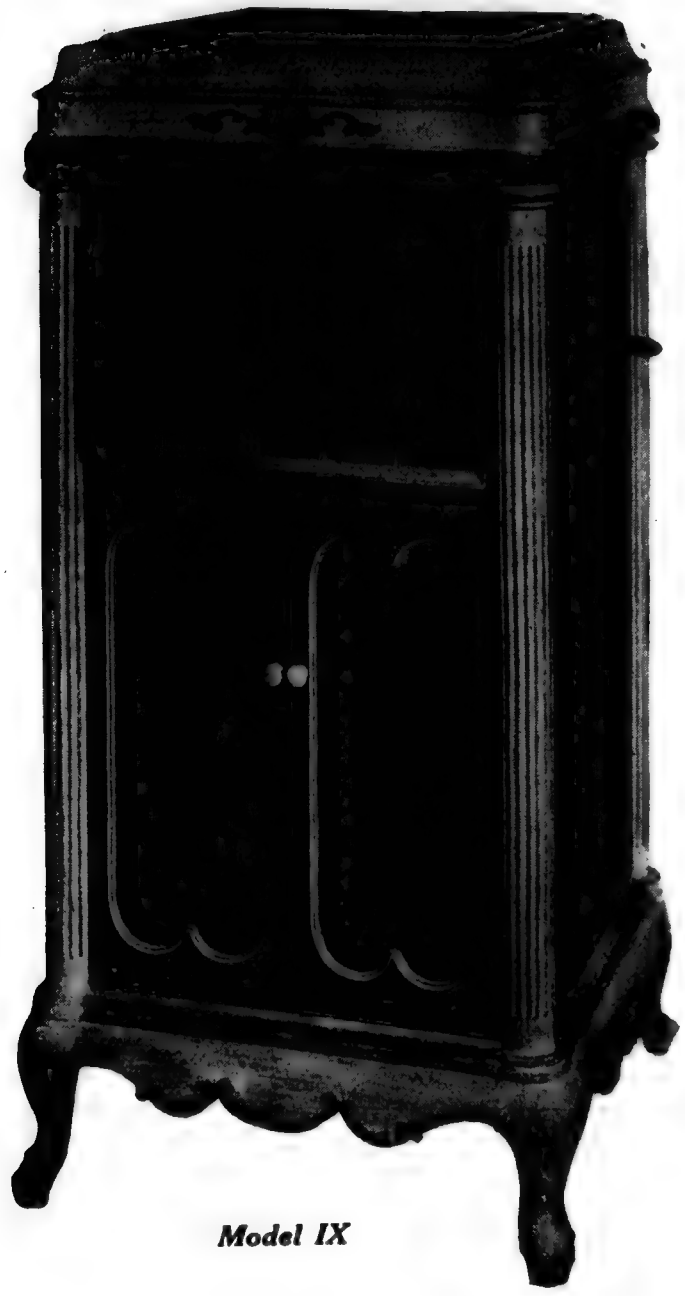
Logan, Ohio—"To be frank with you on this subject, we feel that this would make a hit with the business and would run right alongside of the cut flower business nicely. We entertain quite a number of times in our home and that would be a fine chance to demonstrate."

Concordia, Kansas—"We have been considering for some time carrying a talking machine as a side line but couldn't make up our minds just which one to go after until The Review came today. Now we know that Milady is the one we have been waiting for. Please give us full information and all details at the earliest date."

Niagara Falls, N. Y.—"Yours of the 21st at hand. Your offer of the Milady Phonograph we took up with your Mr. McCoy yesterday and placed an order with him for three of your phonographs."

Worcester, Mass.—"I am going to erect an up-to-date store in the spring. Feel as though music would complete the line, as we anticipate carrying a line of birds and goldfish."

Provo, Utah—"It is just the thing I have been trying to find to handle in my store, as I have a fine display space and at the present time have three different lines under consideration to place in my store. However, they do not seem to be the reliable phonograph that I feel we should handle to keep up the prestige of our store, and yours sounds like the real thing to me."



Petersburg, Va.—"I have been considering the addition of phonographs for over a year, but have been unable to get a line on anything really worth while not already being handled in this territory."

This certainly is convincing. Milady won't earn a cent for you until it is on your floor—that's when your profits start. A telegram now may save you disappointment. Why wait to answer a later advertisement? Wire today.

Two Popular Milady Models

Model IX

Music lovers judge a phonograph by two things — appearance and sound. By both tests Milady will prove perfect.

CABINET—The Milady Cabinet embodies everything that is beautiful—everything that is unique. The superior craftsmanship will appeal to even the most inexperienced buyer. Its exquisite finish reflects its finer qualities. Made of solid mahogany, oak or walnut, with no substitution of birch or gum even in the solid parts.

UNIVERSAL TONE ARM—The tone arm is the medium by which perfect reproduction of tones is carried over to the ear of the music lover. Through a process of elimination the Stratford universal tone arm and reproducer has been selected in keeping with our highstandard of quality. It will play any disc record produced.

STEPHENSON MOTOR—The compact power plant of the Milady combines the three essential features in the Stephenson precision-made motor; i. e., ample power, an even, steady delivery or drive and a smooth, noiseless action.

TONE MODULATOR—Through the tone modulator the volume of sound is always under your control. Gently or with great volume as you desire. A striking refinement over ordinary instruments is the ingenious tone modulator of the Milady phonograph.

AUTOMATIC STOP—When given the slightest pressure automatically releases spring and stops record when played.

UNIVERSAL TONE ARM—The famous Stratford universal tone arm and reproducer is used in the Milady. It will play any record on the market, giving the player the choice of his favorite stars.

TONE MODULATOR—The improved tone modulator of the Milady is one of striking refinement. It controls the volume of sound—producing an increased or suppressed volume as desired.

AUTOMATIC STOP—Another factor elevating the Milady is its automatic stop. Given the slightest pressure, it automatically releases a spring, bringing the record to a stop.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

DEVELOP DAY OF HEART HERALDS

Ready made to the advantage of the trade, St. Valentine's day offers returns in proportion to the efforts of florists to secure business for that occasion. Timely tips to the public through local newspapers will continue this holiday's business on the upgrade for florists.

FROM a day obsolete in the minds of those above the years of interest in frilled and tinseled paper messages and colored comics, St. Valentine's day has become an occasion of some importance. Whether this change is due chiefly to the oscillating whims of the public at large or whether it has been mainly the result of the florists' advertising campaigns in behalf of this day during the last half-dozen years or so, is a question not necessary to answer. Sufficient for the trade is the fact that interest in this day of heart interest has undergone something of a revival, for the best heralds of the heart are flowers.

Easy to Advertise.

That is the reason florists have found newspaper publicity for St. Valentine's day such a paying investment. The occasion is ready-made. Its observance is old; its tradition is widespread. No propaganda is needed to disseminate the knowledge of February 14. Whether a florist's customers are youthful or aged, they all can look back at their schooldays, when they made purchases for that day of frilly, lacy pieces of ingenuity housing sentimental verses, or Stresses Superiority of Flowers.

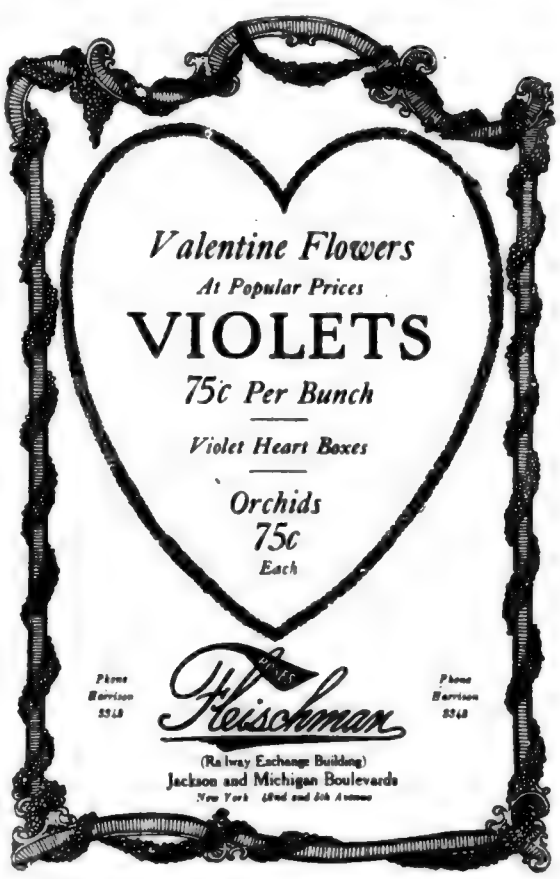
Admits No Argument.

of colored distortions of human physiognomy illustrating more or less humorous expressions in rhyme or otherwise. The recollections of those days, far off but not dim, remind each individual of the observance of February 14. And, if the individual has some one—and who has not?—as an object of his valentine's sentiment, all the florist need do is to remind him that flowers are the best carriers of his message. To which the public, too old to buy the schoolday papers, will readily agree. There is so little competition in the way of suitable carriers of the sentiments of this day that flowers are almost alone in possession of the day's trade.



Reminder Needed.

But the busy business man, deep in his daily work, thinks little of days to be observed. They must be brought to his attention. The jokesmiths say he forgets even his wedding anniversary and his wife's birthday. One charitably believes it is only forgetfulness on his part and, were he reminded, he would gallantly make observance of the occasion.

Something such as this is doubtless true, for since the florists of the country began to push St. Valentine's day, to use the newspapers to remind the busy business man of the holiday, the business done has grown immensely. The years that St. Valentine's day has been of much consequence in the florists' trade are not many in number. Back in 1913 The Review advocated extra effort in behalf of orders for this day. The success which resulted from the small expenditure, comparatively, of time, labor and money that year was so decided that the following year more of the trade bent their shoulders to the wheel. And now St. Valentine's orders roll merrily up into considerable figures. Each year has seen a noteworthy growth in the business, as more florists became better acquainted with printers' ink and the various other means of creating business for such an occasion.

Printers' Ink Preëminent.

For this holiday the ways in which the florist brings in orders for other special occasions are of value. Window displays aid greatly in presenting the idea of flowers for valentines to the public in a forcible way. The stamps and posters provided by the national publicity campaign do much also. And novel means are devised each year by enterprising retailers to stir the forgetful man's mind to the sentiments of the season. But probably the way most generally used is the daily newspapers. On this page are to be seen some excellent specimens of what have been used on a previous St. Valentine's day to achieve this purpose. The purpose of the advertising is so simple—just to urge one to send a valentine of flowers —that the advertisements prepared for St. Valentine's day are generally of a high order. The directness and simplicity are strong in appeal to those who read the daily papers, catching their eye briefly but forcibly.

FIRST CHICAGO EFFORT.

It is an appropriate time, now that Chicago is planning a coöperative advertising campaign that is expected to surpass all previous records for such work, to reproduce Chicago florists' first advertisement of a coöperative nature. This appeared in the local newspapers for St. Valentine's day just a year ago. It was inserted by the Chicago Retail Florists' Association, the organization which led the way to the present cooperative movement, of which so much is expected and which is making so rapid and enthusiastic progress.

Aside from its historic value, the advertisement is something to consider in its clear and direct message, the sort of publicity that is most effective in promoting holiday sales.

First Co-operative Advertisement of the Florists of Chicago.

LAMBERT'S LOCALS.

Grandy the Florist, of Norfolk, Va., who is one of the live wire members of the F. T. D., now has C. E. Tudor as manager of the store. Mr. Tudor was formerly with F. E. Campbell, of New York. The F. T. D. business of this store has been especially heavy this season.

W. W. Lee, of George's Flower Shop, Norfolk, is confined to his home by illness.

The A. R. Newton store, Norfolk, is now owned and operated by A. M. Newton. Mr. Newton's long experience in the trade assures him of much success.

Mrs. Lovey Blick has opened an attractive store in Portsmouth, Va. F. E. Armstead is associated with her.

The firm of Julia C. McCarron, florist, of Lynchburg, Va., is building two modern houses for carnations and roses, 34x200 feet. This firm has been quite successful with its growing and finds it necessary to build despite the high cost of material.

J. J. Fallon, Lynchburg, Va., is building a rose house 50x200 feet. Mr. Fallon has been confined to his bed for several days, but is somewhat improved.

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS FLORISTS.

Will Organize at Centralia.

While at the American Carnation Society's convention in Chicago, several of the florists of southern Illinois had a formal meeting, at which it was decided to call all the members of the trade in southern Illinois to meet in Centralia February 25 for the purpose of organizing. One of the objects will be to try to standardize retail prices. The high cost of coal, labor and supplies of all kinds used by the florists makes it imperative that something be done along this line.

This will be the most important meeting ever held for the florists of this section and all interested are asked to make an extra effort to attend.

Why should one florist sell 4-inch geraniums at 15 cents and his neighbor get 35 cents for no better plants? Or get $1.50 per dozen for carnations while his neighbor is selling them for $3, as has been the case this winter?

By getting together, it may be possible to standardize prices. Every grower and every retail florist in southern Illinois is invited. Those who will be able to meet Wednesday, February 25, 1920, at the city hall, Centralia, Ill., at 1:30 p. m., should notify J. W. Ross, Centralia, who is acting as secretary.

J. W. Ross, Sec'y.

INSECTICIDE SPRAYER.

Many inventions have been placed on the market for spraying insecticides, but one that "takes the cake" is in operation at the range of the Altimo Culture Co., at Canfield, O.

A small electric motor runs an air pump to keep a good pressure in a tank. From this tank a line of small pipe runs through the houses, with valves at handy points. A long piece of hose, such as is used for automobile pumps, gives the operator the means to reach all parts of the house to be sprayed.

Insecticides are placed in a homemade atomizer, which holds about three pints. Insecticides are diluted but little and a man can spray a large house remarkably fast, as he can work without a stop.

LILY OF THE VALLEY

HOW VALLEY CAME THROUGH.

An Affair Between Nations.

Making free with a familiar quotation, one may say that "there is a diplomacy that shapes our imports, near-German though they be." At least, that was the case in the incident related below by Sydney B. Wertheimer, of Wertheimer Bros., New York. One can see in it, too, not only another triumph of the perennial Yankee wit, but also a suggestion of the far-reaching interests of the florists' business. Mr. Wertheimer writes:

"Mrs. Wertheimer and I last week had the pleasure of dining with Dr. Maurice Egan, recently United States minister to Denmark, as his guests. Dr. Egan, who is completing a lecture tour, is well known as a versatile writer and, due to his wide knowledge of European diplomatic affairs, has rendered inestimable service to our government, particularly during the war. He related many interesting anecdotes relative to his experiences during three successive presidential administrations. Particularly amusing were his descriptions of the visits of Dr. Cook and of the Ford peace party to Copenhagen.

"In the course of the conversation, Dr. Egan related an incident of particular interest to florists:

Bluffing the British.

"During the British blockade, before our country had actually entered the war, a large New York importer of horticultural supplies frantically besieged the Department of State and sent repeated cablegrams requesting Dr. Egan to secure permission from the British authorities for the exportation from Denmark of an immense shipment of lily of the valley pips of Danish growth.

"Dr. Egan called upon the British minister, at Copenhagen, and requested permission to remove the embargo on the shipment. The British minister replied, 'My dear doctor, we cannot allow these plants to go through, because it will cause a great shortage in the Danish market and the Danes will replenish their supplies in Germany.' Dr. Egan replied that this was rather far-fetched and that he could not see wherein Germany would benefit by the exportation of this shipment, but his lordship was obdurate and Dr. Egan left without success.

"Upon receipt, the following day, of another cabled request from Washington, to endeavor to rush this shipment through, he again called upon the British minister and said to him, 'My dear lord, you do not seem to realize the importance of permitting this shipment of lily of the valley pips to go through. You may not be aware that in the United States it is the custom of men, at all our weddings, to wear a boutonniere of lily of the valley in their coat lapel and also the custom of brides to carry a bouquet of lily of the valley. You know President Wilson is about to be married and if this shipment does not go through it may seriously interfere with the success of the event.'

"'Well, Dr. Egan,' said the British minister, 'if you put it that way, I do not see how I can refuse to grant the permit.' And forthwith he gave his permission to have the embargo removed.

"Verily, a triumph of American humor over John Bull."

FORCING LILY OF THE VALLEY.

Will you kindly inform me how to grow valley? Please tell me in what temperature the pips should be started. Should they be covered and grown in the shade until they come up through the ground? How deep should the pips be planted? Could I grow good valley in a house where the night temperature is between 40 and 50 degrees and where the day temperature, when the sun is shining, might run up to 70 degrees? Whatever information you can give me will be much appreciated.

J. V. L.—N. Y.

It is doubtful whether the house mentioned would be warm enough for the satisfactory growing of lily of the valley, as a temperature of 65 to 68 degrees is considered desirable. Bottom heat also should be available, though sometimes dispensed with in the forcing of cold storage pips. The benches or boxes are filled with sand to a depth of five or six inches, and the pips are so planted that they just show above the sand. The sand is kept moist by watering it daily. Frequent syringing also is beneficial in the early stages of the crop, but care should be used to avoid wetting the bells after they show color.

For the first ten days or two weeks, or until the stalks have made a growth of three or four inches, the light is almost excluded by means of wooden shutters or some sort of framework. Then the light is gradually introduced, perhaps by replacing the wooden shutters with curtains of some such material as oiled cheesecloth, fastened on frames. During the last few days this shading or protection is entirely removed and full light is admitted, so as to give color to the leaves and substance to the flowers, but even then direct sunlight is detrimental.

SUGGESTIONS FOR FORCING.

Information is not generally exact among growers as to the flowering time of gladioli. Pink Beauty, Halley and Chicago White, if planted May 1, will bloom about July 15 to 20. America, Augusta, Panama and Niagara, planted May 1, will bloom about August 1, if entirely dormant bulbs are used. Bulbs kept in a cool temperature will not bloom so quickly as bulbs stored in a higher temperature. For forcing, bulbs should be stored in a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees for a month prior to planting; a temperature of 50 to 60 degrees will hasten their cycle of rest and give better results. To get the best results, they should not be planted before February 1.

Early varieties, like Pink Beauty, Halley, Chicago White, Myrtle, Prophetesse, Minnesota and Jessie, if planted early in the spring, will be ready to dig September 1. Such bulbs, if rested in the temperatures suggested, ought to be ready to plant January 10, although January 20 to 30 would be better.

Our primulinus hybrids were bred for early blooming. Many of them have been sold to eastern growers, especially those around Boston, and have thus far given quite profitable returns, largely because, being early, the bulbs were well rested, whereas America and late varieties are not; hence so much "blind stock." Some Boston growers have produced eighty to ninety per cent with America as against as high as 250 per cent with primulinus. However, only a select strain of primulinus should be used, as many of the smaller ones will not be so salable.

Bulbs for forcing should not be allowed to seed or "bloom out" in the open. A well matured America ought to give a spike of seventeen to twenty blooms; if allowed to seed or bloom out, it will give only ten to fifteen.

As a suggestion for Christmas forcing, I should advise placing the bulbs in storage not later than March or April. We have taken bulbs from a cool cellar and planted them in the field about August 1 and these bloomed about October 20. It will be well to experiment by planting a few hundred bulbs at various dates to ascertain the best time to plant for Christmas.

The breeder must breed earlier types to use for forcing. Not many bulbs that are dormant will bloom in less than sixty to seventy days, though a few varieties will bloom in fifty-eight to sixty-two days and we have some bulbs that take from forty-five to sixty days, but these are small-growing and small-flowered. Another cross will give us larger plants and flowers.

For the Christmas experiments, I should suggest that the experimenter try early primulinus varieties, Brenchleyensis, Myrtle and Minnesota. Augusta, rightly handled, is the best commercial white. C. Betscher.

GLADIOLI FOR CHRISTMAS.

I note that The Review of January 15 calls for accounts of experience from those who have grown gladioli for Christmas.

For many years I lived in California, to which I expect soon to return, and while there I grew many gladioli for Christmas. I planted most of them September 10 to 20, since they did not grow so fast during the weeks immediately preceding Christmas as they did during September and October. I grew them, of course, outside and in a heavy soil. They required ninety to 120 days. The varieties which I used were America, Francis King, Halley and Alice Carey. I never kept my bulbs in cold storage, but in a cool shed, with plenty of ventilation and as little light as possible. I also had other varieties, but planted them for my own pleasure, as the gladiolus is my favorite flower.

I have also grown them under glass and in lath houses. I got the best results when I planted them three and a half to four inches deep. I watered them about every third day. They were a little slow in coming up, but did better after they got started. I had no trouble keeping them upright without staking. W. J. Colcleugh.

ROSES AT RICHMOND.

When our Canadian brethren visited Richmond, Ind., recently to inspect the premier Canadian rose, Frank W. Dunlop, growing beside the American rose, Premier, their high opinion of the fine qualities of both was strengthened by what they saw at the range of the E. G. Hill Co. "And here are other gems of the rose family," observed E. G. Hill. "This result of a cross between Premier and Princess shows the golden throat of the latter with the habit and form of the former. Another is a sport from Premier, the color a silvery pink much resembling that fine old hybrid perpetual, Baroness Rothschild. This yellow seedling is so promising that it will be distributed next year. It is as yet unnamed. Miss Sarah Hill, who has the happy faculty of bestowing suitable names, is thinking up one to give this gem, considered superior to Golden Ophelia, which is a charming variety. In fact, Ophelia is productive of some fine sports, though Madame Butterfly promises to eclipse it in every way, even here at home showing superiority in growth, and the flower is superb. Whether it is grown in solid beds or on the bench, makes little difference." Columbia is in fine shape. Some beds 4 years old carry plants full of vigor and loaded with bud and bloom. The eastern varieties, Crusader and Pilgrim, are highly promising. Five flats contained seedlings which Mr. Hill states are the finest he has yet seen. His enthusiasm is evidence of determination not to rest content with present success. Earl Mann mentioned that the company was booked up on advance orders and making every endeavor to satisfy all comers. Stock was never larger or in better shape. By the way, his good wife had the misfortune to break a leg, through slipping on the ice while trying to save one of the children.

"Take a look over the top," observed Joseph H. Hill, of the Joseph H. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., "and say candidly if you ever saw a finer lot of roses." Admittedly, no! Such Premier could be equaled or surpassed only under conditions more favorable, if that were possible. Other fine roses were Butterfly, Ophelia, Columbia and a sport of the last named, having the color of Hoosier Beauty. Another gem is a cross, Ophelia x Sunburst, by name Golden Rule, indicative of the custom of the establishment, which has grown in three years to three times its original size. There are 500,000 rose plants ready to send out, with a prospect of taxing the productive qualities of the three big ranges as never before. One cannot but be convinced that the rose is in the ascendency and that the carnation specialists must hustle if they desire to keep up in the race.

Fred H. Lemon & Co. have a fine rose in White Premier, from which big things are expected. It has met every requirement as a commercial variety. A really good white is a desideratum. The retail store is being decorated and fixed up for spring business. Much funeral work is handled. A blanket, composed of Madame Butterfly roses, asparagus and adiantum, was admitted to be the choicest floral piece that they had ever made up. W. M.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Rose Registration.

The following registrations of varieties of roses have been approved by the registration committee of the American Rose Society. Unless objections are received in the secretary's office within three weeks of the publication of this notice, the registration will become permanent.

From George C. Thomas, Jr., Philadelphia:

From George C. Thomas, Jr., Philadelphia:

Name, Bloomfield Progress; class, hybrid tea; parentage, Mary, Countess of Ilchester x General MacArthur. Description — A strong-growing, bushy plant, with red double flowers of strong fragrance; petalage, over fifty; freedom of bloom and lasting quality, excellent. This rose is similar to General MacArthur, but differs in habit, size and form of flower, having superior qualities, as it holds the center better and is larger than General MacArthur in hot weather.

From George C. Thomas, Jr., Philadelphia:

Name, Bloomfield Abundance; class, hybrid Wichuraiana; parentage, Sylvia x Dorothy Page Roberts. Description—A bushy plant three to six feet in height, with dark green, glossy foliage; not susceptible to mildew; flowers, salmon pink, double, produced singly and in sprays. This rose is similar to Cecile Brunner, but is hardier and of a larger bloom.

From George C. Thomas, Jr., Philadelphia:

Name, Bloomfield Perpetual; class, hybrid perpetual; parentage, Iceberg x Frau Karl Druschki. Description—Habit of growth, bushy, three to five feet in height, with good green foliage; flowers, white, single, resembling Cherokee; a free-flowering variety, with good keeping qualities. The rose is similar to the Cherokee in flower, but differs in having a bushy growth, which is hardy in Philadelphia, and blooms until November.

DUMSER'S DATA.

W. O. Seidel, Erie, Pa., is well pleased with his new location, on Eighteenth street, which is more centrally located than his former location, on Buffalo road.

Mrs. Schluraff, Erie, Pa., since recent improvements at the greenhouses, is in better position than ever to produce a good part of her store requirements, especially in high-grade pot plants.

Hody & Tulea, Lorain, O., have solved the question of store rent and leases by building their own store, exclusively for their flower trade. They have a large display front, finished in glazed brick, and an ample-sized workroom in the rear.

Frank G. Carek, Lorain, O., although having a well stocked range of glass, is unable to produce enough to supply his needs and finds it hard to secure enough cut flowers to keep up a good display.

Merkel & Sons, Mentor, O., suffered severely from the Florida fern caterpillar several months ago, but find by spraying regularly with Nico-fume they are able to clean them all out. Their two houses of Easter pot roses are coming on in fine shape.

Carl Hagenburger, West Mentor, O., has 50,000 freesias in pans coming on in fine crop. All visitors at this place marvel at the enormous production per square foot that Mr. Hagenburger obtains. He does not believe in empty bench space at any time of the year.

L. A. Eaton & Sons, Conneaut, O., grow some geraniums for wholesale. Recently when they inserted an advertisement in The Review their first order called for 5,000 and they have since returned checks for over $1,000 worth more. D. W. D.

Columbus, O.—The Acme Floral Co., of which W. C. Holstein is manager, opened a new store February 1.

Ferns

FLORIDA FERN CATERPILLAR.

Hand-Picking Too Slow.

An article on the Florida fern caterpillar in The Review of December 4 mentions several methods for disposing of this pest in accordance with the investigations of the experts of the Department of Agriculture. The method considered most effective for the average grower by these experts is the hand-picking of the caterpillars, a process that may be satisfactory to a grower having but a small number of plants to handle, but one that would hardly fill the bill where these plants are grown in quantity.

The use of arsenate of lead as a spray has been suggested, but the disfigurement of the plants by the use of this muddy solution would make them unsalable.

Poison with Pyrethrum Powder.

There is, however, a method of poisoning the Florida fern caterpillar that has been advised by the writer in former issues of The Review and for which he is indebted to the careful investigations and practical advice of Harry B. Weiss, of the New Jersey experiment station. This consists of the application of pyrethrum powder with a bellows at regular intervals throughout the months in which this pest is active. The regular use of this powder will result in the extermination of the caterpillars as they hatch out and any surplus powder on the foliage may be readily washed off with the hose.

A Successful Remedy.

In The Review for December 18, Homer L. Wiegand refers to the pyrethrum treatment as having proved entirely satisfactory in eradicating the fern caterpillar from his stock and mentions the fact that J. D. Eisele, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., recommended this treatment to him.

Mention has been made of the use of pyrethrum in a spray with soap solution. The bellows method is, however, even more satisfactory, as pyrethrum powder seems to be as much of a specific for the fern caterpillar as powdered hellebore is for the currant worm.

The fighting of this pest with pyrethrum is not a new idea, since it has been practiced for at least five years.

Parasitic Red-Tailed Fly.

Attention may also be called to nature's counterbalance for the Florida fern caterpillar, namely, the red-tailed fly, Welthemia quadripustulata, which is a parasite on the fern caterpillar, destroying it in large numbers.

The red-tailed fly lays its eggs on the skin of the caterpillar and these eggs hatch out in two days; the larva immediately bores into the body of the caterpillar and feeds upon the fatty tissues of the latter, with the result that the caterpillar soon loses all interest in ferns. It would seem that the introduction of this parasitic fly in the south would be of great assistance in combating the caterpillar, but, if that is not practical, then the growers of that region from which the fern caterpillar was first distributed should at least try the regular application of pyrethrum.

For the technical data relative to the welthemia, the writer is glad to acknowledge his indebtedness to William O. Ellis, of the Bureau of Entomology.

Wm. H. Taplin.

KILLING FERN CATERPILLARS.

The Review of December 4 gives a long article on the Florida fern caterpillar and the ways of fighting it. If any grower will give his ferns a strong spraying of nicotine, he need not lose any sleep. If he does not get all the caterpillars the first time, he should give them another dose the next day and, if necessary, a third dose the day after that. Three sprayings will generally clean them out for the season. The nicotine kills every caterpillar it touches, as I have watched them curl up; in less than ten seconds they were stiff. For eighteeen years I have used this remedy and nothing else.

SCALE ON BOSTON FERNS.

Will you kindly inform us as to the best method of treating Boston ferns which are infested with scale? Can the scale be exterminated by the use of nicotine and whale-oil soap, or either of these separately, without injuring the ferns? If so, please give us the formula. W. S.—Utah.

It is not an easy matter to clean the Boston ferns of scale, if the plants are badly affected, but continued treatment with whale-oil soap and Black Leaf 40 will give results. Make the solution in the proportion of half an ounce of the soap and half an ounce of the nicotine to one gallon of water. Dip the plants in the mixture; then lay them down on the bench and cover them with paper or muslin to protect the fronds from the sun for at least twelve hours.

CORN BORER EDICT

QUESTION ILLINOIS EMBARGO.

New Englanders Ask Exceptions.

Members of the trade are questioning the need and application of the restrictions in the recent proclamation by Governor Lowden, of Illinois, excluding shipments of certain stock from New York and the New England states.

The proclamation, which appeared in full on page 108 of The Review for January 15, prohibited the importation into Illinois after January 20, 1920, of "corn, broom corn, celery, dahlias, chrysanthemums, gladioli and geraniums," grown in New England and New York, except seed corn under certain conditions. S. E. Spencer, of Woburn, Mass., who writes that no corn borers are found in the corms of gladioli, the roots of chrysanthemums or the tubers of dahlias, and that the local Massachusetts embargo does not include them, interprets the Illinois restriction as applying only to the cut blooms of the flowers named in the proclamation. But P. A. Glenn, chief inspector of the division of plant industry in the Illinois department of agriculture, writes, in response to The Review's inquiry, that "the governor's proclamation refers to all parts of dahlias, gladioli, chrysanthemums and geraniums, except the seeds."

F. H. B. More Liberal Than State.

So that, just when reports from the federal Department of Agriculture and from other sources, as summarized in The Review for January 22, indicate that the danger from the European corn borer is much less than had been supposed, the Illinois restriction is shown to be exceedingly tight. Mr. Spencer also calls attention to the fact that dry gladiolus bulbs of any size were shown to be safe for shipment to the satisfaction of the Federal Horticultural Board and were not included in the embargo placed upon the New England section.

If the F. H. B. can be convinced, surely one need not be discouraged from approaching state boards. A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn., addressed the following letter January 28 to the entomologist of the Illinois state experiment station, at Urbana:

We have received a copy of the proclamation issued by Governor Lowden under date of January 2, 1920, stating that it will be unlawful on and after January 20 to import into the state of Illinois chrysanthemums and a number of other items.

We believe that the Illinois experiment station has made a mistake in declaring this quarantine, and we believe that a quarantine on outdoor chrysanthemums would, perhaps, be justified, although we have little or no knowledge of the corn borer. We are given to understand that it does not exist in the state of Connecticut. We do not know of an authentic case of corn borer within 100 miles of us. We do not grow and ship field-grown clumps and we know that the majority of the New England nurseries make a business of shipping goods of that character for outside use.

We have had a fight with chrysanthemum gall midge, but our establishment is free from it and has been for the last fourteen months. But we have continued to use cyanide gas and are using cyanide regularly. We cannot see any danger to the corn crops of Illinois and the west from chrysanthemum cuttings from sand, that are grown entirely in a greenhouse. We believe that your quarantine should be modified to allow cuttings which are greenhouse-grown to enter the state upon the filing with you of a certificate to the effect that our township, our greenhouses and our own immediate locality are not infested with the European corn borer.

Modifications may be made in the Illinois embargo under the influence of trade representations, although no rulings have yet been made as to exceptions by the state authorities.

TATE'S TIPS

NEXT WINTER'S SUCCESS.

Depends Upon Efforts Now.

The greater production of flowers for next winter will, of course, require the investment of more capital and will take time before we begin to reap returns. Flowers are scarcer today than I have ever known them to be before. The entire day's work is done in the wholesale market in a few hours in the morning; in fact, the major part of the stock is sold before it comes to the market and it is then simply a case of filling the orders that have been taken subject to the stock being procurable. After that, the day's rush is over.

There is never a day that someone does not have to be disappointed, and no relief seems to be in sight. The demand for stock of good quality still holds far above the supply. Now, in any line of business where orders have to be turned down every day for want of stock to fill them, is there anything to do but bend every effort to get more stock? I admit that the production of flowers, as I have been frequently reminded, is entirely different from most other lines of business; for instance, a manufacturer need only get new machinery, which can often be had from stock, and if the raw material is to be had, can go on manufacturing his article, while the florist has to plant his crops and then wait for nature, with his assistance, to develop them. That is just this point I want to emphasize.

Plan Now for the Record Crop.

We are now in February; in about three months the florist will be preparing to plant his outdoor crops. The important question to settle right now is: Are you going to give these crops the proper study and consideration, or are you going to plant the same old stock you have been in the habit of growing year after year? Here is the opportunity of increasing production without the investment of any great amount of capital. We have only to remember that a few months back those who had stock of good quality had no trouble in disposing of it at handsome returns, while those whose stock was inferior often got no returns at all for it. History is going to repeat itself this summer, and the florist who sees his neighbor reaping the reward of his labor and forethought, while he is still in the same old rut, will have no one to blame but himself. There is still ample time to prepare. Everyone knows what line of stock he can handle best; only see that what you do produce is the best quality of its kind.

Grow the Best in Every Bench.

The florist this summer should make every available inch of ground that he has give a good account of itself; not one bench in the houses should lie idle. If you could have heard as often as I did last summer, "Good stock is scarce," I feel that everyone would produce nothing but the best. I have heard the above phrase quoted when a layman would have thought that the market was glutted, and yet anyone who understood what good stock was would not blame the retailer for not handling what was offered.

Grow any crop you are successful with. It may be gladioli; it will pay you to discard those old varieties that you have been growing, in many cases ever since you have been in business. Make up your mind to grow nothing but the best named varieties, such as Peace, America, Schwaben and Panama. They will pay well for the time and trouble you may devote to them. Or it may be asters, such as Queen of the Market.

Confide in Your Commission Man.

Go to your commission man and talk it over with him. He will be only too glad to advise you as to the best colors to grow. I read a short time ago in the Country Gentleman an article, the gist of which was that it is better for the business man to be advised by his banker than by his attorney. There is no better man to advise the grower than the man who sells his product. He is, in a way, just as much interested as you are yourself; the larger returns he makes to you, the larger his own returns are. He is in position to know what stock moves best, what varieties are the best to handle and what colors are the most sought. It will pay any grower to make a confidant of his commission man; he is in position to give you points on production throughout the year.

There is just one more point I wish to call to growers' attention. In my investigation of the market last summer, the scarcest period of the season was from June 15 to August 1. Any crop you can have in bloom at that time will be as good as money in the bank. There is a big summer ahead; it is up to the grower what the harvest shall be.

SOWING GYPSOPHILA.

What is the best way to grow gypsophila? Can it be grown on benches inside? If grown outside, should the seed be sown in flats and transplanted in rows outside, or should the seed be planted outside in rows? When is the best time to sow the seed?

M. G.—Ill.

Gypsophila elegans does well under glass. Sow the seeds in shallow flats and, when large enough to handle, either transplant into benches three inches apart each way or, better still, use flats containing four inches of rather light but rich soil and prick off the seedlings two inches apart each way. Stand these on shelves in a temperature of 50 to 54 degrees at night and they will grow and flower splendidly. In order to have a succession of bloom, sow the seeds once a fortnight. For culture in the open there is no great advantage in transplanting seedlings. Better sow the seeds thinly in shallow drills, covering lightly. Sowings may be made in your latitude from May 1 until July 1.

ONE MORE

IRIS SOCIETY FORMED.

At least seventy persons attended an enthusiastic meeting for the organization of the American Iris Society at the New York Botanical Garden January 29, 1920, and the following officers were elected to serve until the annual meeting in the spring: President, J. C. Wister, Philadelphia; vice-president, William A. Peterson, Chicago; treasurer, Frank H. Presby; secretary, R. S. Sturtevant, Wellesley Farms, Mass.; regional vice-presidents, S. B. Mitchell, of California; Dr. F. E. Bennett, of Ontario; T. A. Kenning, of Minneapolis, Minn.; Mrs. Samuel H. Taft, of Cincinnati, O.; B. Y. Morrison, of Washington, D. C., and Floyd Bralliar, of Nashville, Tenn. On the board of directors are also Dr. H. A. Gleason, B. H. Farr, Wyomissing, Pa.; Edwin C. Shaw, Harry A. Norton, M. J. Hendrickson and James Boyd.

There are about 200 charter members representing iris interests from California to England, from Canada to the south, and it is hoped that this will be but the nucleus of a far larger association. A check list of over 1,000 varieties of the bearded iris has already been compiled and standards for collection of the nonbulbous species will be started at the New York Botanical Garden this spring; an opportunity for similar trial of the bulbous iris would be of great advantage. The English, Spanish and Dutch iris are those which are usually considered florists' flowers and, with the enforcement of Quarantine 37, information as to their cultural needs and as to the opportunities for growing them commercially within the United States is much needed. Other species of iris may also be forced and if better known would be more largely used. Garden visitors often carry home bouquets of iris and they would make an equal appeal in a florist's window. It is hoped that interested parties will send notice of their experience in handling and selling the iris in its various forms. It is only by coördinating the notes of many that we can offer accurate information to all.

The dues for active membership are $3 a year. There will be monthly notes on iris and information and notes on any phase of the subject will be welcomed from all. Inquiries and correspondence will receive prompt attention from the secretary, R. S. Sturtevant, Wellesley Farms, 95, Mass.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

PERENNIALS FOR WINDOWS.

Florists everywhere are seeking new and odd ways to give their window displays that touch of simplicity so much required to attract attention. Why not use a few perennials?

Something new, odd and attractive can be devised for the window with the help of these old-fashioned flowers. Some of the early-flowering perennials force quite easily. Mertensia virginica, Primula veris and Euphorbia epithymoides will force without any trouble in a house of 60 to 65 degrees. With the primula and euphorbia, one should, however, be careful to use only well rooted and strong clumps or strong pot-grown plants potted not earlier than September.

Euphorbia epithymoides should be forced and sold along with our other Easter-flowering plants. Its bloom is a beautiful chrome yellow, with hardy and bright foliage that will follow along well to the top of each stem. This plant was displayed in the Grand Central Palace, New York city, among a few rocks at the entrance of a rock garden and daily held the attention of many visitors, who inquired its name and where it could be obtained.

CALL FOR ARBITRATION.

Grow the stock and get the price; don't get the price and deliver poor stock. If I wish any plants, I confer with myself and The Review and then enclose check with my order, except to firms where my credit is known. It is then up to the sellers and I believe that some of them take their own sweet time.

I bought some rooted cuttings of geraniums last August. Delivery was made in November and, believe me, I had to use a pair of tweezers to hold them while potting. Actually they were not over one inch long, at $17.50 per thousand; they are still in 2-inch pots. At the same time I ordered and received geraniums from California, cuttings three inches to six inches long and 100 per cent O. K. Most of these are now fine plants in 5-inch pots.

After over two months' wait, I received my order of 300 pelargoniums and I believe I shall have hardly seventy-five living plants. They were packed well and arrived safely, but if the plants left the seller in the same condition as they reached the buyer, it seems to me like getting money under false pretenses.

Some firms say they will book your orders for so-and-so, delivery three to five months later, if you send one-third cash. It is always cash. Why should your money be working for someone else? The seller should get the order when stock is ready; notify buyer to send cash for it and then fill the order as advertised.

Now the time is at hand when a person wants the stock. The reports all over this country indicate the best trade up to date, plenty of money and more buyers. If there were an agreement among all the florists to have certain men or firms (several in each state), where a person could send a sample of the shipment, for approval or disapproval, all to abide by their decision, then buyers would have greater confidence and order more freely.

CEMENT COATING FOR BENCHES.

I was interested in the letter of L. E. S. in The Review of January 15 regarding the coating of benches with cement. My grandfather, E. B. Lewis, who propagated the Niagara grape from its early days, had all his benches covered with about half an inch of cement. I have also used it myself.

It should be mixed thin enough so that it can be spread evenly with a trowel. Before it sets hard, punch a few holes in it where the cracks in the boards come, in order to provide for drainage.

I think it will double the life of the benches, but it cannot be used on benches where the soil is wheeled in, as the coating is so thin that it will all crack. It is about thirty-five years since I saw it used. Fred G. Lewis.

CANDYTUFT AND FEVERFEW.

Can you give me any information about the proper time to sow seed of candytuft and feverfew? Also, can you tell me the best method of growing the plants to get a crop of flowers for Memorial day? H. F. C.—Mass.

Candytuft for flowering at Memorial day should be sown at once. Buy the mammoth spiral or as good a strain of seed as possible, in order to secure large, handsome spikes. Pot off the seedlings in 2¼-inch pots before planting out in beds or benches. Any good soil which will suit roses, mums or carnations will suit candytuft, and a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night is needed. Higher temperatures can be given as the season advances if the plants seem at all late, it being best to shade the glass a little when doing this extra pushing. Place the plants 10x10 or 9x12 inches apart, in order to give them the needed space for development.

Feverfew from seed is undesirable, as so large a proportion will come single and only doubles have any market value. I would suggest buying rooted cuttings or plants from small pots and planting them in benches before March 1. Grow feverfew moderately cool; 45 degrees at night is ample. A soil similar to that used for candytuft will be found ideal.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

"Coöperation in the selling of Dutch bulbs has completely revolutionized the business," observed R. H. Preenen, of J. Schilpzand & Sons, Hillegom, Holland. "True, we are as eager for the American trade as ever we were, but, having pooled our interests, we feel much more independent and until the purchaser gets into a similar boat it will not be so easy sailing as formerly, for, while he acts only as an individual, we act collectively and consequently have the stronger pull. It is in the interests of every grower to produce bulbs of as high quality as possible and, judging from all reports, our customers may look for as good a crop as last year. The summer season will be a deciding factor."

O. E. Steinkamp, of Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind., expressed the opinion that Ruth Baur would prove as good in every way to the continentals as it was at home. Some 6,000 rooted cuttings have been prepared for distribution in care of C. Engelmann, of Saffron Walden, England, who will undertake this benevolent task. "While Ruth Baur should yield a golden harvest to everyone who tries it, we have another carnation which we believe will match it in popularity. It is the result of a cross between Matchless and White Wonder and possesses the habit of the former and a bloom resembling the latter. We have named it Harvester and propose to send it out next year, realizing that, in these times especially, one cannot afford to hide such a find as we believe this is."

Homer Wiegand, of A. Wiegand's Sons Co., Indianapolis, commented upon the great popularity of the floral basket at funerals and attributes it to the advanced development of taste. It is highly welcome at this time of scarcity, when every bloom is made to show up to advantage. Adiantum is freely used; it gives a graceful finish and is worth the difference in cost. George Wiegand is making a brief sojourn in California and writes enthusiastically concerning the climate, other conditions being somewhat similar to those in the east. "If we had the time," remarked Homer Wiegand, "we might ship out our family of alligators, which have been a big attraction; in fact, our patrons seem as much interested in them as when we first received them. They are really the only peaceful and contented subjects in the establishment."

H. W. Rieman's Sons, of Indianapolis, are the fortunate owners of a begonia which possesses the combined qualities of Vernon, Erfordii and Lorraine. It comes in color from deep red to white, blooms almost the whole year around, is propagated either from seed or from cuttings, and will bear cutting back, making a bushy growth. Plants cut back at this time, for instance, will be in fine shape for Mothers' day sales, while the cuttings may be put in sand.

Warren G. Matthews, of Dayton, O., observed as he hung up the receiver, "The most difficult problem today is to please the phone patron who has been in the habit of placing an order for a 75-cent bouquet for her church. With splits selling at 15 cents and roses in proportion, we try to substitute a flowering plant. As to designs, how we hate to work in the artificial with the natural!" A shortage of ferns leads to the use of southern smilax as a substitute for groundwork; it answers well. Mr. Matthews' son, Walter, has left the store to accept a position in the courthouse, another defection in the trade.

Amid the silence of the adjoining cemetery, S. J. Stephens & Son, Columbus, O., are working up a large plant stock in anticipation of the largest bedding trade on record. W. J. Stephens returned from the service benefited in every way from the experience in Europe. W. M.

FOR THE BIG DAY

CINERARIAS FOR EASTER.

When should cinerarias have their last shift to have them in bloom for Easter? They are now in 4-inch pots and need shifting. I have been keeping them in a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. I cannot keep them any colder, as I have other plants in the house, such as peas and stock plants of geraniums. H. H. S.—Md.

Cinerarias will need quite cold culture to hold them back until Easter. If you had a really cold house, especially one with a north aspect, this would be easier. I would suggest that you keep your cinerarias in the coldest part of the house. They will soon need some shade, which the other plants will not require. If you have a close frame or pit, which can be kept frost-proof, there is no good reason why you cannot transfer your cinerarias there after March 1. They will do without fire heat after that date, but will need protection on cold nights and more careful watering. C. W.

LILIUM GIGANTEUM.

I have received my giganteum lily bulbs and have put them in flats or boxes six inches deep. How should they be treated from now on? I have three warm houses in which I can keep the temperature at 60 degrees during zero weather, also one cold house, which can be kept above freezing. Shall I keep the boxes outside for a few weeks and then bring them into the cold house and later into the warmer house? Can I have these bulbs in bloom at Easter? They are in rich soil, with loam and manure. B. G. C.—W. Va.

If you are planning to grow your lilies in boxes for Easter, I should strongly advise against it, as you will get vastly better results from pot culture. Pot singly in 6-inch pots, or, if the bulbs are small, 5-inch pots will answer. Use a good loam, but leave out manure or fertilizer. Old mum soil will do quite well. After potting, place them below the benches in your warm house or stand them on the benches several pots deep and cover them with straw or hay to prevent their drying out. There is no need to water them, if the loam is fairly moist. Giganteums need all the heat you can give them from start to finish. Many are ruined by being placed in a cold house at the start and, in addition, by being kept too moist. Run the plants on the dry side until the pots are nicely filled with roots; then apply water more freely. Place the plants on benches as soon as they are nicely started. Fumigate occasionally to keep down green aphis, spray on clear, warm days and remember that heat is needed right along to flower them for Easter, which this year comes April 4. C. W.

HYDRANGEAS FOR EASTER.

Will my Hydrangea Radiant come in for Easter? I planted them December 27 and grew them under the bench until started and then I put them on the bench in a temperature of 60 degrees. I have been giving them liquid manure once a week, but they are growing slowly. They have their fourth leaves on now. H. H. S.—Md.

The hydrangeas in a night temperature of 60 degrees should flower for Easter. Give them all possible light and sun. Liquid manure would be more harmful than beneficial unless the pots are well filled with roots. This could hardly be possible if you potted them as recently as December 27. Wait until the sides of the pots have an abundance of active roots and then feed regularly, especially while the flower heads are developing. C. W.

OTAKSA FOR EASTER.

I have a lot of otaksa hydrangeas which I brought into the greenhouse before the frost. November 1 they were placed under a bench in a temperature of 40 degrees at night and 50 degrees during the day. The leaves are nearly all dried up, but the tips are still green. I have watered them just enough to keep them alive. Kindly advise me what treatment I should give them. When should they be benched in a house of 50 degrees at night and 65 degrees during the day to have them in bloom for Easter, also for Memorial day?

G. S. F.—Pa.

The French hydrangeas can be forced into bloom for an early Easter, such as will come April 4, but otaksa needs a longer season and does not stand forcing as well as the newer French type. Furthermore, the French varieties come in a variety of pleasing colors and are, therefore, much preferred at Easter. I should not advise you to force your plants for Easter, but rather hold them back for Memorial day. At that time there is always an excellent call for otaksa. For Memorial day, keep your plants cool and as near dormant as you can until March 1; then place them in a temperature of 50 degrees at night and they will flower on time. If, however, you are extremely anxious to flower some of them for Easter, place them in a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees now. When growth is well started run them 5 degrees warmer, and later, as flower heads start to show, they can have 60 degrees at night until the flowers show color. Then keep them somewhat cooler. Water them freely and feed with liquid manure once a week as soon as the pots are well filled with roots. C. W.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market is still suffering from a shortage in the supply of cut flowers, without any prospect of immediate relief. This condition, naturally, is keeping prices on a high plane. The influenza epidemic does not seem to have increased the demand to any great extent.

Roses seem to be scarce; in fact, so limited is the supply that much stock is sold before arrival. All varieties are affected, particularly the short grades. American Beauty is bringing holiday prices, the best in the special grades selling for $1.25 each. The best grades of hybrid teas bring 25 to 75 cents each, the latter for the Scott Key variety. About 50 cents each is asked for Columbia, Premier and Hadley.

The supply of carnations is short for this time of year. A small supply of Laddie moves quickly at 25 cents each. Mrs. C. W. Ward and Benora are bringing 20 cents for the best flowers, with ordinary varieties at 15 cents, and inferior ones, in small quantities, 12 cents.

Cattleyas are fairly plentiful, but, with the shortage in other staples, prices continue high; $9 per dozen is asked for the best, while the lower grades are sold for $3. Few spray orchids are arriving, but there is a good supply of cypripediums.

Lilies of the valley are plentiful, but sales drag considerably at $5 to $15 per hundred sprays. Easter lilies are scarce. There is a moderate supply of gardenias.

There is a good supply of bulbous flowers, but not nearly so many as might be expected at the opening of February. Tulips are bringing 75 cents to $2 per bunch; Paper Whites, $1 to $1.25 per bunch, and daffodils, $1.50 to $2 per bunch. Freesias are arriving and move well.

Callas are in good demand, with the best bringing as high as $7.50. There are a few hyacinths on the market and also a small supply of iris. Acacias bring $3 to $5 per bunch and are in good supply.

There is a fair supply of herbaceous flowers, including snapdragons, bouvardias and calendulas. Sweet peas are plentiful, but the quality is not good, short-stemmed flowers being much in evidence. Pansies, mignonette, wallflowers, myosotis and daisies are in good supply and bring good prices.

Various Notes.

John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., came back from the meeting of the executive board at Cleveland suffering from a heavy cold and was confined to his room for a few days, but is now at his desk again.

A. M. Henshaw, president of the New York Florists' Club, who was taken ill while in Pittsburgh on his way home from the S. A. F. directors' meeting, is reported to be well enough to return to his home this week.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society held its annual dinner at the Morrison House, Morristown, on the evening of January 28.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held at the club's rooms in the Engineering Societies' building, 25 West Thirty-ninth street, Monday evening, February 9. Business of importance will be transacted at this meeting and reports are expected from the dinner and flower show committees. As it is to be carnation night, the exhibition committee wishes carnation growers to send exhibits of either new or standard varieties. They should be sent prepaid to the exhibition committee, 127 West Twenty-eighth street.

Wholesale Florists is the name of an organization incorporated last week with a capital of $50,000. This firm is taking over coöperative quarters in the old Greenhut building, at Sixth avenue and Eighteenth street. A. Slinn, R. J. Irwin and M. C. Ford were named as incorporators. H. E. Froment is president; A. M. Henshaw, secretary, and E. C. Horan, treasurer. The corporation also includes the following, who will move to the new quarters when they are ready for occupation: M. C. Ford, J. J. Coan, R. J. Irwin, Joseph S. Fenrich, S. Gilbert, Clarence Slinn, I. Goldstein, J. K. Allen, P. J. Smith and Dolansky & McDonald.

Alfred Futterman, of Futterman Bros., 122 West Twenty-eighth street, is laid up with an attack of double pneumonia. J. H. P.

Joseph Trepel probably operates the largest chain of flower stores in the United States, if not in the world, although they are all located in the city of Brooklyn. From a small beginning in 1888, the business has grown so that two recent additions to the chain bring the number of stores to eleven. Headquarters still is in the store at Lewis avenue and Hancock street.

The East Coast Hothouse Operators, Inc., whose $800,000 contract with the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co. was recorded in these columns last week, filed incorporation papers recently, with a capitalization of $1,500,000. M. M. Lucey, M. Butler and L. S. Dorsey, all of Wilmington, Del., are the incorporators published.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Conditions were better last week. Despite the fact that there was but little sunshine, the supply of stock showed an increase. There has been a large demand for funeral flowers, and some of the local florists have resorted to artificial stock. The wholesalers find it hard to divide the supply evenly among the trade, because there is seldom enough stock to go around. Carnations and sweet peas hardly touch the tables when the growers bring them in, and, in some cases, the members of the trade meet the growers outside to claim their share.

Paper Whites are plentiful, but roses are still scarce and prices remain high. The market has been well supplied with greens.

Various Notes.

Fred Leapley is back on the job again after several days' illness.

Marche & Co. have been busy with decorating work during the last week. They had several large casket covers. Mr. White is back again after his illness.

L. E. Hoover reports an unusually large amount of funeral work on hand. He has noticed a large increase in the demand for various plants.

One of the many fine pieces of work which the Oehmler Floral Co. turned out last week was a beautiful basket made up with roses, orchids, freesias, Enchantress carnations and Asparagus plumosus. The basket stood over four feet high and was tied with a piece of pink ribbon, bearing the words, "Accounting Division," in gold letters. The basket was presented to the new assistant secretary of the Treasury Department by the clerks in the accounting division, of which he was formerly chief.

John Sharper, of Oxon Hill, Md., has been bringing in some fine stock, including carnations, peas and calendulas. G. V. S.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE AND WHY

DAVID G. GRILLBORTZER.

THE recent election of David G. Grillbortzer as vice-president of the American Carnation Society may be regarded by him and by the trade jointly as a silver wedding present. It was just twenty-five years ago, when he was 16 years old, that he began a five years' apprenticeship with J. Louis Loose, in Alexandria, Va., his native town. After that he joined his brother, J. Fred Grillbortzer, in business under the firm name of Grillbortzer Bros., with four houses 30x100 feet. Three years later his brother died and he continued the business under his own name. When, in June, 1918, he had an opportunity to buy out the business of Mr. Loose, he had approximately 150,000 feet of glass. His purchase doubled his holdings and added the store, on Fourteenth street, of the Washington Floral Co., of which he is now head. Mr. Grillbortzer is an ex-president of the Florists' Club of Washington and a member of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, of the Masonic lodge of which George Washington was the first master and of other associations and orders.

Results bring advertising.

HEAVY sales of bedding plants seem certain this spring. Now is the time for preparation.

NEVER in its history of continuous growth has The Review increased in size so rapidly as in the last six months. Facilities cannot be expanded as fast as the business grows.

KEEP a record of the telegraph orders you receive and those you send for St. Valentine's day, the number and amounts. Then send it to The Review. The trade wants to know its vital statistics.

THE flu has come back with such force that public funerals have been forbidden in Chicago and hours of opening offices and theaters have been so arranged in New York as to lessen traffic congestion.

A SUBSCRIBER comments that an American Beauty of a different kind is an important novelty at Joseph H. Hill's place, at Richmond, Ind. Her arrival kept the new father from attending the carnation meeting at Chicago.

THE florist who knows his costs does not complain of high prices. He can tell without guessing when he is making a profit and when he isn't. When he does, he is satisfied, and when he doesn't, he can ask his customers for more money without apology.

THE engravers' trust at Chicago February 1 advanced the prices of halftones and zinc etchings about one-third on the average. The smallest halftone now costs $3.75. The Review has bought thousands of them, before the employers' association and the workers' union got together, at $1 to $1.25.

THAT the peak of commercial and industrial activity in this country had been reached for the time and that from now on a gradual reduction would be recorded, was the view expressed recently by a leading banker, formed in spite of the admittedly great prosperity apparent in many lines of business. Perhaps he isn't batting 1,000 as a prognosticator, but the wise florist is, nevertheless, laying money in the savings bank and clearing up collections before cloudy financial weather succeeds the sunshine.

HAVING witnessed what has been accomplished on this side of the water, British horticulturists are discussing schemes of coöperative advertising.

DID you ever notice that the appearance of a greenhouse more or less corresponds with its financial condition? When its looks run down, its profits run down, too.

SKILLED help never was abundant in the florists' trade. Just now larger demand for good men and the attractions in other lines of business make them seem scarcer than before.

CANARIES have proved a profitable side line for retail florists and no doubt a considerable business could be developed if some florists' supply house were to handle the birds in a wholesale way.

THE American workman has fallen off twenty or thirty per cent in productive effort compared with pre-war man-power output, asserts a prominent corporation head, a condition which "transcends in its vital importance all questions of strikes, wages, prices and, in fact, everything else." If continued long, he added, prosperity will surely be destroyed. Greater production should be the aim of everyone, whether he is growing flowers or rolling steel.

NEWS.

What is news?

Some think news is just information about the outside world.

But advertising, too, is news.

It is information that may be of personal moment.

A paper without advertising is but half a newspaper.

BUY NOW!

There is every indication that greenhouse glass will be extremely difficult to procure during the summer. Even now it requires considerable scouting to find any quantity of 16x18 and it is a well known fact that production, closely regulated at all times, practically ceases as soon as warm weather comes. Without the wish to discourage any would-be builder, the directions for building a greenhouse this season are like the well known recipe for making hare stew—first catch your hare. Before you buy anything else, buy the glass.

CAN YOU?

Can any of the readers of The Review inform us where and by whom any sort of flower pot washing machine is manufactured? H. E. & C. W. K.

AN UNUSUAL JANUARY.

No one in the trade ever saw a January quite like that just closed, a month of Christmas prices in many cities from the first to the thirty-first day. It is stated by some firms that their January business exceeded their December sales, an incredible thing in years past. In the same breath, or the next, they assert that flowers were as plentiful during the last month as they ever were in the first thirty-one days of the year. The demand, exceeding anything before experienced at such a time, accounts for the condition of the markets and the high prices.

Combination of circumstances may be charged with the responsibility. All autumn the public spent money for flowers. During the year 1919 the demand held stronger throughout than ever before. So when, immediately after Christmas, sickness created a call in addition to the normal demand, already strong, flowers could not be obtained to fill all wants. All retail stores in the larger cities, where the sickness and mortality is greatest, have been heavily rushed. And the end is not in sight.

A year ago the trade believed its experience of a strong demand would not be repeated. Instead, it has been exceeded in the unusual month just closed.

HOW MUCH DOES IT PAY?

The day has passed when the question is asked about advertising, "Does it pay?" There are no longer doubting Thomases on that score. The question under consideration today is, "How much does it pay?"

Advertising has come to be looked upon, not as an expense, but as an investment, comparable to stocks and bonds, and similarly dependable for a return on one's money. And, just as there are various kinds of stocks and bonds—good, bad and indifferent—so there are various kinds of advertising.

The florist who has money to invest in securities looks for the sort which will be certain to yield him the best returns. Moreover, he takes no one's unsupported word for it, but learns the real facts for himself.

Just as the investor learns how to distinguish in his own mind desirable from undesirable securities, so the advertiser, who exercises a similar care in investing his money nowadays, can tell with his own eyes what medium, or mediums, will give him the greatest return for his money. And as a wise investor will secure twice as great an income from the same money as a less discerning one will, so an advertiser who exercises care in selecting the mediums in which to invest his appropriation will make the same money bring him far more business than the advertiser will get who pays little attention where his advertising investment goes.

A NEW YORKER'S EXPERIENCE.

There still are a few members of the trade, especially in the extreme east, who do not realize how useful The Review is to others and how helpful it would be to them if they would use it. Like this:

Will have to ask you to take our ad out of The Review, as we are flooded with orders from all corners of the United States. The Review finds them all. We have had orders for over 150,000 plants in three weeks. As we are not able to change the ad as fast as the orders come in, we are returning good money daily on some varieties. You will hear from us again as soon as we have caught up.—Cherry Park Gardens, Frank Thies, Mgr., Fredonia, N. Y., January 24, 1920.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

OBITUARY

Howard W. Vose.

Howard Winfield Vose, who conducted a retail flower store in Woonsocket, R. I., and later at Attleboro, Mass., died Tuesday evening, January 27, at his home in the Bronson block, Attleboro, after a two days' illness of double pneumonia. Mr. Vose, who was about his duties on the Sunday previous, was stricken Sunday evening, and in less than twenty-four hours his life was in a precarious condition.

Born in Lincoln, R. I., thirty-five years ago, he was the son of the late Alonzo Vose, of Cumberland, R. I. After attending the public schools, he became associated with his father and eight years ago established a florists' business in the Sweeney block, Woonsocket, later removing to Attleboro, where he opened a store. About two years ago he became affiliated with C. Sidney Smith in the undertaking business as Smith & Vose, in addition to his flower store.

Mr. Vose was well known in fraternal circles. He was a member of the various Masonic organizations and was ready to take his thirty-second degree in February. He was a member of Hope Chapter of the Eastern Star; Attleboro Lodge No. 1014, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks; Orient Lodge of Odd Fellows; Hospitaler Commandery, Knights of Malta; Attleboro Lodge of Moose; Attleboro Chamber of Commerce; Attleboro Retail Merchants' Bureau and the West Side Club. He was also secretary of the Highland Country Club and a director of the Attleboro Young Men's Christian Association.

Besides his wife, Philomen Vose, he is survived by one daughter, Miss Roberta Vose, of Attleboro; his mother, Mrs. Ida Vose, and a sister, of Cumberland Hill, R. I. W. H. M.

Mrs. Margaret Eihl Dorner.

Mrs. Margaret Eihl Dorner, widow of the original head of F. Dorner & Sons Co., La Fayette, Ind., died at her home there January 25, at the age of 75. Mrs. Dorner was born in Alsace, coming to the United States in 1849. She was married March 2, 1861, to Fred Dorner, with whom she was planning to celebrate her golden anniversary when he died suddenly of pneumonia December 29, 1910. Seven of her thirteen children survive her: Theodore Dorner, president of F. Dorner & Sons Co. and retiring president of the American Carnation Society; Fred E. Dorner, of the same firm and treasurer of the American Carnation Society; Herman B. Dorner, of the division of floriculture of the University of Illinois; William P. Dorner, of Indianapolis; Miss Emily Dorner and Mrs. F. E. Hudson, of La Fayette, and Mrs. Claude Riddle, of Los Angeles, Cal.

Edward W. Carbary.

Edward W. Carbary, for the last twenty-five years in the nursery business at Elgin, Ill., died of pneumonia Wednesday afternoon, January 21, at his home. He was born June 25, 1860, at Lake Geneva, Wis., and had been a resident of Elgin for the last forty-two years. He began selling nursery stock there thirty years ago and five years later started in business for himself. He was a member of Elgin lodge No. 96 of the R. A. M. and a member of the Century Club.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Barbara Carbary; two sons, George D. Carbary, of Elgin, and Clarence T. Carbary, of Boston, Mass., and one daughter, Miss Ella Carbary, of Elgin.

Private funeral services were held at the home Friday afternoon, January 23.

Frederick Simon.

Frederick Simon, secretary of the Crown Hill Cemetery Association, which owns and operates the Crown Hill Greenhouses, Denver, Colo., died of pneumonia January 18. He was buried Thursday, January 22. It was one of the largest funerals held in Denver in recent years. Several truck loads of flowers testified to the esteem in which he was held by all who knew him. Noteworthy among the many floral designs was a 6-foot armchair executed in Enchantress and white carnations, Columbia and Ophelia roses, freesias and maidenhair fern. Mr. Simon was a member of the Odd Fellows and the Highlands Christian church. R. S.

Donald R. Fogg.

Donald R. Fogg, for two years in business in Portland, Me., died January 19 at Rutland, Mass. He had served eighteen months at Camp Devens, Ayer, Mass., during the war. Before going into business in Portland, he studied interior decorating for two years in New York. He is survived by his father and mother, of Biddeford, Me., and one sister.

Joseph Levy.

Joseph Levy, 356 Fulton street, Brooklyn, N. Y., died Friday, January 30. Mr. Levy was proprietor of the Brooklyn Wholesale Flower Market, which he opened in 1914.

Thomas Morris.

Thomas Morris, superintendent of the estate of D. G. Read, Irvington-on-the-Hudson, died suddenly Tuesday, January 27. He was buried January 29. Mr. Morris was 33 years old and leaves a widow and three children.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

The Market.

Potted plants, such as begonias, cyclamens, primroses, etc., are plentiful, but all varieties of cut flowers are scarce at present, though it is hoped that they will be more plentiful by February 14. We had only one day of sunshine last week. The other days we had either rain, snow or cloudy weather, and cut flowers did not bloom quickly. The streets have also been in bad condition, either as slippery as glass or covered with slush. This has injured counter trade to some extent, as few people have been out unless it was necessary. However, telephone orders have kept the florist busy, as the demand for funeral designs has been heavy since Christmas.

Carnations are scarce. Roses are also short in supply. Paper Whites are quite plentiful and help much in funeral work. A few daffodils and tulips are in bloom, and freesias are in good supply at some of the greenhouses. Sweet peas are more plentiful than they were last week. A small supply of callas and Easter lilies is available. Sweet peas and calendulas help to make a variety in the cut flower stock.

Various Notes.

James E. Beach has had so much funeral work that he has had difficulty in securing enough flowers to meet the demand. He is cutting a few Easter and calla lilies. A few daffodils and tulips are blooming.

John Reck & Son report that bulbous stock is progressing nicely at the greenhouses and they are anticipating a splendid spring business. They are also preparing for a busy St. Valentine's day. This firm furnished the decorations for the Wakefield-Waldo wedding. Both the home and the church were elaborately decorated with smilax and yellow roses.

Robert Hawkins has been kept busy with funeral work.

James Horan designed a pall of camellias, callas and Paper Whites last week.

The Park Garden & Flower Shop is cutting an abundant supply of sweet peas. The firm made a casket cover of violets last week which was worthy of mention. I. L. B.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Gradually it is dawning on that section of the trade identified with or dependent on the Chicago market that the great scarcity of flowers during January has not been due to lack of production, but to an unprecedented increase in the demand. The only situation comparable with that of the last three weeks was the one the trade encountered in October of 1918 and there was a large amount of idle glass; now it all is in operation.

It has begun to be recognized that the quantity of flowers sold in the Chicago market in January was at least as great as in any other year. The appearance of small supply was due to the unusually large demand. With calls no greater than last year, the shortage would not have been so serious as it ordinarily is in January, when flowers usually are on the short side for a considerable part of the month.

Practically every wholesaler in the Chicago market reports a material increase in his sales for January. A comparison of his records shows he sold at least as many flowers as last year, probably more, so that the increase in sales was not wholly due to higher prices. Taking the market as a whole, the money value of sales for the month must be at least fifty per cent ahead of January in 1919. Numerous houses report increases up to seventy-five per cent and there are occasional ones which report increases running up to double last January's sales. The retailers, counting those out of town as well as the local buyers, must have done proportionately as well. At no time in the month were there as many flowers as were called for. Orders were scaled sharply and there has scarcely been a moment since 1920 came in that more flowers could not have been sold without breaking the price, or that still higher prices could not have been obtained for the stock available. Though prices have been high, they might have been higher had the wholesalers chosen to accept the offers of those who are not their regular customers.

The final week of January seems to have set a new record for the Chicago market. Many wholesalers say their takings for the week exceeded the value of the sales of Christmas week, incredible as that may seem. There was an increase in supply last week, amounting possibly to as much as fifty per cent compared to the quantity of flowers available the week before. But this material increase in stock did not suffice for the demand and prices were not adversely affected. The price of roses and carnations already had been carried as far as most of the wholesalers think it is wise to go at this time. Consequently there was little change on these staple items. But a most unusual thing happened with the flowers of spring. Usually the last week in January sees sharp reductions in the price of such items as sweet peas, jonquils and tulips. This year the price advanced as the supply increased. Practically the only items on which there was any decrease were freesias and valley. These two flowers are competitors and the first heavy cuts of freesia came at a time when the new valley was coming to market from several sources which have not been operating during the war. Freesia and valley are almost the only items on which the market is adequately supplied.

With better weather there has been a sharp increase in the supply of sweet peas, but the demand has been so strong that prices have advanced. The best sweet peas have sold for as much as $6 per hundred, a price without precedent here. Good jonquils have been readily sold at 12 cents and there are reports of sales at 15 cents, also a price without precedent. Cattleyas, which were falling, have firmed up, although the supply is larger than heretofore.

The market is looking forward to an extremely good St. Valentine's day. It is figured that the demand for funeral work will subside, but that the call for flowers for other purposes will increase as the supply increases and that extremely active business may be looked for all through the spring. It is not expected that prices will hold at the present unusual level, but it is believed that good prices can readily be had for the balance of the season. Already large numbers of orders, especially for spring flowers, are coming in for shipment February 12 and 13, for St. Valentine's day.

Coöperative Campaign Takes Form.

At a meeting at the Randolph hotel Monday evening, February 2, retailers, growers and wholesalers passed on the by-laws framed by the committee appointed three weeks before to form an organization to carry on a local coöperative advertising campaign. The title chosen is Allied Florists' Association, a revision suggested by A. Lange of the name, Associated Allied Florist Industries of Illinois, which appeared on the blanks issued for signatures of prospective members. At the meeting named for February 16, nine directors will be elected, each branch of the trade in the meantime nominating three men it desires as its representatives.

Progress since the first meeting was more rapid than had been expected under the existing conditions. The rush of work allowed few retailers time to do much canvassing. Yet over 100 new names were reported. Some of the district captains reported that they had obtained signatures of 100 per cent of the florists called upon. The territory is divided into districts as follows:

The plan proposed for Chicago follows closely that in operation in Milwaukee, save that the wholesalers will contribute one per cent of their commissions and be paid for the extra expense of bookkeeping from the general fund, with the provision that such expense shall not be more than one-half of the wholesaler's contribution. The allowance for bookkeeping expenses was decided upon after some discussion, the original plan of one per cent plus bookkeeping being considered too heavy a share for the wholesalers, although that was the decision of their committee reported by Paul Klingsporn and Eric Johnson to the meeting.

The allied trades will be called to a conference by Fred Lautenschlager to determine the basis for their payments.

After the reading and adoption of the by-laws by section, Chairman George Asmus was empowered to apply for incorporation papers. When these are received, a constitution will be adopted and officers elected, at the meeting called for February 16.

The Call for Funeral Work.

The tremendous increase in the demand for funeral work has been apparent in all classes of flower stores and has kept everybody on the jump. Coupled with the brisk business along other lines, the spurt in the call for "work" has made probably the most active January any of the retailers ever has seen. They have had trouble to buy, but no trouble to sell. They have paid big prices and they have received much larger ones. Retail prices at the end of January were at least double what we once called normal prices.

The reason for the jump in the call for funeral flowers is apparent in the report of the Department of Health. Note these figures:

Deaths week ending:	Influ.	Pneum.	Other
Jan. 17, 1920	21	132	598
Jan. 24, 1920	200	272	698

Compare this with the record of the latter half of January a year ago and we see why the demand for flowers and the prices are so much stronger than then:

Deaths week ending:	Influ.	Pneum.	Other
Jan. 25, 1919	184	157	573

In the third week of January this year 10,712 cases of flu were reported to the health authorities, against 1,330 in the same week a year ago. The disease is much more prevalent, but far less virulent than last year. Because of the epidemic public funerals again were forbidden February 2, with the result that the demand for flowers was checked to some extent, but there were protests from so many quarters the ban is sure to come off soon.

Various Notes.

How many years is it since there was an addition to Chicago's short list of really first-class flower stores?

L. R. Bohannon, Kentuckian by birth, celebrated his forty-eighth anniversary February 5.

In the closing days of January August Jurgens began his annual shipments of outdoor jonquils from the bulb farm at Ridgeland, Miss. The location is ten miles north of Jackson, on the Illinois Central railroad, and the flowers are in the boxes only twenty-four hours. Hundreds of thousands will be shipped in the next few weeks.

Another Dodge delivery car was put on the street last week by George Wienhoeber, who now operates three cars.

Sam Pearce had a splendid January. Although without lilies, he cut considerable quantities of bulbous stock and had the market largely to himself.

The Alpha Floral Co. had an unusual funeral design in the window last week. It was a large pillow of bronze galax, on which rested a huge bouquet of Italian wheat, cypripediums and white sweet peas. Mr. Chronis habitually carries an extremely large stock and the recent shortage of flowers has made it difficult for him to maintain his display.

It is understood John Mangel has first chance at the flower stand concession in the new Hotel Drake. He recently renewed his arrangement with the Blackstone, under the same management, on terms that are said to have discouraged other bidders.

Ziska & Sons, who handle no cut flowers, received their first post-war shipment of artificial flowers from Germany about January 15. It was most opportune, they say, as the sale has been far faster than they had dared hope. A large importation of French chiffon is on the way.

R. Scheffler, the Wheaton mum and sweet pea grower, last week bought 150 boxes of glass. He has not yet made plans for using it, but feels sure glass will be scarce and higher in price during the summer.

P. C. Schupp, proprietor of the J. A.

Budlong Co., has noted that the demand for funeral flowers has come principally from a strip of country in which the flu is especially epidemic. He says that lines drawn eastward from St. Louis and Milwaukee would enclose the territory in which the demand for flowers has been strongest the last few weeks.

R. E. Kurowski is all smiles. A 9½-pound boy, their second, arrived at the Kurowski home January 31.

George Ball says that with calendula selling at 12 and 15 cents it has become a crop any grower could regard as more than incidental.

C. A. Alles, for many years with Wietor Bros., has the sympathy of his friends in the death of his mother January 31. She was 76 years old. The funeral was held February 4.

No matter what line one is engaged in this spring, it seems that demand is taxing facilities. Fred Lautenschlager says Kroeschell Bros. Co. never has known so strong a demand for boilers as in January.

The John C. Moninger Co. reports orders booked in January as being for considerably more than twice the number of square feet of glass ever before placed under contract in that month.

The announcement of the February meeting of the Florists' Club appeared in new form, decorated with the portrait of President Waters. It made quite a hit and probably is responsible for increased attendance at the meeting.

A special meeting of the stockholders of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association was held January 27, at which nearly five-sixths of the shares were represented and voted unanimously in favor of the directors' recommendation that the capital stock be doubled. The new shares will be sold to present stockholders at par, bringing in $30,000 of additional working capital, and each stockholder present signed for his quota. The subscription rights expire February 6.

H. B. Kennicott celebrated his thirty-fourth birthday anniversary at Clearwater, Fla., February 4.

E. Wienhoeber and his daughter leave February 8 for a six weeks' vacation trip to California. They will visit most of the points of interest between San Francisco and San Diego.

Frank Nielsen, of La Grange, January 31 sought the aid of the police and newspaper men to find his son, Charles, 16 years of ago, who had run away from home.

Grafted Premier are to be planted by Poehlmann Bros. Co. Upwards of 75,000 Manetti stocks were obtained and are to be grafted as rapidly as the work can be handled.

Buddleia asiatica is a novelty in this market. The Joseph Foerster Co. has shown some fine spikes, but has found the retailers knew the quality so little it was hard to realize their true worth.

Zech & Mann report a grower who bemoaned missing Christmas with a crop of mignonette. Last week the fine spikes brought from $2 to $2.50 per dozen!

Theodore Vogel, who has been with W. J. Smyth for many years, is planning to join the innumerable caravan of florists wending their way to the Pacific coast.

There still are florists whose chief desire is to cut expense. But with the majority the wish is to push, to do business, to go while the going is good.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Freesia Purity from California-grown bulbs marks the only improvement in the supply at the close of January. There is quite a lot showing a range in quality, as can be imagined. There is long-stemmed, fancy freesia, the bunches making as fine a show as a bunch of choice lilac, or perhaps a better comparison would be to say, looking like a bunch of Paper White narcissi of extraordinary refinement, and there is small, short-stemmed freesia, suggestive of snowdrops in early springtime. It all goes, helping to make the shortage less acute. Yet the expected relief has not come and the market is nearly as bare now as at any time during the month. Golden Spurs have not come in sufficient quantities to amount to anything. They bring the most unheard-of prices and sweet peas still show that dislike for extremely wintry weather that makes reliance on them at this season most unsafe.

We are told that the tide is turning; that there will be a little more of this and a little more of the other in a few days and that all together they will have an effect, and when you ask your informant whether business will not likewise improve with something to offer during February, and whether the demand is likely to continue to outstrip the supply, he looks dubious and wonders whether his troubles are over after all. They are having a hard time of it, those market experts. They have built up a wonderful business by years of hard work and they are confronted by a new condition; they cannot get the stock. Every day business that they have had hard work to develop is being declined for want of material. Every day they divide up their small supply of stock as best they can, hoping that tomorrow there will be enough to go around. For a whole month this tomorrow has not come. Will it come in February?

In Chicago.

Alfred M. Campbell kindly favored your correspondent with a brief, informal chat the day after arriving home:

"I went out to the carnation meeting in Chicago, leaving here January 20. The exhibition was a small one, as might have been expected, with a wonderful display of Laddie. The gold medal vase of Laddie, from Samuel Goddard, and the silver medal vase of Laddie, from C. S. Strout, of Biddeford, Me., were splendid. Strout's also had a choice general collection that was finely staged. My vase of Laddie was about good enough for third, but I entered it in the light pink class, taking first over the place that has the largest stock of Laddie in the country and over Enchantress Supreme. It was most interesting to meet the men and hear their ideas on this and that point. We went around the wholesale cut flower district in Chicago and were surprised to find how scarce flowers were. The shortest roses were bringing 20 cents. At the store of Bassett & Washburn, C. L. Washburn greeted us cordially. He said there was little to show us, but asked an assistant to bring out a vase of Beauties. On their appearance Mr. Washburn remarked that this was their last season. Paul R. Klingsporn, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, is even more enthusiastic about Premier than he was when he was in Philadelphia a year ago.

"The next day I went out to the range of Albert F. Amling Co., at Maywood, a place devoted entirely to roses. Columbia is a great rose here. They have 90,000 and are delighted with it. It seemed to me that the roses got away quicker after Christmas than they do here. Do you think it is because they are all grown in benches? They have a number of interesting labor-saving devices at this place. A long truck capable of carrying a number of flats, filled with plants, is equipped with wheels that are fitted to run on the 6-inch sideboards of the tables, the wheels being adjustable to table inequalities. The benches are supported by sleepers laid on concrete piers. The large boilers are fed with soft coal which seems more like hard coal than our soft coal. It is hard and contains little dirt.

"I went to Sam Pearce's to see the lilies and bulbs. This place supplies the E. C. Amling Co. with many of its bulbous flowers. The heating arrangements are modest and apparently excellent. The bulbs are forced to a certain stage without light. Mr. Pearce explained his small force by saying that he was generally there. The lilies at Pearce's being all for cutting, I went to Ernest Oechslin's to see them grown for selling in pots. This is considered one of the best pot plant places supplying the Chicago market. Two magnificent Packard trucks impressed me right at the start. The place was full of interest and gave cause for thought.

"I went about with A. M. Henshaw, the New York wholesaler, a mighty nice fellow, and coming home I had the pleasure of bumping into Arthur Herrington, of Madison, N. J. I hardly know yet whether I think the cultural methods in the west are ahead of our own. The eastern men like to poke fun at their western brothers by saying that they succeed in spite of themselves."

M. Campbell gave an interesting talk on flowers and what he saw at the Chicago meeting.

William Kleinheinz was on hand with a vase of wonderful Laddie. Clarence U. Liggit had a beautifully arranged table of choice primulas. Richard Lange had fine snapdragons, freesias and calendulas. John Hanlon displayed good sweet peas.

Here and There.

A large force were hard at work in the Bellevue-Stratford store of J. J. Habermehl's Sons, making up baskets of primulas for dinner table decorations. Harry W. Jones, the manager, said that these primulas cut from pots and made up in various ways had saved many an order when the right kind of cut flowers could not be obtained.

Robert A. Craig says that the Easter lilies at Norwood are as fine as anything he has ever seen at this time, nine weeks before Easter. Some of the lilies are tall enough to assure a good height and all are pictures of health. Mr. Craig is proud of two things, the assortment and the quality of his Easter stock.

The Charles F. Krueger Co. has an exceedingly attractive shop in the Reading Terminal, with roomy show windows and plenty of fine stock. When asked whether trouble was experienced in securing so much stock, Frank X. Alter said that of course there was some trouble just now, but that it could generally be managed. Mr. Alter has substituted his new varieties of roses for his old, not because they are more popular, but because he can get them.

Harry Bayersdorfer says that when he first started as an errand boy in the florists' supply business bouquet papers were the standard and almost the only supplies sold to florists by his firm, who were pioneers in the business in this city. Then followed the pretty little moss baskets and immortelles. When he took hold of his uncle's firm, now his own, florists' supplies were made the main business, instead of being merely a side line, and it was rapidly developed. Mr. Bayersdorfer displays three medals

A hearing will be held by the Federal Horticultural Board in Washington February 10 to decide whether orchids may be admitted into this community. They have been barred since June 1, 1919.

W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J., was here last week.

The Bickmore Greenhouses, of Wallingford, are sending some fine stock, that is fully up to their high reputation, to Berger Bros. Their January crops include a good cut of the best varieties of carnations, lily of the valley, a scarce flower now, and Purity freesias.

Frederick J. Michell and family will leave for a short stay at St. Petersburg, Fla., February 9.

Edward A. Stroud has been looking at the rose-growing range of John Stephenson's Son, at Oak Lane. It is understood that Mr. Stroud thought the absence of land suitable for soil a drawback.

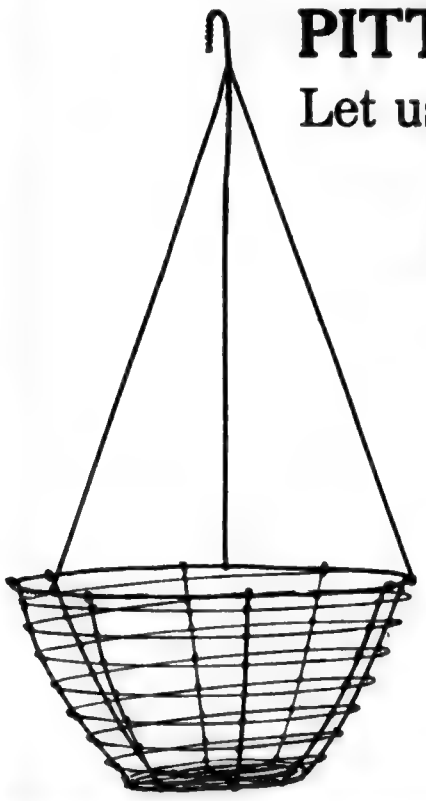
Charles H. Grakelow denies the report current in the local papers that he is a candidate for the state senate.

Charles E. Meehan is receiving nice Ophelia roses, also Hadley.



Sydney H. Bayersdorfer says that price is no obstacle when a florist wants something novel.

E. P. Klinger has succeeded Hugo Niessen as chairman of the house committee.

Robert Craig got off in good spirits for the Isle of Pines. The trip was timely. Mr. Craig has not been well.

William Berger's Sons had a handsome job at Manheim last week.

Samuel Bell arranged his show window with exquisite taste. The commercial criticism might be made that the name is not impressed on those who admire the effect. Phil.

The Market.

The anticipated break in cut flower prices has not yet materialized, nor are much lower prices probable while such abnormal climatic conditions continue. January 31 and February 1 gave us the lowest temperatures of the entire season. Such weather is conducive neither to flower production nor to flower selling. Arrivals continue comparatively small and there is little surplus of anything. Influenza in a mild form is prevalent, but deaths are few and it is not believed the epidemic will prove serious.

Roses are coming in a little more freely, but prices hold up well. A few warm days would see abundant supplies. Prices on hybrid teas vary from $14 to $40 per hundred. No good American Beauties are coming in; the few arriving have short stems. Carnations have not shown any decline; in fact, prices have been a little stiffer than in the week before. Some fancies realize $18 to $20, but the general average sell at $10 to $15. Violets remain about the same. Pansies are more plentiful and of fine quality at $2 to $4 per hundred. Daffodils are a little more plentiful, but still realize high prices. Tulips are scarce. Campernelles, Roman hyacinths and other bulbs are seen in small lots.

Lilium formosum is coming from a number of growers, selling at $35 per hundred. Callas continue to sell well. Sweet peas are in good supply and the prices vary according to quality from $1.50 to $5. Wallflowers and myosotis move rather slowly. Antirrhinums sell at from $12 to $30 per hundred. Freesias are as plentiful as anything on the market; the best realize $8 to $10. Stevia is nearing the end. Cattleya Trianæ is in good supply and prices have slumped considerably. The demand for ferns and asparagus is comparatively light.

The demand for pot plants is restricted by severe weather, but a good assortment of flowering plants is now offered. Among the cheaper kinds, cinerarias are selling better than ever before.

Various Notes.

Owing to the intensely cold weather January 31, the large orchid display which A. C. Burrage, of Beverly Farms, had planned to make at Horticultural hall, had to be canceled. The plants were Galvin's Back Bay and Park street stores have bowling teams, which will compete for supremacy February 5. The teams are: Park Street—G. Dunne, William Henderson, Simeon Thorpe, Pat Moran, W. McNulty and Charles Lynch. Back Bay—J. F. Dave, John McDonough, Montgomery Merry, C. F. Boyle, Joseph Mahoney and Franklin Murphy.

In connection with the big orchid show to be held in Boston March 24 to 28, an orchid conference is being arranged, with lectures by prominent orchid specialists. It is hoped that an American orchid society will be organized as one result of this conference.

Wollrath & Sons, of Waltham, report an excellent sale of cinerarias this season. They have 15,000 begonias potted off, with Melior in much the greatest number.

The movement for daylight saving continues to gather momentum in Massachusetts, and there now seems little doubt that this state will put it in operation May 1. New York state already has it and probably all New England will fall in line eventually.

This winter is proving to be one of the old-fashioned type and coal piles are being steadily diminished. A heavy covering of snow helps in some measure to protect greenhouses.

R. C. Bridgham, of the Newton Rose Conservatories, reports active business. They grow nearly all their own stock and plan next season to plant one additional house each of roses and carnations, including novelties of each.

Miss Margaret Crimmings, a graduate of Boston University, is now bookkeeper at Galvin's Back Bay store.

Several firms are specializing this season in rainbow freesias, which, however, do not seem to be particularly popular, containing, as they do, too many unpopular shades of color.

C. T. Beasley & Co., of East Milton, are picking pansies of fine quality in large numbers at present, shipping many to New York as well as to Boston.

John Barr's carnations at South Natick are extra fine this season. He is growing Ward, Matchless and Pink Delight in greatest quantity. Others are Doris, Beacon, Crystal White and Benora.

21 degrees, proved to be the coldest first month we have had since 1893, when the mean was 20.7 degrees. There was a deficiency in temperature of 19.5 degrees from normal, the last day of the month being the coldest. Brookline had temperatures of zero or below on nine days. February opened with the lowest temperature of the year and, if ground-hog prognostications hold good, the end is not yet.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

The Market.

Last week was not a busy one, but stock was in such limited supply that it held at fair prices, which were, however, somewhat lower than a week ago. For the first time in two months carnations found time to rest in vases up to a late hour Saturday afternoon. Of course there is usually nothing strange in the fact that a little stock should be unsold at the end of the week, but now the fact is worth noting, since it was the first time in many weeks. Jonquils were also more plentiful than the trade could use at the prevailing price of $12.50 per hundred. Short and medium-grade roses are still exceedingly scarce.

F. P. A.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The continued cold weather, with zero temperatures nearly every night, does not help the flower market at all. Fortunately, there was considerably more sun last week than for several weeks previous and stock has been better. The market continued firm, with high prices prevailing, and flowers were scarcer last week than the week before. No florist got all that he ordered, for shipments were divided among all of them in the best way possible, in order to prevent any unnecessary dissatisfaction. Cut flowers remained at prices similar to those at Christmas time, and even at these figures there was no difficulty in selling. The demand was good. Several weddings and other social functions demanded good-sized decorations and funeral work was heavy. The flu epidemic is raging in this city, but as yet only a few deaths have occurred from it. It appears to be in a milder form this year—fortunately.

Carnations have perhaps been the hardest to distribute, owing to the smallness of the shipments arriving. The winter's supply does not begin to come up to that of previous years. Fortunately, roses are in medium supply, but it is difficult to make the round of regular customers and give them what they most need. Violets maintain a good price and move well. Cattleyas are exceptionally beautiful, with a fair demand. Cypripediums are also good and sell easily. Freesias are particularly good and find a ready market. Sweet peas are slow this season and only a limited quantity arrive. Fine jonquils are seen and sell well. Yellow narcissi and Paper Whites are in fair supply, but they are not equal to the demand. Cut tulips find a ready market. Cut schizanthus, baby primroses, bachelor's buttons and marguerites are found extremely useful

The supply of cut flowers continues to be short, although the bright weather has increased the supply slightly. Jonquils are helping out wonderfully, the supply being limited. Tulips and hyacinths move readily. The cut of roses has increased slightly, the quality being good. Some good Premier, Columbia, Ophelia, Sunburst and Hadley are seen. The Market.

The weather has been much milder than it has been for some weeks. Stock of every description is scarce; consequently the prices are somewhat higher than usual. Short roses are still unobtainable and the longer grades are none too plentiful. Ophelia, Columbia, Killarney and White Killarney seem to be more plentiful than any of the other varieties. Carnations are also scarce. The growers could sell many more than they can cut and, with the approach of St. Valentine's day, there does not seem to be any sign of improvement as regards the quantity of stock. Sweet peas sell well and have long stems. Stevia and Paper Whites are only in moderate supply. Double and single violets are plentiful. A few daffodils were seen for the first time last week and were picked up quickly. Mignonette and calendulas find a ready sale in combination bouquets. There is a fine lot of flowering plants on hand. Cinerarias, primulas, white hyacinths, genistas and cyclamens sell quickly, owing to the shortage of cut flowers. Funeral flowers are hard to get, as work in this branch has been heavy. Asparagus plumosus was in limited supply.

Various Notes.

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

STUDYING SELLING.

Aids Retailers' Business.

In the retail flower store salesmanship s important, whether the store is located on Fifth avenue, New York, or on Main street of a small town. The man who adds to his knowledge of business and of flowers something of the really important points in selling will have an extra asset to promote his progress. Those of years' experience in the trade have gradually acquired, consciously or unconsciously, much that is included in the so-called art or science, as one chooses to name it, of salesmanship.

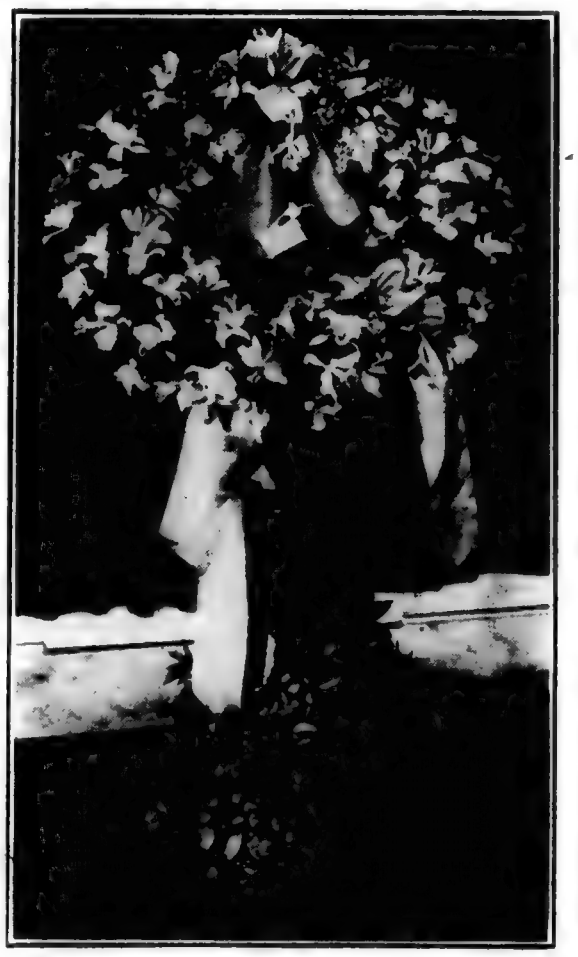
As the trade grows so rapidly now and young and little experienced persons are found in many flower stores, some suggestions which will increase their worth to their employers and their own ability, through knowledge of essential factors in salesmanship, assume corresponding importance. By consideration and careful thought in regard to the suggestions given, much of the selling friction that prevents easy transactions may be removed. Here are presented some of the main points in easy and successful selling in the retail store.

Developing Personality.

A salesman's first requisite should be tact. He needs keen perception to enable him to class a customer, to attribute the motive in making a purchase, to handle a difficult case where the customer is dissatisfied and aggrieved, and to suit the customer so that he or she will return to the store and to him, time and time again.

His second requisite should be nerve, for it needs nerve to approach a customer with a proposition and to take a rebuff. It needs nerve to try again and again to bring his goods to the attention of the customer.

His third requisite should be grit. That is necessary to succeed in closing a sale, for patience is required to clinch it.



It is essential to possess a soft, pleasing voice with the right degree of character and force vibrating through it. Neat and proper dress is essential to a good salesman, as are pleasing manners and habits. Correct conversation is also necessary, as grammatical mistakes offend the ear.

The salesman must possess self-reliance, self-respect and dignity, together with poise, in order to make a success. To develop poise, it is best to cultivate optimism, mastery of oneself, and the desire to please others. Also if the salesman has ambition and is willing to work towards its realization, he will acquire enthusiasm for the work he is doing. This can be accomplished by idealizing his goods and using his imagination.

To look for the good in others and not criticise, and not to fear making mistakes, but to learn from them, should be the motto of every salesman.

Inspiring Confidence.

To inspire confidence, you must, in the first place, be prepared to answer questions by learning all there is to know about the goods beforehand. Know their origin, the quality of the goods you are selling and its relation to other qualities. Study the firm's advertising and learn just what specials have been offered. Study the firm's window display each morning and inquire about each article if you are not already familiar with it. Find out just what sort of service in the way of delivery you are able to promise. If you can learn anything about the financial standing of a customer before giving credit, do so and that will benefit the proprietor and yourself. By anticipating objections to your goods, you will be ready with an answer and not be flustered. Offset any little disadvantages or defects in the best possible way.

If you have the opportunity to sell an article which you know will prove unsatisfactory, do not sell it to that customer; make a friend instead of a sale. By telling the truth at all times you will inspire confidence, for most customers can tell by your manner, anyway, whether you are lying. If you make a promise, see that it is kept, at all costs.

Treat your customer neither with disrespect nor as a king, but as an equal. If there is a doubt, give your customer the benefit of the doubt. Look at your customer while talking; there is nothing more annoying than to be talked to when the salesman is turned away. Above all, to inspire confidence, you must have confidence in yourself, your goods, your store and your customer.

Securing Attention.

When a customer first approaches you, smile and give a pleasant greeting. Mention something special which you have in stock and which you would like to show her, or if she has already interested herself in something on display, show the flowers or whatever is desired. If you are busy with another customer, acknowledge her presence and say, "Just a minute, please," which will make her feel more like waiting for you to finish.

Don't do all the talking; let the customer talk. If she enumerates her troubles, show the utmost sympathy and intense interest, but do not, under any conditions, tell her of your troubles. It is always tiresome to listen to those of anyone but yourself.

If the customer is in haste, be quick. Let every action of yours show haste. Nothing is so annoying to a customer in a hurry as to be waited on by a salesman who is slow.

When you give your sales arguments, if the customer shows lack of attention and interest, turn to some other subject, even if it is only the weather. Don't, by any means, hurry a customer, or give the impression that you are tired of her and wish to be rid of her.

If the customer's first question is price, point out the qualities of the flowers, or whatever she asks for, which merit the figure you name. Do not try to sell a customer flowers at a price more than he or she wishes to pay. You may make the sale, but the customer, feeling that flower prices are too high, may not come back.

Things Not to Do.

1. Don't ask the customer, "What else?" Suggest something else if you really believe the customer would be interested in it, or wishes to purchase something more.
2. Don't wrangle or talk personally with fellow workers if there is a customer present.
3. Don't base your sales argument on price—it is quality that counts.
4. Don't, under any condition, cut a price. Be sure you have given a fair price to start with and do not reduce it by any means.
5. Don't argue with a customer. If you win the argument, you lose your customer. If you lose the argument, you lose your customer, too.
6. Don't disobey orders; follow them. After carrying them out, then offer suggestions.
7. Don't throw responsibility on others; assume some yourself.

Telegraph Delivery Department

The florists whose cards appear on the pages carrying this head, are prepared to fill orders from other florists for local delivery on the usual basis.

8. Don't criticise another customer or a competitor before a customer.

9. Don't get angry if a customer comes in and shouts at you because you have made some mistake or his order proved unsatisfactory for some other reason. Keep cool. Keep your own voice low and pleasant, ask fully about the complaint and listen to it carefully. If there is any question, give the customer the benefit of the doubt. Above all, send the customer away satisfied and with the feeling that she has been treated squarely.

WREATH OF ORCHIDS.

"Goodness knows," said Z. D. Blackistone, referring to the wreath illustrated on page 68, "what we would have made it of if we hadn't got a big crop of orchids!" It was well, of course, that the customer was able to stand the cost of the orchids. But Mr. Blackistone's patrons in Washington are chiefly of that class. "During the last week," he said, "we have used 1,000 orchids."

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Planning Ahead.

The publicity committee held a 2-day meeting January 21 and 22 in Chicago and formulated working plans for the 1920 campaign. There is to be no let-up in the activities of the campaign and the magazine advertising is to be as persistent as ever.

The committee was greatly pleased at the reports it had received as to the results of the campaign. Many florists making these reports had taken particular pains to record conversations with new and old customers, from which it was quite evident that the campaign was producing good business. Some of these reports referred to a noticeably great increase in the demand for flowers for anniversary gifts. The request that our slogan appear on the cards sent with such gifts was general and showed a disposition on the part of the public to adapt the slogan to its own use.

We most surely have a wonderful slogan, one serving two purposes. We can easily understand why publicity experts consider it to be an asset which we should value at more than $1,000,000. It is really worth many millions to us and, if properly perpetuated, it should produce business each year equal to its valuation. It would not be wrong to say that it is doing it already.

A Scratch Won't Cultivate.

And yet there are thousands of florists who, through their negligence in the support of our campaign, do not appear to value the slogan highly. Or is it that they are careless, or quite content to let their more generous brethren bear the expense of making the slogan a "household phrase"? We would ask these careless ones just what it would be worth to them to have "Say It with Flowers" quoted or suggested in every good family in their respective communities daily, or even a portion of these families. Our advertisements in the magazines should be doing just this and, to insure that they are doing it, the slogan should appear in every magazine of consequence. It would so appear, if the proper support were given to the publicity committee. The committee is limited only by the amount of the funds at its disposal. If it could have the support which now it has every right and reason to expect, it could accomplish its full purpose instead of having to content itself with what, at best, is only a good scratch in the field of publicity.

This cut made from an etching of a rare old print of Lincoln, at the time of his first nomination.

LINCOLN THE MAN OF TENDER MESSAGES

In one of the New York theaters there is a play giving wonderful glimpses from the life of Lincoln. Glimpses that give to you a further insight into the combined tremendous power and infinite tenderness of Lincoln's master mind.

You understand as never before why, although a born Southerner, he early determined to fight slavery. Why when as president with a purpose only of the greatest benefit to the country he selected for his cabinet, men of super-power, regardless of party or personal likes and dislikes.

You understand as never before how he could be so long-suffering with the almost treason acts of men like McClellan, at the head of the army of the Potomac.

You marvel as never before that in that man of ungainly, almost repellent appearance, was a heart as deep as a well and as tender as a lover's.

Then you think of the wonderful letter he wrote to Mrs. Bixby, who gave and lost all her 5 sons for the Union. After which as the climax of thought expression of his life, you turn to his world-famed speech at Gettysburg, with its memorable words of "With malice towards none, and charity for all."

With such thoughts, Lincoln's Birthday becomes not only a date on the calender, but one deserving our profoundest reverence.

So Dig in for 1920.

Now is a good time to come into the campaign. The committee is assured, by subscriptions already pledged, of being able to carry out plans within a certain scope, but without a prospect for the advance which it hopes to make when the required support is available. It should be placed in a position at least to double the results already obtained, the possibility of which cannot be questioned. The benefit sought is not for the individual, nor for any particular section of the trade, but is for the whole craft, the whole industry. Florists who link up with the campaign through their local publicity, aided by the various helps furnished by our promotion bureau, get a full measure of the general publicity. APPRECIATION.

Just a word of appreciation in behalf of the band of sincere workers who represented the various bodies connected with the S. A. F., if anyone left our 2-day meeting at the Hollenden hotel, Cleveland, without words of praise for the volume of good work which will ultimately result from the conference. It was, as one of the directors said, an inspirational meeting and one never to be forgotten.

Particularly will the remarkable address of Ex-President Ammann be remembered, especially for the number of constructive ideas and for his earnestness and desire to see the greatest good to the greatest number. And who will forget the beautiful manner in which our lovable and faithful friend, Philip Breitmeyer, replied, urging all to see the benefit which life itself holds for all who attempt to help their brother workers? There is real worth in living when one is able and willing to act with the noble spirit which both of these men offered with their services to the craft. Surely they are an inspiration to the younger generation to follow in their footsteps. No, the occasion will never be forgotten, at least by those who were fortunate enough to be at our meeting.

Then, the desire on the part of all the other directors to pledge their best efforts for the good of the cause tended to make this meeting the most successful that it has been my privilege to attend. Just imagine, if you can, this entire body of officers and affiliated directors giving five solid hours to the publicity work, in which we are all so vitally interested, and not a dull moment in all this discussion, every one eager to do and give the best that is in him for the cause.

Surely, our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," will never falter with this warm support behind it. Florists generally are certain to be benefited if we will give it the financial support to which it is entitled.

From the moment President Miller called the meeting to order until the close of the sessions all present were interested in showing why they came and joined in the deliberations, and the fruits of the meeting will be known from coast to coast soon. The sound of its effect will be on the tongue of every florist in the land, first, for the good the plan will merit, and secondly, for the unselfishness of purpose for which it stands, where everyone will share its benefits.

Our thanks are due to the maker and organizer of the plan. At any rate, it is up to us all to get behind it when it is ready and show how we, too, can look beyond our own selfish needs and make it a bigger and better florists' industry than we have ever been able to have before. Get behind the publicity movement and do your share and be a bigger and better florist for so doing, because the purpose justifies the action.

During all of last week stock was decidedly scarce at all of the six wholesale markets and all cleaned up easily each day. They reported plenty of orders from outside points for any kind of stock, but local advance orders received the first call. The retailers had all that they could attend to daily, owing to a great rush of funeral work, as well as a large number of weddings and other social affairs. Many had to resort to using artificial flowers and the supply houses were almost cleaned out of this kind of stock.

The few days of sunshine did not seem to help as to the cut in roses and few came in. Premier and Russell in all grades sold at sight at stiff prices; in fact, anything in the rose line was placed on advance orders as soon as it came in. Carnations were also scarce. The extra fancies went up to $20 per hundred and few were sold under $15 per hundred. Such scarcity and such high prices were never experienced before by the oldest retailer.

Sweet peas in extra long fancies brought as high as $6 per hundred, while inferior grades brought from $3 to $5 per hundred and the growers had clean sales. Almost the only flowers that have gone down in price since the holidays are orchids and lily of the valley. Valley is now down to $15 per hundred and good stock can be obtained at that price. Violets were in good supply all the week and the price is down to $1 per hundred for extra good stock. Stevia, calendulas, mignonette, jonquils, tulips and Paper Whites cleaned up well at good prices.

Anything in greens cleaned daily, as the demand was strong in all lines.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will hold an important meeting February 12. The place of the meeting will be decided at this week's meeting of the club's officers. All members will receive special notices. The special importance of this meeting should attract a large attendance.

A committee from the City Garden Club, with a number of society ladies, met at the office of the Bourdet Floral Co. last week with L. Jules Bourdet and President Hummert, of the Florists' Club, and decided to hold a spring flower show in the large show house at the Missouri Botanical Garden. It will be

The Retail Florists' Association at its last meeting, January 19, failed to elect its new officers, owing to the small attendance. Those who regularly attend are at a loss to know why the retailers take so little interest in attending these meetings, and there is talk of disbanding unless more interest is shown when the call is made for this month's meeting.

According to the terms of the will of the late Fred C. Weber, his son, Fred C. Weber, Jr., was appointed executor of the estate without bond. He appointed Theodore Miller, Frank J. Fillmore and L. Jules Bourdet to make an inventory of the estate left in the will.

A banquet was tendered to the retiring park commissioner, Nelson Cunliff, and his successor, Frederick W. Pape, by the Municipal Athletic Association at the Missouri Athletic Club January 26. All the new and old officials attended and assured Mr. Pape of their full support. Dwight F. Mrs. Oscar Ruff will entertain the Lady Florists' Home Circle February 11 at her home, 3117 South Grand avenue.

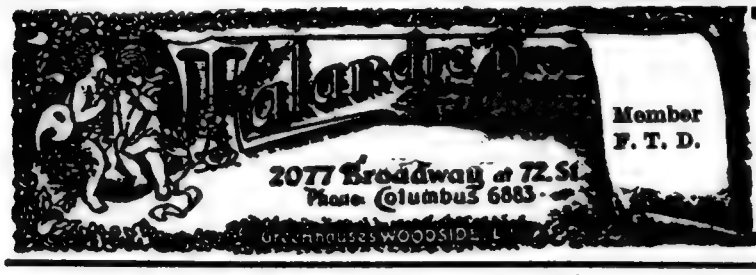
Among those in the trade who were reported ill last week were Mrs. Joseph Witek, Andrew Hoffman, Sr., Albert Senger, C. A. Kuehn, Jr., Albert Gumz, Fred Alves, Miss T. Badaracco and Henry Duringberg. The majority of these expect to return to work this week.

Since the receipt of last week's issue of The Review, describing the formation of the national growers' association at Chicago, a number of growers have expressed great satisfaction at the outcome and will await J. F. Ammann's arrival at the next meeting of the Florists' Club to hand him their applications for membership in the association.



The florists' publicity committee held a meeting January 27 at headquarters and transacted a lot of important business; the committee in charge of the advertising was voted a good sum of money for advertising St. Valentine's day. The committee distributed 50,000 stamps and posters to the retailers. This distribution is to be followed up by the display of the same cut in all the daily newspapers throughout one week.

Fred J. Foster, head of the Foster Floral Co., who was born in England in 1868, celebrated his fifty-second birthday January 30 by passing out fine cigars to his friends.

William Patton, treasurer of the recent mask dance given by the florists, says that all those who have any tickets left over should turn them in at once, so that he will be in a position to make up a report for the committee in charge and to return the guarantors their money.

A number of Dutch bulb salesmen were in the city last week calling on the county growers; they reported good business.

Walter Mott, representing Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, Beacon, N. Y., called on the trade last week.

L. P. Jensen and August Hummert, who attended the meeting of the S. A. F. board of directors, returned January 26 and will give an account of the meeting at the gathering of the St. Louis Florists' Club this week.

At the bowling session of the "Say It with Flowers" League, January 28, the great surprise of the evening was the defeat of the Roses in the three games played with the Daisies. The Sweet Peas won the odd game from the Carnations. Wednesday evening, February 4, the Roses met the Sweet Peas and the Carnations met the Daisies.

The St. Louis Seed Co., the Schisler-Corneli Seed Co. and the American Seed Co. report that mail orders are arriving in good volume. Many of the help are on the sick-list. August Hummert, of the St. Louis Seed Co., reported that last week eight of the force were missing because of sickness. J. J. B.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

A demand far in excess of the supply was the principal feature of the market last week. For at least ten days the sun has not been seen and during most of that time there has been rain. Flowers in any quantity were not to be had.

At 1 o'clock there is nothing left in the wholesale houses, although once in a while a few blooming plants are to be seen. Prices remain about the same and there is no hope for any reduction until production is increased. Indeed, the wise business man should be looking now for his Easter stock; for instance, one grower has a fine bunch of Harrisii lilies that at this time bid fair to be in good shape for Easter. The retailer would better take time by the forelock, for when the rush comes these are going to be taken quickly. It seems to me that orders could be placed now, subject to market prices at that time. From present appearances, Easter is going to be a repetition of Christmas. Roses may, if weather conditions are favorable, be in good supply, but carnations are going to be far short of the normal supply; there is not nearly enough stock to draw from. Sweet peas are quite scarce again; owing to so much dark weather, the buds of entire crops have dropped off. There is a big supply of sweet pea plants to draw from, more than has ever been known in this section. Growers of carnations planted peas when they could not get sufficient carnations to fill their space.

Various Notes.

William F. Ekas has returned from the directors' meeting of the S. A. F. held in the Hotel Hollenden, Cleveland. Mr. Ekas is enthusiastic over the way these directors work and the amount of work they accomplished. Had they been a private corporation looking after their own interests, instead of the good of the florists' business at large, they could not have worked harder.

Miss Matilda Held and her sister, Miss Lena, have sold their business and retired. Although this business had been established in one of the best locations in the city for over fifty years, it has been closed out. These young ladies worked hard and are entitled to all the pleasure they can derive from their new surroundings.

Gus Lotze, of Glenburnie, has disposed of his old establishment and has purchased 190 acres in the same vicinity. He has just erected a new house, 25x100 feet, and contemplates more in the near future.

D. T. Connor, of the Lord & Burnham Co., was a visitor in the city last week. Mr. Connor is looking forward to a busy summer in the construction line this season. There must be greater production of flowers and this cannot be done without more glass.

Robt. L. Graham, Jr., chairman of the entertainment committee of the Florists' Club of Baltimore, said recently that at the next meeting of the club, Monday, February 9, they are going to have one of the best features of the winter. The committee has been successful in getting Dr. D. H. Griffith, of the Department of Agriculture, to come over and give an illustrated lecture on "Growing Lily Bulbs in the United States." Besides the pictures, he is going to have some of the plants grown in this country to illustrate his talk.

As fine a lot of primulas as I have ever seen came from the range of P. B. Welsh. Mr. Welsh said last week that all stock would be scarce for Easter, but he would have some good Harrisii lilies and a fair amount of bulbous stock. Mr. Welsh, who usually has as fine sweet peas as come to the market, said that he should at this time have large quantities of them, but owing to the dark weather the buds of the entire crop had dropped off.

The publicity committee is working hard; it is holding meetings every week and hopes to have a scheme devised by the next meeting of the Florists' Club by which everyone in the trade will contribute systematically.

Mary Johnston was extremely busy for the funeral of Jere Wheelwright, who died in France January 7 and was buried from Immanuel church January 29. Samuel Feast & Sons and John Cook were also quite busy for this funeral.

NORTON FLORAL CO.

There are many cases of flu in the city, but fortunately it has not reached the epidemic stage and it does not seem to have the fatal tendencies that it had a year ago; only two deaths have been reported to the health department from it so far this year. Tate.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

There is such an epidemic of influenza that the florists are worse off than ever with a short supply of stock. The weather has been ideal for several days, but it has not been bright long enough for flowers to recover since Christmas. Each day finds orders filled somehow or other, but it requires such stretching and planning that it gets on one's nerves after a week or two. Carnations and sweet peas are coming in better, but the demand is heavier in proportion. Plants are being sold almost entirely for sick rooms and hospitals and the flowers are being saved for funerals and other purposes. Roses are from $10 to $30; carnations, $10 and $12; sweet peas, $2, $3 and $4; narcissi, $8, and freesias, $8 and $10 per hundred.

Sunday Closing.

The question of Sunday closing has been working in the minds of florists for many years, but for a long time it seemed like rank heresy to suggest such a thing to the public. So many decided moves and reforms which heretofore seemed impractical are being made now in business activities that it is merely a matter of educating the public to buy their flowers a day earlier. The wholesale houses have gone on just the same since they inaugurated Sunday closing and the retail shops will all come to it in time. Last week the W. L. Rock Flower Co. had prominently displayed in its show window a printed card saying, "Closed Sundays," and the store closed February 1 for the first time. No telephone orders, except long-distance and orders for Sunday shipping, will be taken. Samuel Murray intends to observe the same rule and the other downtown stores will gladly follow suit. Two or three clerks can handle the business that comes in with the stores closed and by taking week about it means a 7-day week once in four or five weeks instead of every week. The public will like it as soon as they get used to it and will wonder why they never thought of it before.

Various Notes.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. had four blankets last week, including one of orchids and freesias and one of sweet peas, freesias and clusters of marguerites. W. L. Rock has returned from more flowers. Friday morning he started in again, having procured some more sweet peas from his greenhouses and other stock from various sources. He had so much funeral work all week that he dreaded to see a customer come into the store. In the midst of his rush, his chauffeur was taken with the flu.

Samuel Murray had a beautiful casket spray of long-stemmed roses for the funeral of Mrs. J. K. Burnham. He is cutting orchids and narcissi and using both steadily.

C. L. Thomas, of the Rosery, is refusing to make any designs while flowers are so scarce, because it takes too many flowers. He uses flowers in sprays or combined with magnolia leaves for designs, but not alone.

Mr. and Mrs. Tucker Smith, of Pleasant Hill, spent last week in Kansas City.

The truck of the Pinehurst Floral Co. is making two trips a day between Pleasant Hill and Kansas City, carrying plants from the greenhouse. The company is cutting comparatively few roses or carnations, but is cutting some sweet peas, narcissi, freesias, tulips and jonquils. The range is sending up heavy supplies of cinerarias, primroses and cyclamens, which all find a ready sale.

The Muehlebach Flower Shop displayed some fine cut flowers last week. Thursday it had fifty orchids in the window and Friday an arrangement of fifty cattleyas and twelve big sprays of yellow orchids. Mr. Neff gives particular attention to window arrangement and finds that it pays well to do so, particularly since he is located between the Orpheum theater and the Muehlebach hotel.

J. G. Eggleston says that he has about four times as many orders as he can take care of. He is cutting about 500 sweet peas a day, with good colors and large blooms.

Mrs. J. Richards and Miss Dolly Miller are making a success of their shop, the Central Avenue Florists, at Tenth and Central avenue, Kansas City, Kan. They began business last September and have had better business each month. Mrs. Laundie, who formerly had a greenhouse in Kansas City, Kan., and has had thirty years' experience in her line, is now with the Central Avenue Florists.

William Foith has sold about 6,000 carnation cuttings of the 20,000 which he put in. He will sell a few more thousands, but will keep the bulk of the lot for field planting later. He is also wholesaling geranium cuttings and foliage plants. He is now cutting from 500 to 800 carnations daily, some of them before they are quite open, as the demand is so great, but his heaviest crop will be ready for St. Valentine's day. J. E. K.

TORONTO, ONT.

The Market.

Stock has been sold out each day. There is much design work, as well as decorations for social functions. Growers state that as soon as warmer and brighter weather comes there will be a larger supply of roses and carnations. Some of the retailers have been worried over the amount of stock to fill orders and are using cycas leaves, etc., for funeral designs, with a few flowers.

Various Notes.

The annual dance of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club, which will be held in the Metropolitan Club rooms February 9, will be the biggest the club has yet held. The president is in hopes that a number of friends of the Toronto florists from across the line will attend.

The dance of the Hamilton Association will be held the same evening in the I. O. O. F. hall, Hamilton.

Simmons & Son are renovating their store, making it completely fireproof. New stocks of supplies have been received and business is being transacted on a large scale. The redecorating will be done inside and outside as soon as the warm weather comes. When completed this will be one of the finest flower stores in America.

Plans for the annual convention of the C. H. A. at Hamilton, August 10 to 13, are under way. The headquarters will be at the Royal Connaught hotel. The fine large dining room, capable of seating 400 people, will be used for the meeting. The trade exhibits will be in

The John Cannon Co. has issued its 1920 catalogue of roses, trees, shrubs and perennials.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

The last two days of January brought more sunshine than the previous two months, and another week of similar conditions will bring in a fine crop of stock for St. Valentine's day.

While stock has been a little more plentiful recently, the wholesale markets have so far not been able to catch up in their orders. Silver pussy willow is the only thing arriving in large quantities, the bunches of twenty-five each ranging in price from 50 cents to $2. Prices continue just about as they were during the holidays. Stock in general is of exceptionally fine quality.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. James Wilkinson Elliott will leave Tuesday, February 10, for California, where they will remain until late in the spring, when several lecture dates in and near Chicago will call Mr. Elliott home. They expect to spend

LOOK!

On pages 66 and 67 —

Is your city represented there?

If it IS—by someone else—you will know the reason why YOUR telegraph delivery business is not so large as you think it should be.

If it is NOT represented, you will see a "grand and glorious" chance to add to YOUR business. Practically every Florist who makes any effort to send and receive telegraph delivery orders finds the profit soon equals what he made on the best three or four customers he ever had.

The opportunity is specially good for the leading Florist in cities not already represented in the Pink Part of the Review. First consult the Index on pages 66 and 67, then use this order blank:

Telegraph Delivery Department

The florists whose cards appear on the pages carrying this head, are prepared to fill orders from other florists for local delivery on the usual basis.

LOOK!

On pages 66 and 67 —

Is your city represented there?

If it IS—by someone else—you will know the reason why YOUR telegraph delivery business is not so large as you think it should be.

If it is NOT represented, you will see a "grand and glorious" chance to add to YOUR business. Practically every Florist who makes any effort to send and receive telegraph delivery orders finds the profit soon equals what he made on the best three or four customers he ever had.

The opportunity is specially good for the leading Florist in cities not already represented in the Pink Part of the Review. First consult the Index on pages 66 and 67, then use this order blank:

_____ 19____

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.
508 South Dearborn St., CHICAGO

You may insert a Telegraph Delivery card occupying {1 / ½} inch in each issue of the Florists' Review for a period of one year from date, and thereafter until forbid by either party, for which_____ agree to pay at the rate of {$1.00 / 50 cts.} net per week, bills payable monthly.

Strike out size NOT wanted.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Monday, January 26, was the eightieth birthday of Mrs. James McLeish, and in recognition of the occasion a family party was held.

John C. Hess was confined to his house, 12 Caswell avenue, by an attack of the grip last week.

Business is unusually good, especially in funeral work.

William Edwards, superintendent of the T. Suffern Tailer estate on Ocean Drive, is laying out a new golf course that promises to surpass anything in this section. W. H. M.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Intermittent snow storms, with excessively cold weather, has caused a material depletion in the supply of cut flowers in this market. At the same time there has been a material increase in the demand, to which several causes have contributed. A large increase in the number of funerals, which is rapidly approaching the record established during the influenza period of 1918, is resulting in a heavy call for flowers. There is also an unusually heavy social calendar, which is adding to the burdens of the situation. As a consequence, prices are holding firm and high, the most noticeable shortage being in roses and carnations.

Horticultural Society.

The annual meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society was held Wednesday evening, January 28, at the rooms of the Providence public library. John E. Hill, of Providence, was elected president. The other officers are: First vice-president, L. G. N. Clarner, of Arnold Mills; second vice-president, George L. Stillman, of Westerly; secretary, E. K. Thomas, of Kingston; treasurer, I. F. Chase, of Providence; trustee for five years, E. E. Stone, of Kingston; auditors, Ed. G. Brooke, Jr., and William Steele; necrologist, Joseph E. C. Farnham, of Providence; botanist, Prof. J. F. Collins, of Providence; entomologist, E. E. Stene, of Kingston; lecture committee, John Dorg, of Barrington, and Eugene Appleton, of Providence.

Plans were discussed for the combined show to be held at the Providence armory, where exhibits by all the various agricultural and horticultural societies of the state will be staged. In addition to the exhibits, there will be lectures, demonstrations and motion pictures. At

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

The earliest of the late winter bulb stock is arriving on the market in small quantities and at high prices. Growers are putting in their final work in preparing for the opening of this part of the spring trade. Indications are that bulbous stock will not be overplentiful this year, and that consequently prices for all sorts of this stock will be higher than usual throughout the season. This is partly due to the fact that the prices of all kinds of materials entering into their production are higher than they were a year ago and partly due to the scarcity of labor and the high price of such as can be obtained. Many growers are getting along with less help than normally because of these conditions, contenting themselves with growing what they are able to by their own labor and that of the comparatively few assistants whom they have left.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Another week of shortage along certain lines can be noted, especially in roses, which are away below the demand. The field stock that occasionally reaches the market is conspicuously absent and, as the greenhouse growers are in short crop, there is nothing to take its place. Indoor and field-grown carnations are both good, but the recent fogs have spoiled many of the latter for shipping purposes. They look all right when shipped, but promptly go to sleep when opened up at the destination. Callas are coming in but slowly, owing to the cold nights, and are exceptionally useful, on account of the scarcity of anything that looks like a lily. There is nothing outside of shrub blooms that can be used for large decorations. Orchids and sweet peas are both a little more plentiful, but clean up daily. Small flowers and bulbous stock are scarce. Greens of all kind are higher than usual in price. There is plenty of plumosus coming from growers of second-rate stock; this cannot be shipped and orders from east and middle west points take all the best stock.

Retailers all report a good week, the number of tourists in the hotels and rooming houses helping the box trade, while funeral work has been above the average. Wholesalers report much better business, principally in long-distance shipments.

Various Notes.

J. Dieterich is on a business trip to San Francisco. He is expecting a large consignment of aspidistras from Japan, having secured a permit to import them washed clean of soil and packed in sterilized moss. This will form the nucleus of a big business in this stock at his Wintersbury nursery. It is understood that no stock can be sold from this for three years, but in the case of aspidistras this will prove no hardship, as it will take that long to produce salable plants. He is also figuring on growing Erica melanthera in quantity.

Roy F. Wilcox had the misfortune to collide with a street car January 22, but fortunately no injury was done except to his car, which was rather badly stove in. Big shipments of heather are going out from his Montebello place to eastern points.

The sympathy of his friends goes out to James Taylor, superintendent at Laughlin park, in the death of his mother, Mrs. Alice Taylor, who died at Gilmerton, Edinburgh, N. B., shortly after Christmas. Mrs. Taylor carried on a flower business in the Scotch town, which is being continued by her children.

C. H. Woolsey has been confined to his home, in Glendale, for several weeks, but is improving rapidly and hopes to be around again shortly. He will reëngage in the flower business in Glendale, having been out of it for some time.

Max Tefillossy, recently with S. Murata & Co., has gone to San Diego to open up a retail flower business.

Paul Staiger, since leaving Roy F. Wilcox & Co., has been selling nursery stock on commission for several nurserymen and reports a brisk business.

Albert Amling, of Maywood, Ill., and his wife, son and son's wife, are visiting here. Mr. Amling is considering buying land out here, it is said, for growing purposes, but nothing definite has been decided on.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith, of the Smith Floral Co., Tacoma, Wash., are visiting the city.

Mrs. R. E. Miller, wife of R. E. Miller, of the Racine Floral Co., Racine, Wis., is staying in the city, having come to

DIENER'S RUFFLED MONSTERS, SINGLE

The most perfect and most beautiful Petunias in existence and have taken the highest prizes wherever shown. Seed in separate Colors: Red, Pink, Variegated, White, Flesh Pink Frilled, Blue and Mixed.

THE DIENER TOMATO

(Blight-proof.)

The largest and most desirable tomato ever created. Unexcelled for table use, for canning, for tomato sauce, and for dehydration. Thirty to 40 tons of ripe fruit of remarkably uniform size produced to the acre. The Diener Tomato plant is also blight resisting. Thousands of acres of tomatoes have been ruined in the last few years by blight, but this tomato has been grown side by side with such varieties without being affected by blight. The fruit has reached a size of three pounds; but the average is a one-pound fruit, unusually smooth. The flesh is more solid than of any other tomato known, making this variety so valuable for dehydrating purposes. This tomato is of a deep red color and very attractive to the eye. The Diener Tomato is specially useful in many localities for the fact that, after being properly started, it is practically drought resisting. The Diener Tomato is an excellent shipping variety, ripe fruit having been successfully shipped from here to New York. Price of Diener Tomato Seed, $.50 per package; $1.50 per Acre Package.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The demand for flowers is greater than the supply at present and florists are having a hard time filling the orders. In a week or two this condition will be improved, on the appearance of the early bulbous flowers. There is a fair supply of potted plants, which help out considerably for some occasions. The main showing in flowers just now is of violets, narcissi, freesias, sweet peas, roses and carnations.

Various Notes.

Clarke Bros. are showing a window of potted daffodils.

Martin & Forbes have some fine potted tulips and primroses. L. T. S.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

The weather has been favorable and business exceptionally good. Flowers have been insufficient to meet the demand. The florists are experiencing a shortage of stock such as they have never been called upon to meet before. Funeral work has been exceptionally heavy and cape flowers and magnolia and galax leaves are much in evidence in the make-up of designs.

The shipment of roses from the south is considerably smaller than that of a week ago, owing to the fact that the south is also experiencing a shortage of stock. But small flowers, such as freesias, daffodils, Paper Whites and Chinese lilies, are plentiful. Carnations are scarce. The local stock is of poor quality, but Portland shipments are arriving in excellent condition and will relieve the situation. There are also small quantities of Aviator carnations arriving on the market from Spokane. Sweet

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The scarcity of roses continues in the local market, with prices considerably in advance of those of the holiday period. Retail establishments complain that they can't get enough roses to meet the demands of their customers, while shippers state that orders are heavier than the supply. In a few weeks, however, several of the rose growers in this vicinity expect to begin cutting the second crop and thereby relieve the shortage to some extent.

Spring flowers are growing more plentiful. Outdoor daffodils are improving in quality and are arriving with longer stems and larger blooms. Anemones and ranunculi made their first appearance last week, while a few almond blooms were offered at one or two of the wholesale establishments.

Violets are in splendid condition now and are plentiful enough to meet both the local and out-of-town demand.

Carnation prices took a slight jump last week, the call for them being quite heavy on account of the amount of funeral work at present. White freesias are in excellent shape and are also in demand for funeral work as well as table decorations.

Retail stores in San Francisco report an unusual amount of funeral work, and are cleaning up well each day on cut flower stock.

Tree yards have been opened in Oakland and San Jose by the California Nursery Co., of Niles, Cal. The Oakland depot is located at Twenty-second street and Broadway and the San Jose yard at Market and West San Carlos.

The operator can stand from eight to ten feet from the plants to be dusted, thus preventing the inhalation of any of the fumes of the insecticide. The powder is thrown in a cloud-like fashion over the foliage, giving all parts of the plant an even dusting.

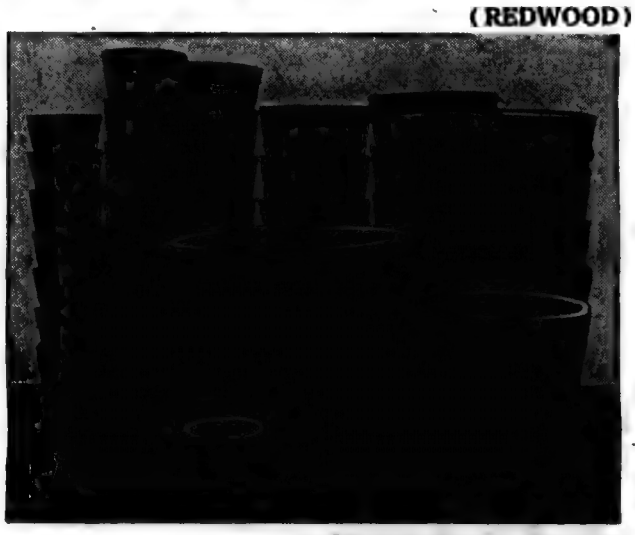
Stock was still scarce last week, in both cut flowers and pot plants. All growers reported lots of buds, but the dull weather was responsible for the shortage. Local roses were at a premium and California roses were high in price. Some fine freesias were on the market and cleaned up readily.

The demand last week was especially heavy. Graduation exercises and the annual automobile show were the chief causes. Funeral work also helped to create a demand. The call from the trade in the neighboring towns for extra stock in most cases had to be cut in half.

Various Notes.

F. K. McCormick, of Post Falls, Idaho, is shipping some fine calla lilies and stevias and expects to be cutting roses soon.

A. J. Burt has decided that it is appropriate to have music with flowers and so has turned impresario, bringing artists to town. Miss Alice Nielsen appeared February 4.



Eugene's Flower Shop had a large wedding order January 21, which kept the staff busy.

R. Briggs, of Lewiston, Idaho, was in town for a few days on business.

Mr. Scott, of Scott Bros., Moscow, Idaho, was in town calling on the trade. He reports a big demand for stock and is unable to fill all orders. H. H.

BRITISH SEED SITUATION.

Last Season and Next.

Reviewing the seed season just past and the outlook for that ahead, a leading British trade publication states:

"Home production of seeds made a certain amount of progress, and during last summer fairly large areas of what may be termed staple vegetables were met with in places where seed growing was quite a new venture.

"The wet spring, followed by a dry, but cold and sunless period, made growth somewhat backward, but subsequent warmth quickened the pace and at one period crops in most districts wore a pleasing and promising aspect. Drought and heat, however, were later experienced, and on the whole yields were light and some seeds finished off rather too rapidly. Pea and bean crops were considerably below the average in weight, but they harvested particularly well and hand-picking is a much lighter task than was the case last season.

"The dry autumn was favorable to the onion seed harvest, and some really good batches have been met with. The onion is undoubtedly one of the most important of the seed crops grown in England, and were it not for the uncertainty of our climate in autumn we might well produce the greater part of our required supplies, for without doubt English-grown onion seed maintains quality and stamina better than most foreign produce.

"Some fairly good batches of beet seed and of the brassica tribe were secured, while carrot and parsnip also produced respectable yields, but on the whole it was a light harvest all around.

"It naturally followed that early in the buying season supplies of Californian and colonial, as well as continental, seeds were eagerly sought, and for a while, in anticipation of big demands, the growers were tempted to ask extremely high prices. It transpired, however, that with enormously increased production in America, coupled with increasing caution on this side, prompted partly by the anticipated reduction in the number of allotments and the curtailment of vegetable production by many nurserymen who had been obliged to grow food crops during the war, the American growers found themselves overladen and prices fell heavily. Still further complications arose through the difficulty experienced in securing deliveries of seeds ordered from America. Shipping has by no means become freed from difficulty. Lack of tonnage is still acutely felt, and the big wholesale houses have had a period of anxiety in regard to the delivery of stocks on order.

Holland and Denmark.

"A vast amount of seeds were put on offer from Holland and Denmark, and indeed the impression gained ground that a great deal of German seed was being placed by circuitous methods within reach of British buyers. It was really on this account that the Agricultural Seed Trade Association deemed it advisable at its annual meeting to rescind the resolution of a year before to refrain from trading with German seed firms for a period of five years.

"In Holland, where an immense quantity of runner beans is grown and generally gathered in a green state, the demand last summer fell away alarmingly, with the result that the crops were allowed to go to seed, and that seed has been offered here at low prices. For the most part, however, these beans are of the white-seeded type, which is not so popular here as the scarlet runner. All the better varieties of scarlet runners have been scarce and prices high. Peas also, especially of such popular market varieties as The Pilot and a few others, have held firm, but the peculiar conditions already described played strange tricks with the general run of things, so much so that retail seedsmen, anxious to get forward with the preparation of catalogues, have been in a quandary as to what will be the real selling prices.

Flower Seeds.

"It is extremely gratifying to be able to relate that there is great activity in the flower seed department. Garden owners feel they may without qualms revert to the cultivation of their favorite flowers, and the demand for sweet peas is great. The probability is that the available seeds will run out long before orders are filled. Antirrhinums, too, are eagerly sought, and bid fair to be more largely grown than ever before, while many quick-growing greenhouse subjects are being taken up to compensate for the loss of slower-growing subjects which were sacrificed in consequence of loss of labor and lack of fuel. The high prices made for all cut flowers have induced market growers to devote more space to useful annuals and biennials, and there is a big call for good strains of stocks, asters, mignonette and other popular lines.

"It has been too long unfavorable for the introduction of novelties to make

NEW FLOWER

Celosia Chrysanthefolia or "CELOSIAMUM"

A cross developed to its present perfection after five years of continued experiments. The color is a most beautiful cardinal red. In size it resembles Chrysanthemum. It was the sensation at the Detroit convention of the S. A. F. Can be cut and shipped from one end of the continent to the other and come up smiling. Wonderful for baskets, for vases and funeral sprays. One worn individually makes a handsome corsage. Can be dried, if so desired, and will readily sell at Christmas time and throughout the winter. The larger ones should retail at $12.00 per dozen, as we received $6.00 per dozen for them wholesale, and could not supply the demand of Chicago alone.

They are very easily grown—seed sown in greenhouse in February and transplanted outdoors the end of April will bloom in June—or they may be sown out of doors about May 1st and will bloom from July until frost.

We offer a limited amount of seed at $2.00 per trade packet

It was our intention to withhold the sale of this seed until 1921, when we would have a larger supply. But owing to the repeated demands and urgings of the trade, we have decided to let the Florists have this remarkable creation now.

Kindly write for catalogue and our blue list for Florists.

this season notable in this respect, but we have a few new things that will receive enthusiastic welcome, and doubtless 1920 will find our plant breeders busy with intent to provide some sensations for next year's distribution."

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

Daniel Carmichael, of J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., Cincinnati, O., observed that since the formation of the Holland Bulb Growers' Association, methods were being pursued that are quite arbitrary. He believes the seed trade and, in fact, all who handle Holland-grown stock will be compelled to counter-organize. Demand locally is opening up well in response to the catalogue. Stocks are fairly plentiful.

Manthey's Seed Store, Cincinnati, is getting more crowded each year. "If this season beats last in volume, we must expand," observed Mr. Manthey, who, by the way, is fighting the flu.

The J. W. Wilder Seed Co., of Cincinnati, has installed on the second floor of the store an incubator capable of hatching 5,000 chicks and mentions the fact that annual sales run as high as 30,000. This gives an impetus to the sale of chick food and a profitable form of publicity.

Clem Kimmel & Son, of Dayton, O., predict a greater scarcity of flower seed, owing to the prevailing high price and the fact that less is being sown each year. The outlook, as seen by the seedsmen, is becoming serious. W. M.

STOCKS OF CLOVER SEEDS.

From a table compiled by the bureau of markets of the Department of Agriculture from schedules mailed to approximately 3,500 shippers of red, alsike and sweet clover, alfalfa and timothy seed, a good comparison is obtained of stocks in shippers' hands December 13, 1919, and December 14, 1918, and of shipments and prices for the 1918 and 1919 crops.

The stocks of each of these seeds in the hands of shippers were somewhat larger December 13, 1919, than they were a year ago. The differences, however, were rather small. The estimated shipments of 1919 crop seed were found to be larger in the case of alsike and sweet clover and timothy, and to be smaller in the case of red clover and alfalfa. The difference in alfalfa shipments was most marked, the shipments of 1919 crop seed being only about seventy-five per cent of those for the 1918 crop, and in a few of the largest producing sections the shipments were less than twenty per cent of the 1918 shipments. Red clover shipments of the 1919 crop were indicated to be ten per cent less than those of the 1918 crop, whereas those for the 1919 crop of timothy were shown to be eighteen per cent more than 1918 crop shipments.

Growers received about $10.75 more per hundred pounds for red clover, $15.25 more for alsike clover, $6.25 more for sweet clover, $13.50 more for alfalfa and $1.90 more for timothy of the 1919 crop than for seed of the 1918 crop.

exhibition sorts and fully tested commercial varieties. The first few pages contain pictures and descriptions of five new varieties originated by the company.

Henry Mette, Quedlinburg, Germany.—"Trade Catalogue of Vegetable, Flower and Farm Seeds," ninety-six large, closely printed pages, with only one illustration. The offerings of flower seeds are especially comprehensive, occupying all but the first eight pages. The prices are quoted in English currency.

Geo. B. McVay, Jr., Birmingham, Ala.—"Southern Farmers' Guide," an illustrated catalogue of seeds, bulbs, plants, nursery stock, garden tools, etc.; sixty-four pages and colored cover. Among the distinctively southern seeds, nine varieties of cotton seed are listed.

Holmes-Letherman Seed Co., Canton, O.—"Holco Quality Seed Book," illustrated; ninety-six pages, in a handsome, colored cover of the offset type. In addition to extensive stocks of seeds, the book offers most of the related lines of merchandise, including ornamental nursery stock.

Willis E. Fryer, Mantorville, Minn.—"Special List of Fryer's New Iris," a 12-page booklet, in pocket form. The list includes, says Mr. Fryer, "the second offering of my new Glory strain of bearded iris."

Louis Graton, Whitman, Mass.—"The St. Martin Strawberry," an illustrated, well printed, 12-page circular, descriptive of this one variety of strawberry, with the price of the plants and "a word of caution to the novice."

Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, Pa.—Two catalogues, general and wholesale, both of the same high grade as in previous years. The general catalogue, or eighty-second annual edition of "Dreer's Garden Book," is of the same size as last year's issue—224 pages, besides the colored inserts—and its contents are so well arranged and so wide in scope as to make a strong appeal to all classes of florists and gardeners. The cover is blue and gold. The wholesale list, for market gardeners, comprises many of the most essential items in its thirty-two pages.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

HENRY B. CHASE, president of the Chase Nursery Co., Chase, Ala., is in California.

INSTEAD of increasing the agricultural appropriation, the House trimmed it to half of last year's; so there is little chance of the nursery crop reporting being done this year.

AT the meeting of the Ohio State Horticultural Society at Columbus last week, H. S. Day, of Fremont, president of the Ohio Nurserymen's Association, and T. B. West, of Perry, were speakers.

JOHN WATSON, executive secretary of the American Association of Nurserymen, stopped in Chicago on his way home from Kansas City to make hotel arrangements for the convention in June.

THE Marble City Nursery Co., Knoxville, Tenn., has been incorporated with a capital of $50,000. The incorporators are A. A. Newson, W. F. Newson, Mary E. Newson, E. E. Rutherford and J. W. Green.

M. J. CROWE, of Gilroy, Cal., has purchased fifty acres of land three miles west of Oakdale, Cal., and will use this tract for the growing of the bulk of his nursery stock, specializing in figs, almonds and raisin grapes.

WESTERN ASSOCIATION.

Holds Record Meeting.

The thirtieth annual meeting of the Western Association of Nurserymen was held at the Hotel Baltimore, Kansas City, January 28 and 29. There were eighty-three members present from seventeen states, the largest attendance the association has had, and the meeting was one of the most interesting ever held.

The officers elected were as follows: President, E. P. Bernardin, Parsons, Kan.; vice-president, E. H. Smith, York, Neb.; secretary and treasurer, George W. Holsinger, Rosedale, Kan. The executive committee is composed of H. D. Simpson, Vincennes, Ind.; C. G. Marshall, Arlington, Neb.; C. C. Mayhew, Sherman, Tex.; E. E. May, Shenandoah, Ia., and J. H. Skinner, Topeka, Kan.

One of the most important matters considered by the members was the market development campaign, for which a considerable sum of money has been raised by nurserymen all over the country. John Watson, of Princeton, N. J., secretary of the American Association of Nurserymen, was present and gave an outline of some of the work planned for the coming year in this campaign. Moving pictures will be one means of giving publicity to this development work.

The federal quarantine was considered at length by the convention. A symposium of six papers on "Ethics of Nurserymen," from the standpoint of wholesaler, retailer, salesman and other branches of the business, was given. The complete list of addresses was given in The Review last week.

Next year's meeting will be held in Kansas City, as is customary, January 26 and 27.

NEW ENGLAND NURSERYMEN.

Meet at Boston.

The annual convention of the New England Nurserymen's Association was held at the New American House, Boston, January 27 and 28, and was well attended. Several prominent men on the program, including J. Edward Moon, E. F. Coe and Paul Stark, were prevented by illness from attending. W. H. Wyman was in Florida, and the deep snow, severe cold and transportation delays kept some others at home.

Following a roll call of members, President C. R. Burr read his address, which was full of humor and contained some excellent suggestions. He said that all fears of Quarantine 37 had not been realized and some modifications seemed probable; that the corn borer legislation was dangerous and the association should work with the A. A. N. in combating this and other injurious legislation; that nurserymen should have the nerve to ask more for their stock and pay employees more. He also counseled members not to overplant and urged a standard price for nursery stock.

For the legislative committee, J. K. M. L. Farquhar paid his respects in vigorous terms to the Federal Horticultural Board and Quarantine 37. He said that he considered the quarantine only an entering wedge. C. H. Greaton and others denounced the quarantine, and a motion that the association again enter its emphatic protest against Quarantine 37 was passed with a solitary dissenting voice. The resolution was ordered forwarded to the F. H. B.

Excellent Papers.

Winthrop Thurlow furnished a fine paper on what could be imported and how. In the resulting discussion, H. P.

74 YEARS W. & T. SMITH COMPANY 1000 ACRES

GENEVA, N. Y.

Kelsey, P. V. Fortmiller and others took part. P. V. Fortmiller, speaking for Jackson & Perkins Co., said that his firm imported four carloads of nursery stock, which arrived early in December. The size of the shipment dismayed the F. H. B. and, instead of the goods going to Washington, they were inspected at the nurseries.

Harlan P. Kelsey, in his paper, said, among other things, that he allowed landscape men fifteen per cent commission, nurserymen twenty-five or thirty per cent when they called for their stock. E. W. Breed, C. H. Greaton, Charles Adams, John Baker and others discussed standardization of prices, and from thirty-three to fifty per cent seemed to be the ruling wholesale commission given. It was generally agreed, however, that present prices were too low.

Kenneth Gillett's paper on "New England Plants for New England Gardens" was a masterpiece. He devoted his whole time to rock plants and named a wealth of splendid material available, giving cultural hints for each. Among other plants, he specially commended hepaticas, trilliums, sanguinarias, claytonias, coptis, dicentras, houstonias, thalictrums, pyrolas, tiarellas, saxifragas, violas, cypripediums, gaultherias, asarums, epigæas, actæas, polygonatums, smilacinas, campanulas and many evergreen cover plants and ferns as adaptable for this form of gardening. The lecturer answered many questions, his talk provoking a good discussion.

Favor Daylight Saving.

The question of daylight saving came up and the association, with only twelve dissenters, voted in favor of it for 1920, The question of protection for raisers of new plants in the form of a royalty caused an animated discussion. H. P. Kelsey said such a law was feasible and eminently proper. Some agreed, while others were dubious on the subject. A slogan for nurserymen also created a lively exchange of views. That one similar to that used by the florists was desirable was admitted. It was finally decided to have a committee canvass members for slogans and work in conjunction with the American Association of Nurserymen in securing a suitable one from a first-class designer.

A banquet closed the first day's proceedings and proved quite enjoyable. W. G. Wyman, as song leader, proved inimitable. Fred Clark proved to be a splendid entertainer.

Election of Officers.

Officers were elected January 28, as follows: President, Charles Adams, Springfield, Mass.; vice-president, J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Boston; secretary, Sheldon M. Robinson, Lexington, Mass.; treasurer, V. A. Vanicek, Newport, R. I.; executive committee, C. R. Burr, Manchester, Conn.; A. P. Horne, Manchester, N. H.; C. E. Dow, Bar Harbor, Maine.

White Marsh, Maryland

The fruit tree situation brought up a thorough discussion. No stocks were coming from France as in former years. C. Vander Voët, of the Arnold Arboretum, suggested Pyrus Koreanum as a good stock to use; seedlings 6 months old were large enough to graft. Paul V. Fortmiller said Manetti stock was scarce. His firm ordered 200,000 abroad and secured 87,000 at a much advanced price. A general discussion over the labor situation took place. H. P. Kelsey and others thought a profit-sharing plan and giving employees an interest in the business should come. Winthrop Thurlow said his firm employed only English-speaking workmen and furnished rubber boots and wateproof suits for use in bad weather. In this way time lost was greatly reduced.

Quarantine 37 again came in for much discussion and it was voted to appoint a committee to work with the American Association of Nurserymen and other organizations in demanding a letting down of the bars. A leeture on the corn borer by an expert brought out facts to prove that the dangerous nature of this pest had been tremendously exaggerated. E. I. Farrington closed the second day's proceedings with an illustrated lecture on "What's New in the Garden." Boston will again be the meeting place in 1921.

The Market.

The weather has been warm and the sun has been shining every day for the last two weeks. Consequently, the growers have been bringing in extra heavy cuts of roses and carnations. But in spite of this, at the end of the day everything is sold out. Snapdragons and Paper Whites are being used in funeral work. The first pussy willows of the season appeared this week. Callas are good, but there are not enough on hand to supply the demand. Tulips, jonquils, freesias, violets and sweet peas are among the other offerings. Some choice orchids are to be had. There are also some cinerarias, primulas, obconicas, Primula malacoides and yellow callas to be had.

Various Notes.

All indications point to a record supply of Easter lilies this year, as a larger number of bulbs have been planted than ever before, and they are all well rooted and are progressing in good shape.

William Kash was knocked unconscious when an automobile struck the bicycle that he was riding from his home to his place of business. He was taken to the County hospital, where it was thought that his skull was fractured, but fortunately the injury was not so serious and he was able to leave the hospital the next day.

The death of Frederick Simon, secretary of the Crown Hill Cemetery Association, at his home January 18 is recorded in this week's obituary column.

COAL PRODUCTION PICKS UP.

Bituminous coal production during the week ended January 17 was 11,155,000 tons, the greatest January week production in three years, the Geological Survey announced in its weekly report. Up to January 17 the bituminous mines of the country have produced 4,000,000 tons more coal than they did last year, despite some still apparent effects of the nation-wide strike evidenced in the form of car shortages.

WITH HOT WATER OR STEAM.

We are building a house 36x100 feet. It has 7-foot gutters, with three feet of glass in each side wall, and is a separate house with concrete walls. We have some 2½-inch and 2-inch pipe that we want to use in heating this house and we thought of running one 2½-inch flow down the center of the house and using 2-inch returns under the benches. how many 2-inch returns will be required to heat the house to 60 degrees with an outside temperature of 10 degrees below zero? R. M. H.—Ind.

If hot water is to be used as the heating medium, it would not be possible to secure good results with one 2½-inch flow pipe. About 1,500 square feet of radiation will be required for maintaining a temperature of 60 degrees in the house described. While it would be possible to get along with four 2½-inch flow pipes, or even with three, I should advise that five 2½-inch flows be used. If the amount of 2½-inch pipe on hand is not sufficient for five flows, some of the 2-inch pipe may be substituted. Two 2½-inch and four 2-inch flows would give good results.

The number of benches is not stated, but I judge that there are about five, with six walks. I suggest running one flow pipe upon each wall plate, another two or three feet below the ridge and the others on the purlin posts.

Eighteen 2-inch returns will be required. If five flows are used I should use four returns upon each side wall, or under each side bench if they are built against the walls, and should distribute the other returns under the other benches.

In case steam heat is to be used, although I should prefer to use 1¼-inch pipes for the returns, it will answer to put in one 2½-inch overhead flow pipe and ten or eleven 2-inch returns, placing two or three under each bench.

PIPING WITH SOLID BEDS.

On the basis of the sketch and data which we enclose concerning our range, what arrangement of piping would you suggest? We shall use solid beds; consequently most of the returns will have to be run on the wall, although some can be run on purlin posts if the heat would be better distributed in that way. Would 1½-inch pipe make satisfactory returns in this case? We have about 800 feet of this on hand and should like to use it if possible. Would you advise the installation of a mercury generator? At what level, in relation to the bottom of the returns, can boilers be set, when a mercury generator is used? We do not want to make the boiler pit any

Repair that Leaky or Cracked Boiler Without Shutting Off the Heat

EVERY greenhouse man who has ever had a leaky or cracked boiler knows what a lot of time, trouble and money that means.

Yet all the fuss and worry attendant upon the old-fashioned method of repairing is now entirely unnecessary.

"X"—the wonderful Boiler Liquid—will do $200.00 worth of repair work for $10.00; and do it in about half an hour.

"X" Is a Scientific Process of Repairing Without Dismantling or Welding

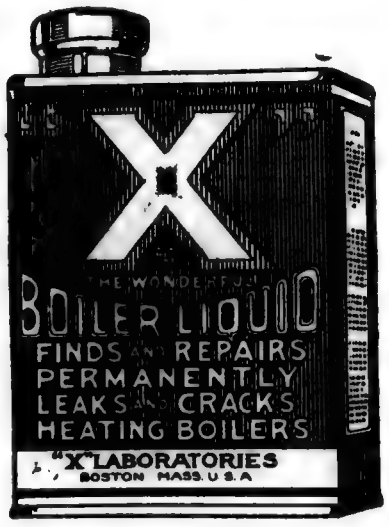
"X" is an absolute liquid. It is simply poured into the boiler and instantly combines itself with the water. In sizzling out through the leak or crack the "X" is changed by the atmospheric oxygen into a metal-like solid, making a permanent repair. This repair is gradually hardened by the heat in the boiler, so that it stands a pressure of over one-quarter of a ton.

The surplus "X" that remains in the water automatically stops all new leaks due to expansion or other causes. In this way "X" Liquid makes the boiler (and in a hot water system, the entire system) absolutely LEAKPROOF.

Makes Boilers Rustproof and Scaleproof Saves Coal

The chemical composition of "X" Liquid is such that it absorbs all free oxygen in the water. This prevents the metal from Rusting. "X" also prevents the lime and other scale-forming elements in the water from depositing layers of Scale on the walls. "X" keeps the boiler Rustproof and Scaleproof.

"X" does not evaporate or lose its strength with age. When new water is added it combines itself with this water and performs its functions again and again.



"X" contains no cement, powder or other injurious ingredients. It cannot clog the air valves; in fact it makes frequent repacking of valves unnecessary.

A Strong Guarantee!

You take no chance in using "X" Liquid. It is unconditionally guaranteed to make good. If it fails you get a new can—or your money back.

But your greatest guarantee of the value of "X" is the fact that it is used, sold and recommended by 99 per cent of the manufacturers of boilers and radiators. It is used by the U. S. Government.

If your boiler cracks or leaks this winter you don't have to worry about your greenery—if you keep a can of "X" Liquid handy. Just get a can of "X" and do the repair job yourself.

Get "X" Liquid from your steamfitter, or we will ship, charges prepaid, on receipt of price.

deeper than is necessary, because of poor drainage. We shall use two hot water boilers, each having a radiation power of 2,700 square feet, connected in battery and valved. How is this usually done? Would 6-inch pipe be large enough for the manifolds at the boilers? We have about 400 feet of 3-inch pipe, which we can use for flows.

other two houses are built ridge and furrow, without partitions. The outer walls consist of three feet of glass and three feet of boards. A temperature of 50 degrees is desired when it is 10 degrees below zero outside.

While 2½-inch pipes would be preferable for the flows and 2-inch for the returns, it will answer if you install the 3-inch pipe now on hand for a part of the flow pipes and the 1½-inch pipe as returns, especially if it is necessary to put on a mercury generator, as would be advisable unless the boiler can be dropped so that the grate will be at least two feet below the lowest part of the returns.

For the new houses, run a 3-inch flow on each of the side wall plates. For the returns use in each house six 2-inch pipes in a coil on the outer wall and four 1½-inch and one 2-inch on the inner walls.

Although it is not possible to use pipes for furnishing bottom heat when the house has solid beds, it is often worth while to run one or more pipes either in the walks on the sides of the beds or overhead. If this is desired, it would be well to use as a flow pipe in each house the 2-inch return now on the inner wall and two of the 2-inch returns now on the outer walls could be arranged as returns on the sides of the beds.

With the boiler set at the ground level or nearly so, the circulation will be improved if these returns are on the purlin posts over the beds.

Whether generators are used or not, the higher the returns as compared with the level of the grate, the better will be the circulation. Even with a generator, it is advisable either to lower the boiler or to elevate the returns so that the radiation will all be above the grates.

For heating the three houses, including the main flow and return pipes, nearly 3,000 square feet of radiation will be required. Even in the most severe weather it should be possible to keep the temperature at 50 degrees with one of the two boilers, thus leaving one boiler in reserve. However, it may be more economical of fuel to use both boilers in zero weather.

I should suggest running the flow and return connections with the boiler into 6-inch flow and return manifolds, with valves so that either boiler can be cut out if necessary. A 4-inch main flow and a main return of the same size should be run to the old house. The new houses may be connected with the 6-inch manifold in the same way or the flows and returns in these houses can be joined directly with the manifold.

DRY STEAM GIVES FULL HEAT VALUE

Fisher Steam Trap Keeps Steam Dry

The operation of a steam plant is a constant battle against Nature. You make steam of water. Nature seeks to change it back. Nature always succeeds. All mere man can do is retard Nature's process of re-conversion. As the steam leaves the boiler it is dry. It skids along through the mains and radiators and immediately their lower temperature causes it to commence shedding drops of water.

These drops drain to the nearest low spot and are soon joined by others. They form a pool to rob steam of its energy. If they aren't ousted quick, any steam passing that point loses its pep—has its ardor cooled.

It's "all wet"—in slang and reality.

Fisher Steam Trap, Type 33, aids you in the fight to preserve your steam. Our book "THE FISHER STEAM TRAP" tells why. Let us send it to you.

CINCINNATI, O.

The Market.

The latter part of last week showed an increase of business, though the beginning of the week was somewhat discouraging; with stock at top-notch prices and business slow, the outlook did not seem promising. In this vicinity the weather conditions are improving and, with increased sunshine and longer daylight hours, everyone in the retail business looks for a drop in prices. A drop in roses and carnations is expected the coming week and no doubt sweet peas will follow.

Sweet peas are arriving in larger quantities and are better in quality than in previous years. The best are now quoted at $3 per hundred and no doubt this price will be standard until after St. Valentine's day. Other grades are from $2 to $2.50 per hundred.

Carnations hold steady around $12, while in some instances $15 per hundred is asked. Other grades are as low as $8 per hundred. This winter record prices have been asked for carnations. This is the poor man's flower, but at the prices asked few went into the workingman's home.

Various Notes.

Edward and Edgar Gude, sons of Adolph Gude, of Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C., spent two days in Cincinnati on their way home from Chicago, where they attended the American Carnation Society meeting. J. A. Peterson, an old friend of the family, was their guide around the trade.

Louis Pfeiffer & Sons have some choice cyclamen plants, which find ready sale. Princess of Wales violets are arriving now and will be in good shape for St. Valentine's day. H. E. K.

E. M. Newhart has two acres of land in the residence section of the city and has stocked this tract with field-grown roses and hardy flowers.

The Cuyahoga Greenhouse Co., of Brooklyn Heights, has increased its capitalization from $50,000 to $100,000.

The Market.

Exceptionally fine and sunny weather prevailing during the latter part of last week resulted in a better supply of cut flowers on this market. Roses and carnations were again more plentiful and, if the good weather continues, the outlook is promising for good crops. The demand still exceeds the supply, though the funeral work is no larger than normal for this time of the year, as the flu has not been strong here. The outlook is fine both for the retailer and the grower. The first freesias and stocks have appeared. Sweet peas and calendulas are of good quality.

Various Notes.

August R. Baumer moved last week into his new residence, on Eastern parkway. His store force is kept on the jump with many shipping orders.

The F. Walker Co., 312 Chestnut street, displayed some beautiful orchids and some heather direct from California. Flowers from this part of the country are appearing more often on the local market.

Marret & Miller have had an exceedingly busy week. Their hall and table decorations at the Seelbach hotel, for a party of 200, were excellent, consisting of ferns, red carnations and narcissi for the tables, and palms for the hall.

The greenhouses of Jacob Schulz Co., on Cherokee road, are well stocked with plants in good condition. William Schulz has some seedling begonias, which, because they are of quicker growth than Chatelaine begonias and produce larger flowers and heavier foliage, are promising. They also do not damp off so easily as Chatelaine begonias do. His sweet peas are in fine shape and a batch of Holland lilies of the valley was a treat for the eye.

The William Walker Co. greenhouses at Ormsby are in fine condition. This company is having a splendid cut of roses, with Columbia an easy favorite. Carnations are showing up again. The first snapdragons are making their appearance and white buddleia, rainbow freesias and calendulas are helping to fill the demand at this store. William Walker, Sr., and Mr. Weller, manager of the store, were visitors at the carnation show in Chicago.

Edith Walker & Bro., on Fourth avenue, have a nice display of small orange trees in pots, which are loaded with fruits. Both funerals and social affairs are keeping their force busy, and their specialty of made-up baskets gives them a large part of the transient trade. B.

LOWELL, MASS.

The Market.

The demand for cut flowers last week was heavy, chiefly owing to the funerals of several prominent people. Cut flowers of all kinds were scarce and were used up as fast as they appeared.

It is not likely that pot roses, such as ramblers, will be plentiful for Easter, since that day comes so early and since the plants were weaker and especially scarce in the fall of 1919. In fact, scarcity is to be expected in most lines for Easter. Bulbs were late in getting to the hands of growers and did not make much root in the early part of the winter.

Various Notes.

Clayton Colby is again with Morse & Beals. This firm was displaying last week some pans of fine cypripediums and sweet peas.

Mr. Moriarty, of Harvey B. Greene's establishment, attended the funeral of a brother, who was in the trade for a number of years, at Lawrence January 24.

Mrs. James J. McManmon and one of her daughters were confined to their home with colds last week. Several of the force of this firm were away from work, including a chauffeur, a teamster and greenhouse help.

Too many ciphers made the statement in this news-letter January 15 of the violet sales of Morse & Beals at Christmas time far above the actual figures. Regret is that the number was inaccurate and the sales were not so large.

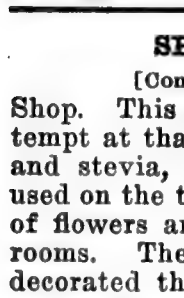
Shop. This was the store's initial attempt at that kind of work. Red roses and stevia, arranged in baskets, were used on the tables, with palms and vases of flowers artistically placed about the rooms. The Woodlawn Flower Shop decorated the Armory, using Chadwick chrysanthemums.

The Hollywood Gardens have had an excellent week in funeral work. Mr. Peterson has been handicapped during a busy week by the illness of three of his assistants. Mr. Holmes is confined to his bed with the grip and Mrs. Dunlop has just undergone an operation.

Rosaia Bros. have a fine collection of azaleas on display in their store, with cyclamens, primroses and a good showing of cut flowers. During the last week business has been exceptionally good with them. An attractive blanket was made of pink sweet peas, freesias and Aaron Ward roses by George Rosaia.



The Woodlawn Flower Shop also had a good week for funeral work, which kept Mr. Clark, who was formerly with the Woodland Park Floral Co., busy in his position as general buyer. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson have returned from their winter's vacation much refreshed.

During the last week, Miss Wharton, Mrs. Minch, W. S. Goldbary and F. Rosaia have made visits to Portland.

The Washington Floral Co. lost several hundred cyclamen plants when the supports of a bench collapsed.

Gus. Berkman is returning to Butte, Mont., to take charge of the range of the Butte Floral Co. It is reported that Frank Chervinka will leave Butte upon the arrival of Mr. Berkman.

Hans Niklas, of Portland, was a visitor last week. P. T. C.

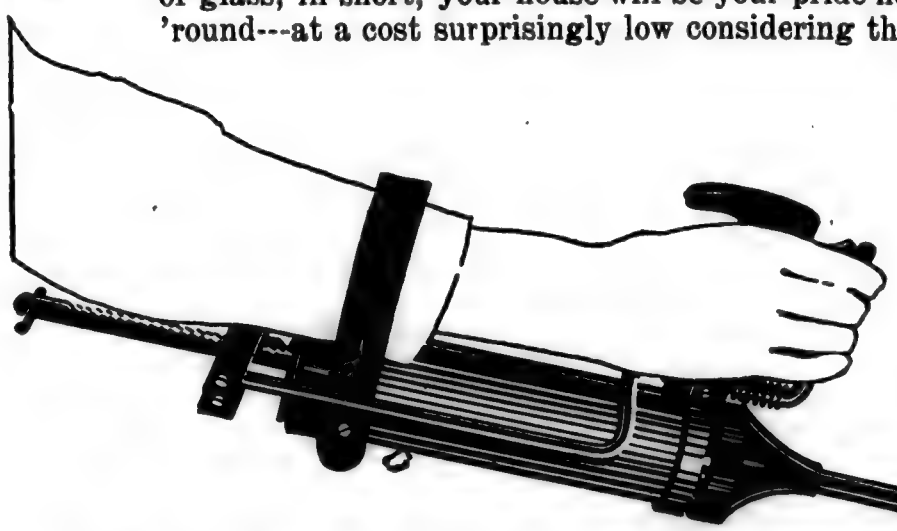
Permanite



(Trade-mark registered U. S. Patent Office.)

The Greenhouse Man's Pride

Sunday—Visitors' Day!

Will you be proud to show your friends around your plant---will you have everything snug and tight or will there be a leak in the sash here and a crack in a light there or something else that shouldn't be so?

You need not worry about these things with Permanite on the job; there will be no leaks in the sash because Permanite will keep them everlastingly tight; there will be no cracks in the glass because Permanite gives with the expansion and contraction of the house and prevents breakage of glass; in short, your house will be your pride not only Sunday and week-days but all the year 'round---at a cost surprisingly low considering the length of time Permanite will be on the job.

Remember this when you buy your next supply of Greenhouse Putty and insist on the Best---PERMANITE.

SAN FRANCISCO NOTES.

violets and is shipping many of them, along with an excellent crop of freesias from the McLellan nurseries. The daffodil fields which supply this company each year are now cutting and Mr. Avansino expects a good crop.

J. A. Axell is receiving some fine cineraria plants grown by the Hillsborough Nursery. He is busy with local trade, as well as his constantly growing shipping business.

The United Flower & Supply Co. will soon be able to offer a good selection of spring flowers. Already the freesia crop is being cut, while daffodils, narcissi, etc., are getting into first-class shape for shipping purposes.

Domoto Bros. are bringing in a large number of cineraria plants from their own nursery and are still able to offer flowering azalea plants. Mr. Domoto states that the force at the nursery is busy at the present time planting lily bulbs. It is the opinion of the trade that Easter lilies will be high in price this year, due, among other things, to the shortage of bulbs imported this season.

The staff of Enomoto & Co. is busy with spring flower shipments and Mr. Enomoto reports an unusually good supply of violets and daffodils.

Fred Smith, Sr., of Tacoma, Wash., has been visiting in California during the last week or so. He is accompanied by Mrs. Smith, and Sunday, January 25, while in San Francisco, they were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Gooch. They also paid Los Angeles a visit and expect to leave for the northwest within the next few days.

Jacob Dieterich, of Los Angeles, was a visitor in San Francisco last week.

Gen. A. J. Gooch reports satisfaction with his shipping business and has only one complaint to make, that of stock shortage. At present he is supplying points in the northwest with acacia blooms, for which there is a brisk demand.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. reports a rush of funeral work. Last week two exceptionally attractive pieces were made up. One, a wreath of maidenhair, cattleyas and white freesias, was particularly delicate and artistic. The second was a shield made of purple heather sprays and pink roses, with a Masonic emblem of violets in the center on a white background.

Robert Newcomb made a trip to the trans-bay nurseries last week and mentioned the particularly fine cyclamen crop of H. Hayashi & Co.

Jaeger & Son, on Powell street, have been busy with funerals, having turned out three palls in one day, two being made of violets and freesias and one of carnations and violets.

Table decorations and funeral work formed the bulk of A. O. Stein's business last week. This shop has felt the scarcity of roses, although the spring flowers have helped out considerably.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

HERE'S A GOOD ONE

Everyone who grows single Pompons knows Mrs. E. D. Godfrey. It has been the best late pink variety. Now comes a sport of Godfrey, its name is:

ANNABEL

It is a sturdier grower with exceptionally good foliage. Has long stiff stems, well branched. Have cut stems with seventeen flowers and buds running up to 3½ in. across. Unusually good keeper in bench or when cut. Color, a beautiful cerise, tending toward lavender. Flowers of anemone type with several rows of petals, and yellow center. DAHLIAS—Continued.

MAUDE ADAMS, the florists' coming money maker is this grand new Dahlia, the freest bloomer I have ever seen. Hot or cold, wet or dry, heavy soil or light soil, poor soil or rich soil, this Dahlia produces salable flowers by the dozens from one plant. Color clear white, overlaid and suffused with delicate La France pink; each petal is heavily tipped with the same color, and the center of the flower is a solid pink. This Dahlia is of the ball or show type, never shows an open center, and is a grand keeper. The flowers are held erect on stems averaging eighteen inches to two feet in length and which are extremely strong for their size. The position of the flowers on the stems is exactly right for packing and design work. As a garden variety it is one of the best. Secure stock of this new variety before it is too late. Strong clumps, 50c each, $5.00 per doz., $35.00 per 100. Strong divisions, $3.50 per doz., $20.00 per 100. All postpaid.

Get my spring bulb list of this and other wonderful new Dahlias and Gladioli for florists' use.

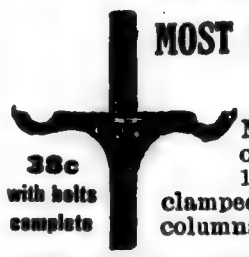
CHATELAINE BEGONIA.

My begonias, Gloire de Chatelaine, grew and bloomed well until they were shifted to 5-inch pots and then the tips of the flowering wood dried up. They do not seem to be shooting up any more flowering wood growth. They were potted in a compost of one-third well rotted manure, one-third sand and one-third clay loam. They were grown in a temperature of 50 degrees at night and 65 degrees during the day. Kindly advise me what the trouble may be.
G. S. F.—Pa.



This begonia is usually of easy culture and it is a really all-the-year-around bloomer. Like all other begonias, it likes a rather light but fairly rich soil. I am afraid that your soil is too heavy and that your compost was not made up properly. If your loam is heavy and clayey in nature I should prefer to use one-third of this and two-thirds of leaf-mold, with a good dash of sharp sand added to give the compost porosity. If you can get a light loam, use one-half of this, one-third leaf-mold and the balance of old, well pulverized manure and sand. Your temperature is all right and if you will use a lighter compost you will have no further trouble of the nature indicated in your letter.
C. W.

SOIL FOR PRIMULA SEED.

Will you kindly inform me what kind of soil to use for primula seed? Is it better to sow the seeds in large pots?
A. J. W.—O.

Primulas and other flowering annuals want a light soil when sown. One composed of three-fourths leaf-mold (rotted leaves) and one-fourth loam, with some sand added, will be found about right. Make the surface even, then sow the seeds and press with a small piece of board gently. Later scatter a little sand on top, just enough to cover the seeds. Use shallow pans or flats with good drainage for seed sowing. After watering, cover with a sheet of glass and use paper over this until the seedlings appear. Water carefully and place pans or flats in a warm, moist house.

—and you know

W. A. Amling, of Pana, Illinois

The name Amling needs no introduction to the florists' trade, either here or abroad. For the tribe of Amling has flourished in the front rank of the craft since its beginning.

W. A. (better known as Walter) Amling is a son of the late W. H. Amling, of Maywood, Illinois, and a nephew of Albert F. Amling, of Maywood, for whom the AGMCO built nine Steel Frame Houses, 44x550. Reared from infancy in the heart of one of the greatest greenhouse centers in the country, Walter Amling has an intimate knowledge of greenhouses and the growing game that amounts almost to an instinct in discerning the best. He is a grower in the broadest sense of the word and has studied greenhouses from the grower's standpoint, not only in Illinois, but in every growing center. To perfect his knowledge he made special trips to the leading plants and took voluminous notes of good and bad points, digested them and stored them away for future reference. For he knew, and so did all the wise ones, that he would some day be a big builder of large greenhouse ranges.

With his greenhouse observations and study completed and all elements of chance removed from his building problems, he, his brothers and Mr. Berlin formed a corporation and placed with the AGMCO an order for

7 Steel frame houses, 36x300 feet

Four of these are finished and three are in process of erection.

These seven houses represent the most famous type of cut flower house built. Houses giving the greatest economy of operation combined with moderate cost of building. A complete and highly efficient heating system is assured by the AGMCO heating specialists.

But here's the point—everyone can't spend the time and money spent by Walter Amling investigating every phase of greenhouse construction, so why not steal a march on circumstances and profit by his knowledge—cash in on his investment of time and money?

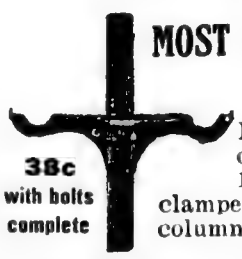
CHATELAINE BEGONIA.

My begonias, Gloire de Chatelaine, grew and bloomed well until they were shifted to 5-inch pots and then the tips of the flowering wood dried up. They do not seem to be shooting up any more flowering wood growth. They were potted in a compost of one-third well rotted manure, one-third sand and one-third clay loam. They were grown in a temperature of 50 degrees at night and 65 degrees during the day. Kindly advise me what the trouble may be.
G. S. F.—Pa.



This begonia is usually of easy culture and it is a really all-the-year-around bloomer. Like all other begonias, it likes a rather light but fairly rich soil. I am afraid that your soil is too heavy and that your compost was not made up properly. If your loam is heavy and clayey in nature I should prefer to use one-third of this and two-thirds of leaf-mold, with a good dash of sharp sand added to give the compost porosity. If you can get a light loam, use one-half of this, one-third leaf-mold and the balance of old, well pulverized manure and sand. Your temperature is all right and if you will use a lighter compost you will have no further trouble of the nature indicated in your letter.
C. W.

SOIL FOR PRIMULA SEED.

Will you kindly inform me what kind of soil to use for primula seed? Is it better to sow the seeds in large pots?
A. J. W.—O.

Primulas and other flowering annuals want a light soil when sown. One composed of three-fourths leaf-mold (rotted leaves) and one-fourth loam, with some sand added, will be found about right. Make the surface even, then sow the seeds and press with a small piece of board gently. Later scatter a little sand on top, just enough to cover the seeds. Use shallow pans or flats with good drainage for seed sowing. After watering, cover with a sheet of glass and use paper over this until the seedlings appear. Water carefully and place pans or flats in a warm, moist house.

W. A. Amling,

of Pana, Illinois

The name Amling needs no introduction to the florists' trade, either here or abroad. For the tribe of Amling has flourished in the front rank of the craft since its beginning.

W. A. (better known as Walter) Amling is a son of the late W. H. Amling, of Maywood, Illinois, and a nephew of Albert F. Amling, of Maywood, for whom the AGMCO built nine Steel Frame Houses, 44x550. Reared from infancy in the heart of one of the greatest greenhouse centers in the country, Walter Amling has an intimate knowledge of greenhouses and the growing game that amounts almost to an instinct in discerning the best. He is a grower in the broadest sense of the word and has studied greenhouses from the grower's standpoint, not only in Illinois, but in every growing center. To perfect his knowledge he made special trips to the leading plants and took voluminous notes of good and bad points, digested them and stored them away for future reference. For he knew, and so did all the wise ones, that he would some day be a big builder of large greenhouse ranges.

With his greenhouse observations and study completed and all elements of chance removed from his building problems, he, his brothers and Mr. Berlin formed a corporation and placed with the AGMCO an order for

7 Steel frame houses, 36x300 feet

Four of these are finished and three are in process of erection.

These seven houses represent the most famous type of cut flower house built. Houses giving the greatest economy of operation combined with moderate cost of building. A complete and highly efficient heating system is assured by the AGMCO heating specialists.

But here's the point—everyone can't spend the time and money spent by Walter Amling investigating every phase of greenhouse construction, so why not steal a march on circumstances and profit by his knowledge — cash in on his investment of time and money?

INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS AND TABLE OF CONTENTS--PAGES TWO AND THREE

Greenhouse Builders

The house at the left was the first one.

It was the one that convinced Mr. Mueller that a Lord & Burnham house was the house to build.

The two at the right are the new ones.

This is a close-up of the short house.

All are 50 ft. wide and have but one column, but you should see the arrangement and strength of the roof framing.

Mueller Builds More Side Hillers

It was just at daybreak, when I tumbled out of the sleeper at St. Joseph, Missouri, and asked a taxi driver if he knew Ernest Mueller, the greenhouse man.

"Sure," says he, "Mueller's the man who has the Pierce Arrow trucks with the big air-filled tires."

We got there before our friend Mueller had finished his breakfast, for which he had every reason to be annoyed. But you see I remembered how delightfully good-humored he was on a former visit, and so figured that his continued good nature could be depended on.

"Say, friend," says I, "how ever came you to build any more Lord & Burnham houses?

Didn't you learn your lesson when you bought that first one?"

"That's just it," says he, "I did learn my lesson. That's exactly why Lord & Burnham got the order for two more."

"We had some friends at the house the other night and while having some snacks together, one of my boys said something that's exactly what I'd said if he'd given me a chance. He said: When Dad built his first house we thought L. & B. would be altogether too toppy for us; just as we thought a Pierce Arrow truck would be rank extravagance.

When it came to building the second house, we had learned a lot and gave the job to L. & B. We also found out that cheap trucks cost too much money in repair bills. So now we have Pierce Arrow trucks and Lord & Burnham greenhouses. Each the best of its kind. Of course, they do cost a lot. And then again they don't, when you come to figure the service they give and the low cost of repairs."

To which let me add, wish I could tell you a lot of other things about that early morning call, but will have to put it off for another time.

If you want to talk building, say when and where and we'll be there.

BUSINESS HOURS:

Closed All Day Sunday

This merchant finds it easy to make out his income tax report

HE has a checking account at the bank and he uses an up-to-date National Cash Register.

From his bank check book and his bills he gets the cost of running his store, cost of merchandise bought, and a record of payments made.

From his National Cash Register he gets a record of ① cash sales, ② charge sales, ③ received on account, ④ petty cash paid out, and ⑤ clerks' sales.

These records give him control over his business every day of the year.

This merchant knows that his register records are complete and accurate, whether they are made when business in his store is quiet or when there is a rush of selling.

Without an up-to-date National Cash Register, these necessary figures would be hard to get, hard to keep, impossible to verify, and expensive to record.

An up-to-date National Cash Register will give you the records you need to control your business.

Another Step Forward

Burpee's New Primulinus Hybrid Gladioli

The most graceful in form, artistic in color, and profuse in bloom of all gladioli.

These varieties have created a sensation wherever they have been exhibited. They are destined to become most useful to the florist on account of their extraordinary appeal as cut flowers. The blooms are distinct and superior to the older types in their delicate form and pleasing arrangement. The individual flowers are not large, but are borne on long, slender stems, with a fascinating grace and refinement.

Furthermore, these new hybrids produce three, four, and sometimes even five fully developed and separate flower-spikes to a single bulb. This characteristic will make them the most profitable of all gladioli to grow.

We are fortunate in now being able to offer these Primulinus Hybrids for the first time in straight colors. Our collection comprises the six most desirable varieties for florists.

5324 Ada. Dainty white flowers with red center; early blooming and very prolific. 3 for 85 cts.; 6 for $1.50; 12 for $2.75; postage extra.

5328 Fire Queen. Dazzling orange-vermilion with delicate yellow in the throat. A striking variety, blooming in mid-season. Spikes three to four feet long. 3 for 75 cts.; 6 for $1.25; 12 for $2.25; postage extra.

5327 L'Unique. A wonderful combination of unusual colors. The general effect is bronze with orange yellow in the center. A strong grower and free bloomer. 3 for 75 cts.; 6 for $1.25; 12 for $2.25; postage extra.

5326 Mrs. Grullemans. A very early and continuous bloomer with clear, true yellow flowers artistically displayed on long stems. 3 for 75 cts.; 6 for $1.25; 12 for $2.25; postage extra.

5325 Queen Victoria. Glittering, bright pink shading into silvery rose in the throat. Flowers of largest size and wonderfully shaped. Very early and productive. A remarkable variety in every way. 3 for 85 cts.; 6 for $1.50; 12 for $2.75; postage extra.

5329 Violet Queen. Velvety violet, and outstanding color. Flowers beautifully shaped and carried on long, strong stems. Very early. 3 for 95 cts.; 6 for $1.65; 12 for $3.00; postage extra.

These varieties are offered exclusively by Burpee for the first time. Our supply is limited. Order early.

JELLE ROOS

Gladiolus Specialist Box A, Milton, Mass.

Reduction in Rose Prices

A GRADUAL decrease in prices of roses and other flowers can be expected right after St. Valentine's Day, as all conditions at the greenhouses point towards a larger cut of Roses.

We will give our customers the benefit of these reductions as fast as possible. Our regular customers know from experience that they are given promptly the benefit of any drop in prices. It is this square dealing, together with the exceptionally fine quality of our roses, that has built up our immense shipping trade. We invite those who wish to place regular shipping orders direct with the grower to give our stock and service a trial.

Find out by comparison the advantages of buying direct of a large grower. The value of his greenhouses is largely in his ability to satisfy his customers.

Carnations will continue short, as will the shorter length grade of Roses.

All miscellaneous flowers still are scarce, but we will do our best to buy any stock wanted which we do not grow ourselves and have on hand.

Vick's Famous Asters

Recognized Everywhere as the Standard of Quality

Wherever Asters are grown Vick's famous Aster seed is known and recognized as the standard of quality. JAMES VICK'S SONS are the largest growers of high grade Asters in the world and have been for years the undisputed leaders in introducing new varieties and in improving practically every other strain that is now commercially grown. This concern has introduced more new distinct varieties than all other American seedsmen combined. Cheaper seed can be grown elsewhere but better seed nowhere else. It would be an easy matter for us to fill in our stock with cheap seed grown in California or Europe, but we have no desire to descend from our present dominating position where we furnish only seed from transplanted plants grown from stock bred up by years of individual plant selection.

A VIEW OF ONE OF OUR ASTER FIELDS. WE GROW BETTER ASTERS THAN ANY OTHER GROWER IN THE WORLD.

A WORD OF WARNING

We have been asked by many of our friends and customers to make it clear that James Vick's Sons are connected in no way with any other Rochester seed house. This is the old original concern, founded by the late James Vick, who during his lifetime was recognized as one of the leading and best loved seedsmen in America. This is the concern that has introduced practically all of the best known strains of Asters, including Vick's Branching Asters, all the Rochesters, Royals, Imperials, Kings, Mikados—in fact there are very few varieties of American Asters in demand by the best growers that were not introduced by us. Let there be no confusion in your minds caused by misleading statements from any other source. If you want genuine Vick's Aster Seed and not seed of unknown origin grown in California or some other locality where cheap seeds are produced, be sure to address your letter to James Vick's Sons.

FLORISTS' ASTER BOOK

VICK'S SEED FARMS

Situated in one of the garden spots of America, where quality, hardiness and productiveness predominate—over six hundred acres devoted to growing high grade vegetable, farm and flower seeds.

If you grow or deal in flower or vegetable seeds, plants, bulbs, trees, etc., write and tell us about it. We desire the opportunity of showing you what Vick Service really is.

Stewart
MOTOR TRUCKS

Here it is!

The Truck Sensation for 1920

The new Stewart 2000-lb. Delivery Truck—electric lights, electric starter, magneto ignition, five-inch cord tires, chassis price, $1595

THE real event of the year in truck-building; a big, fast, flexible Stewart Delivery Truck—all truck from the ground up, and at a popular price. Not a bit of passenger car construction in it—every part designed by truck engineers for truck purposes only.

Fast for delivery and rush jobs; strong for the heavy hauling from railroad or warehouse; quick in the getaway; beautifully designed and balanced; no solid tires to rack the car and damage the goods; proof against sudden, hard shocks; ready for any weather and the toughest kind of going.

With all its rugged truck strength, this Stewart delivery truck handles and ticks off trips with the ease of a taxi. It has the speed, convenience and comfort of the frailer, half-breed passenger-car truck.

And this new Stewart is a wonderful buy. Its cost is low. Price others, add their "extras," and prove up the claim that this is America's greatest truck value.

And all the famous "less-cost-to-run" Stewart features are included—simple design, hundreds of needless parts eliminated; oilless bushings, doing away with 35 grease cups and the time filling them; heavy truck axles; cast tank radiator; front bumper; rebound spring plates; internal gear drive axle, delivering more than 92% of the engine power to the rear wheels—all features that have made the Stewart's world-wide reputation for economy.

No wonder that the Stewart 2000-lb. Delivery Truck was a hit at the national truck shows, and is a truck headliner for the year. It is the response of the Stewart engineers, after seven years of progressive truck-designing, to the demand of business for a double-utility truck, combining speed and convenience with durability and capacity—a truck that is ready for unusual needs and conditions, and continually surprises you in its actual performance.

The money to be made from this proposition the coming year is enormous. Will you get your share?

Below is a Show Me coupon which will bring you complete information. A two-cent investment will bring you big dividends.

Get Your Six Sets Of The Famous Super-Six

Here's an opportunity for you.

Six of the finest of Mr. Wintzer's famous "LILY-CANNAS" and six bulbs of each, all for one price.

These wonderful new sorts, with their enormous trusses and broad, satiny petals, will be a great addition to your stock for selling or for planting out.

These thirty-six roots, potted up now, to get a good start and set out in the Spring, will give you a good substantial stock of these fine new varieties at a nominal cost. Simply order the "Super-Six Set"—Price $4.

1 CITY OF PORTLAND, 3½ ft. Glowing pink, deeper in color than its parent, Mrs. Alfred F. Conard, and the flowers are produced in greatest profusion. Strong plants.

2 LAFAYETTE, 4 ft. Resembles the famous "Meteor," but the flowers are a more intense scarlet. The heads of bloom are carried erect above the healthy, green foliage, producing a brilliant effect in mass planting. Strong plants.

3 FLAG OF TRUCE, 4 ft. A large, cream-white Canna with faint pink dots on each petal and a sulphur-colored tongue. From a short distance the flowers appear pure white. Strong plants.

4 DRAGON, 2½ to 3 ft. An incessant bloomer which keeps sending up new bloom-stalks until cut down by frost. Dark, ox-blood red. Strong plants.

5 MORNING GLOW, 5 ft. Perhaps the fanciest of all our 1917 introductions. An imposing variety with green foliage and plants 5 feet high; of good habit, large clusters, flowers rich orange, petals broadly edged with pure pink.

6 GAIETY. Reddish orange, with a sharply contrasting band of yellow around edges of petals. Very distinct and showy. Free bloomer.

6 of each, 36 bulbs, for $3.60, here; or $4 delivered.

The President

THE PRESIDENT, height 4 ft. Color is a rich glowing scarlet and the immense, firm, rounded flowers 7 in. across when open, are produced on strong, erect stalks well above the large, rich green foliage. The President is superior to any other red variety in the quantity and also the quality of bloom, and the firm flowers are able to resist drought and heat to a remarkable degree. Mr. Wintzer says: "This is one of the most marvelous Cannas ever produced."
One, 50c; ten, $3; twenty-five, $6.

SNOW QUEEN, 4 ft. Here is a Canna of crystal bright whiteness! The flowers are large, 6 in. across, with rounded petals 2½ in. broad, and of firm texture. They are borne well above the luxuriant green foliage on erect branching heads in large clusters. One, $1; ten, $6; twenty-five, $12.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Owing to the very great increase in price of all materials used in packing of plants, we find it necessary to make a small charge for same, as follows, much lower than the percentage plan:

Full size cases.....$1.50 each
Three-quarter size cases..... 1.00 each
Small size cases..... .50 each

Would suggest taking plants in paper pots whenever possible. It is a big saving in both packing and express charges.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

GREAT GREENHOUSE WRECKED BY SNOW

Heavy snowfall on the north Atlantic coast brought disaster a second time to the largest greenhouse in the world, at North Wales, Pa. Just six years after a collapse on St. Valentine's day, a loss of $25,000 to $35,000 was suffered when the glass gave way February 5.

ALMOST six years to the day after a like mishap, the largest greenhouse in the world went down under the weight of a heavy snow February 5 at 9 a. m. The big house of the Florex Gardens, at North Wales, Pa., which collapsed February 14, 1914, last week suffered a similar accident. This time, however, merely the glass gave way. The structural work, it is asserted, is uninjured. The next largest house at the Florex Gardens, which is older, went down at the end, its structure being injured.

The big house, 172x750 feet, shown in the illustration below, is planted to roses, all in ground beds. It was believed that the stock in this house may be saved. Only the glass, which was put in the 24-inch way, gave way under the weight of snow, and men were at work repairing the damage next day. The loss was roughly estimated at from $25,000 to $35,000. The next largest house at Florex Gardens, which collapsed at the end, suffered more severely, and it was thought the plants in this house would be lost.

Storm Sweeps Atlantic Coast.

The blizzard which last week swept down the Atlantic coast, tying up traffic and burying roads under drifts of snow, caused much anxiety to greenhousemen, who propped their houses and cleaned the roofs to avoid catastrophes. There was a heavy snowfall at North Wales February 3. The following day it changed to rain, and February 5 changed back to snow again. The weight was too great for the wide, flat roof of the big greenhouse at Florex Gardens. The glass gave way, as can be seen in the accompanying illustration, reproduced from a photograph taken at 2 p. m., February 6, showing the south side of the house after the men had begun to repair the damage.

Six Years Ago.

On St. Valentine's day, in 1914, both the great house at North Wales and William H. Elliott's famous house, 60x1,360, the longest in America, at Madbury, N. H., collapsed. On that occasion a great gale of wind, attaining a velocity of sixty miles an hour, added to the strain caused by the weight of the snow. One third of the quarter-mile long house of William Elliott collapsed, falling from the ridge. The fall at Florex Gardens at that time seemed also to be at the ridge, as may be seen from the illustration on the following page, depicting the accident in 1914. The south side gave way for about half its length. There were about 70,000 rose plants in the house.

At that time heavy financial loss resulted, not only to these two firms, but also to many other greenhousemen on the Atlantic seaboard, where the snow was exceptionally heavy and the wind extraordinarily high on that St. Valentine's day. Just as is true this year, the fall in that section of the country was much greater than in other parts and the resulting damage along the north Atlantic coast was exceedingly severe.

Wide, Flat Roof.

The wide, flat roof of the big house at Florex Gardens proved not strong enough to bear the strain of an excessive snowfall. The removal of the snow by steam pipes overhead seems not to have been successful. The plan of David Fuerstenberg in building such a house, while commendable in many ways, particularly for its economy in construction, has the occasional heavy snowfalls of that latitude against it. The size of the house is not so much responsible as the low pitch of the roof.

The builders, the King Construction Co., carried out the original ideas of David Fuerstenberg exactly as he directed, assuming no responsibility for the pitch of the roof.

David Fuerstenberg retired from the Florex Gardens two or three years ago. The present officers are: President, Raymond C. Mayhew; vice-president and treasurer, William A. Geiger; secretary, Eugene Bernheimer.

Construction Plans.

In this connection it will be of interest to note the description by R. O. King, of the King Construction Co., of the plans for the first big house at North Wales. At the meeting of the American Carnation Society at Toronto, in 1907, he said in a paper read to the convention: "This house is a great departure from present standards and will set a record for wide houses which is not likely to be surpassed for some time, or at least until we can profit from the success or failure of the gentlemen who are willing to experiment on such a grand scale.

South Side of Big House at Florex Gardens, with Men at Work Repairing Damage from Heavy Snow.

Great Greenhouse, 172x750, at the Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa., as it Appeared After the Collapse in 1914.

"Beginning with the glass, it is desired to lay it with the supporting bars twenty-four inches apart. Referring to the table, it is found that the average weight required to break the glass is thirty pounds per square foot. This is equivalent to about one foot of wet snow. The glass is hardly likely to be called upon to stand more than this, so the question of strength against dead weight can be considered settled.

"The framework of the house must be made strong enough to carry somewhat more weight than the glass could stand, so that the glass would break before the framework collapsed, the design, complete, leaving the glass the weakest member, as it should be, for it is seen that although the breaking strength of the glass is thirty pounds per square foot, and the breaking strength of the truss work is the same, yet the glass is not uniform in strength, whereas the trusses are, and as thirty pounds is an average, it follows that half the glass would be broken by the time this load would be reached and if half the glass is broken, half the weight has gone with it, so our framework stands to be subjected in the limit to only one-half of its breaking load."

Collapse at Woburn, Mass.

Another loss as a result of the blizzard February 5 was that of Everett E. Cummings, at Woburn, Mass. A house of sweet peas just coming into crop collapsed on the same day as did the houses at North Wales, Pa. Mr. Cummings estimates his loss at approximately $10,000.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

The Hasselbring Flower Store, Flint, Mich., reports the best winter trade that it has ever enjoyed. Plans are being made to care for the increased business that the rapid growth of Flint will bring.

The busy winter season has kept D. P. Smith, Flint, Mich., from enjoying his usual western trip, where the climate is not so severe as in his state. Miss Zorn and her assistant were sick for several days, Miss Zorn being the first to return to work.

Arthur Mackinnon, Flint, Mich., believes the present high prices will be harmful to future business. He mixes pessimism with optimism, however, by remarking, "We are selling everything we can buy at big prices."

Herman Thiemann, Owosso, Mich., is planning a trip to Switzerland next summer. He hopes to be able to dispose of his place before sailing.

For the last few years, Boehringer Bros., Bay City, Mich., have been troubled at this time of the year by the burning of foliage on roses. Several conditions seemed to be the cause, but this year it was found that a chemical reaction in the river water when the river was frozen over had been the cause. This was the report of the city's chemical experts. The river is polluted by the dumpings from the chemical factories in the vicinity of the river.

Edward Freyling, of the Wealthy Avenue Floral Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., has had many commissions for landscape work this season, but the shortage of skilled landscape gardeners may force him to cancel some of his work.

Arthur Crabb, Grand Rapids, Mich., the Rotary florist, has been busy exchanging telegraph orders. This work has been growing with considerable rapidity and causes much favorable comment from the busy Mr. Crabb.

Henry Smith, Grand Rapids, Mich., is spending a few weeks in the south. This is Mr. Smith's first vacation in a quarter of a century.

Watson's Flower Store, Adrian, Mich., has enjoyed a successful winter. Although there is a low death rate here, the business has been well sustained by an excellent counter trade.

Charles Randall, of the Maple City Floral Co., Adrian, Mich., reports a steady business in all lines. Mr. Randall is fortunate in having a cellar of well developed bulbous plants.

BONE MEAL FOR CALLAS.

Will you kindly inform me whether bone meal is injurious to calla lilies if mixed with the soil when giving the plants a shift, using a 5-inch potful to a large wheelbarrow load of old carnation soil that has lain outdoors for a year? Is it better to apply the bone as a top-dressing, using a small handful to an 8-inch pot? J. M. G.—Tex.

Bone meal is quite beneficial to callas. A 5-inch potful to a wheelbarrow load of loam is not any too much. I prefer to use a 6-inch potful. In addition, I would use some cow or sheep manure if you have any. Callas are wonderfully benefited by top-dressings of bone meal. After they are well rooted you can safely use a scant handful on an 8-inch pot once in ten or twelve days in winter, and once a week after April 1. The way the roots come up and devour this bone is surprising. I know of no other calla food that is equal to bone. C. W.

Ashville, O.—M. M. Hott runs the greenhouse here. No, he does not call his place the Hott-House.

TENNESSEE FLORISTS MEET

WITH an attendance of over 100, which, with the exhibitors, represented fourteen states and one foreign country, the sixth annual convention of the Tennessee State Florists' Association, held at Knoxville Thursday and Friday, February 5 and 6, could hardly be accused of provincialism. The enthusiasm shown was quite on a par with the breadth of representation. The well filled program, which appeared in The Review of January 29, was carried out exactly as planned, except that Philip Breitmeyer and Albert Pochelon, of Detroit, Mich., were unable to present their advocacy and history, respectively, of the F. T. D. in person and M. Bloy, of Detroit, gave their papers a highly effective reading.

Officers Elected.

In the election of officers, A. J. McNutt, who is president of the Knoxville Florists' Society, was chosen president of the state association; T. H. Joy, of Nashville, was elected vice-president, and Prof. G. M. Bentley, of the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, who has been the secretary-treasurer of the association since its formation in 1915, was reëlected to his office.

After the address of welcome by Mayor Neal, President H. G. Bramm, of Bristol, in his official address presented a succinct review of the problems of the trade as they were represented on the convention program, thus touching successively on purchasing, growing, selling, storekeeping, accounting and delivering. He also called attention both to the debt of gratitude which the state association owed to the Knoxville society for its hospitality and to the debt of promptitude which those in attendance owed to the convention as a whole in attending the various sessions. The spirit of the convention President Bramm summed up effectively as follows: "Another year has gone into history and with it the most remarkable record of business ever known. Our meeting together here should both review the past with thanksgiving and study the future with a view to making the best use of opportunities as they arise in 1920."

Gude on Legislation.

Typical of this review of the past and preview of the future was the address on "Legislation" by William F. Gude, of Washington, D. C. After noting the fact that "since 1912 the federal government has enacted nearly 100 bills, resolutions, rules and regulations through the Federal Horticultural Board affecting about 1,800 different kinds of fungous growth, scales, microbes and pests," he reviewed the enactment and effects of Quarantine No. 37, which he dismissed with the following comments:

"All of these nearly 2,000 scales, insects and diseases, against which the quarantine is directed, may or may not be dangerous to the plant and tree life of our country, but the fact remains that the countries from which they come are necessarily more interested in keeping their stock clean from disease than we are in this country, for the simple reason that their area is so small and, in many cases, so congested that it is absolutely necessary for their protection and welfare to guard against diseases, fungi, insects, etc., in every way; for this reason a rigid embargo by the United States seems unnecessary."

As a result of his survey of the various aspects of legislation affecting the florists' trade, Mr. Gude concluded as follows: "We find that, as long as we are willing to give and take, it is comparatively easy to get along in most instances; many a knotty problem is solved or drastic ruling modified by wise counsel. This also applies to the larger propositions contemplated by the federal government; wise and conservative reasoning many times will so modify the proposed law as to make it less objectionable, if not to eliminate the objectionable feature altogether. In fact, we find that it is wiser to prevent laws being enacted that would inadvertently or otherwise work hardship upon our industry than to enter into serious conflict with the laws which now exist."

Able Addresses.

Most of Thursday morning was given to a discussion of "Office Management and Collections" by W. Cleveland Johnson, of Memphis; Robert E. Mapes, of Knoxville, and Thomas H. Joy, of Nashville; a paper on "Our Credit System; Its Uses and Abuses," by S. S. Skidelsky, of New York city; a stimulating survey of "The Florists' Business of Today" by George Asmus, of Chicago, and a discussion of "Local Publicity" by Z. D. Blackistone, of Washington, D. C., and George Schulz, of Louisville, Ky.

After lunch and the election of officers, the association voted to hold its next convention in Memphis, probably during November, 1920, but the exact date will be determined later. An excellent paper on carnations was given by A. F. J. Baur, of Indianapolis, Ind. "Can Carnations be Grown in the South Successfully?" by Harold Joy, of Nashville, was a talk of particular interest to his audience. Henry Penn, of Boston, Mass., on "Publicity; How to Tie onto the National Campaign," was followed by J. Keur, of C. Keur & Sons, Hillegom, Holland, in an illuminating treatment of the subject, "The American Embargo on Plants and Bulbs."

Thursday evening contained, in addition to the valuably suggestive talks on "The Relation of Music to Flowers," by W. H. Crouch, of Knoxville, and on "Modern Salesmanship of Flowers," by Mrs. Edith Goetz, of Chattanooga, exceedingly interesting make-up demonstrations and demonstrations with living models.

Addison J. McNutt.
(President-elect, Tennessee State Florists' Association.)

When the convention came together again Friday morning, it had a session devoted more exclusively to technical questions than were those of the preceding day. The discussion of "Floral Accessories" by Robert Shoch, of Philadelphia, and C. E. Critchell, of Cincinnati, O., brought a wealth of suggestions to the trade and the paper of Philip Foley, of Chicago, on "Greenhouse Construction," described the newest developments in this branch of the business. Much interesting information, not only about the newer methods of irrigation, but also about the function of water in plant growth, was contained in the talk of R. R. White, of Troy, O., on "Overhead Irrigation." In conclusion, Bruce Howell, of the Howell Nursery Co., Knoxville, discussed the question, "In What Way Does the Ornamental Grower Benefit the Florist?"

The Roll of Exhibitors.

The remainder of the morning was spent in conference and in the inspection of the many interesting exhibits. Those making displays were as follows:

Baum's Home of Flowers, Knoxville.
Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind.
Bayersdorfer, H., & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.
Beeman Tractor Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

In the afternoon the members of the association and the visitors were taken on an exceedingly pleasant as well as instructive tour of the greenhouses and nurseries in the vicinity of Knoxville. That evening the spirit of good fellowship was let loose at the banquet given at the Whittle Springs hotel by the Knoxville Florists' Society to those who had attended the convention.

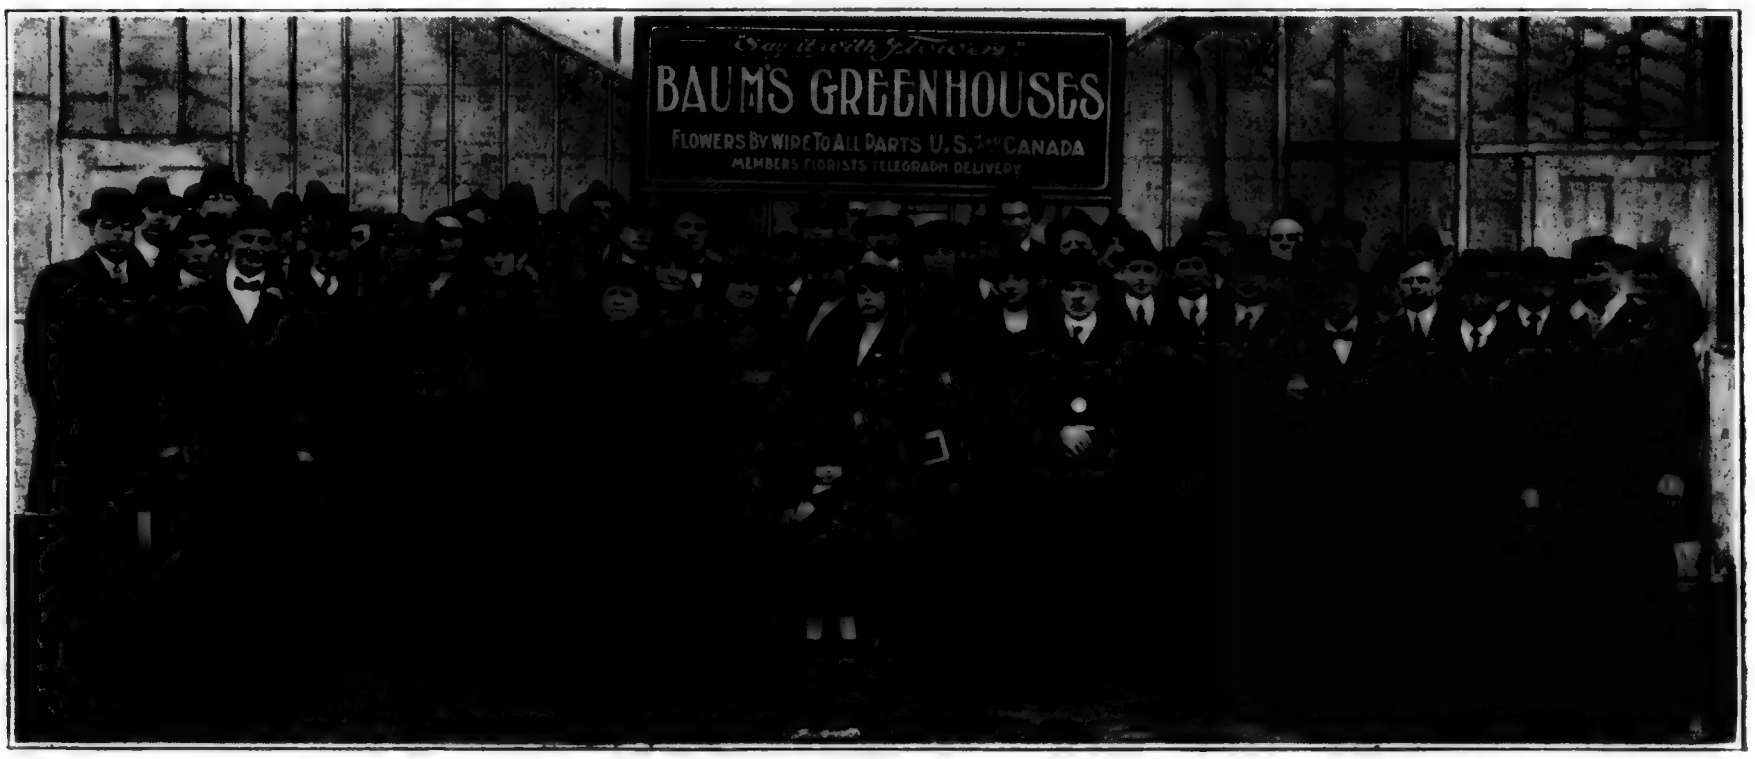
MAKING COLLECTIONS.

[The address of Thomas H. Joy, Chattanooga, Tenn., on "Office Management and Collections," at the annual meeting of the Tenessee State Florists' Association, at Knoxville, February 5.]

Collections are the most important part of any business. For what is the use of all your advertising, sales force, delivery equipment, etc., if after the sale is made and the transaction completed, so far as the florist is concerned, the item is allowed to stand on your books for ninety days or more?

In days gone by we allowed, or our customers chose, our accounts to be settled once or twice a year. Sometimes they ran longer. It is hard to impress on their minds that business cannot be handled now as then.



There are three classes of customers. First we have the wealthy one, who seems to think because he has money he should be allowed to pay his account at his own convenience. This customer must be handled carefully and cannot be pushed as fast as others. His account is desirable, provided you don't have to carry him too long. But is there any good reason why this sort of customer should be allowed to use your money, especially when he can easily afford to pay?

In the second class we have the men or women who are flower lovers and buy to the limit of their capacity. Customers of this class, as a rule, pay more promptly than the man of money and are more desirable patrons.

In class three we find the younger men or women who only buy on special occasions. A number of these are cash purchases, but a majori'y buy more than they can afford and should be watched closely.

Check Up Every Month.

On the first of each month our ledgers are gone over carefully. All accounts of ninety days or older are listed on cards and a mild letter sent, calling attention to the fact that the account must have been overlooked and requesting a check. On the fifteenth of the month these cards are again checked with the ledgers, all paid accounts being taken out and the others sent letter number two, which calls attention to our previous letter and requests an answer. Every fifteen days thereafter these cards are checked with the ledgers and another letter sent until the account is taken care of.

We find that this system costs us about five per cent. Fifty per cent of the accounts are paid by the second or third letter. About ten per cent require the full series of eight letters and from these only three per cent send remittances in full. From three per cent we collect approximately fifty per cent. Our losses for the last four years have averaged three-fourths of one per cent of our total sales.

All collections are handled by mail and telephone; no collector is used. We sometimes write to out-of-town customers and if a reply is not received in five or six days we wire them requesting an answer to our letter.

We still work on the theory that a doubtful account on the books is worth more than a box of roses in the trash can.

OFFICE MANAGEMENT.

[The address of Robert E. Mapes, of Knoxville, at the convention of the Tennessee State Florists' Association, at Knoxville, February 6, on "Office Management and Collections."]

The last two years have witnessed a wonderful growth in the use of records of all sorts. Statistics, figures, facts—these are the bases upon which every activity of today, legislative, political or commercial, is based. The days of haphazard methods and incomplete records have passed away, never to return. In no field of activity is this more true than in business. Success in modern business demands not only commercial shrewdness—the ability to buy in the cheapest market and sell in the dearest—but it also demands accuracy. A florist may watch every detail of expense at his greenhouses in order to produce stock at the lowest possible cost; he may use every effort to dispose of this stock at the best prices, but if there is a weak link in the administration of his affairs, if the management of his office is not up-to-date, he stands a good chance of making a failure. In every office the keeping of scientific and systematic records of all the transactions and all the facts is an important factor of the business. Under present conditions it is imperative that double consideration be given each and every transaction in order to ascertain whether or not it is a practicable one.

Plan of Work Needed.

No hard-and-fast rules for the management of an office can be laid down, for conditions vary according to the nature and magnitude of the particular business. A certain system or method might be successful in one office, while it would not be adapted to all the conditions in another. While the rules of debits and credits and other general rules are the same, each office manager must map out a system or plan of work that is especially adapted to the needs of his office.

The term, office manager, means more than one who merely keeps the books or handles the correspondence. He must be in touch with every detail of the business. When we take into consideration the many duties falling to the office manager we can at once see that he has a real job and must be a man of large caliber if the operation of the business is to be a success. He must possess an understanding knowledge of purchasing, advertising, selling, credits, deliveries, collections, correspondence and accounting. In a small business he may have to perform a number of these duties himself, while in a large business he would only oversee the workings of these departments, but whether in a large or small business, the principle involved is practically the same, and the office manager should have a thorough understanding of all the workings of the business.

Taxes Have Aided Bookkeeping.

The time has come in the florists' business when we realize the importance of office duties. The income tax convinced many of us that our system of accounting did not afford the desired information and showed that we were not giving the office the time and attention it should have. I believe it is safe to say that all florists have made marked improvements in their bookkeeping methods during the last three years. We have learned that it is just as important to do our posting and balance our books daily as it is to take care of rush funeral work or catch a certain train. We have come to a realization of the importance of taking care of correspondence promptly and properly, and instead of looking at the office as a place of little importance we consider it the heart of the business.

Under the head of collections, which is an important branch of office management, we must admit much improvement during the last few years. The government tax laws, while seeming to impose an extra burden upon the business man and causing a great deal of extra work, have really been a blessing. It has caused a general revision of office systems, and therefore the slow accounts are being watched more closely than heretofore. The organization of credit men throughout the country and the exchanging of credit information among business houses has also been a great stimulus to collections, and the man who is trying to deadbeat his way is finding it a hard job. However, we still have a great deal to learn about collections and there are still many improvements to be made. Each day brings us face to face with new obstacles to be overcome, and as long as business houses continue to do a credit business we shall be confronted with the problem of collections. I believe we should have our terms and require our customers to live up to them. My observance has been that a deadbeat, or a man who is slow in paying, respects the business house most which makes him pay his bills promptly.

TYING TO NATIONAL CAMPAIGN.

[The address of Henry Penn, chairman of the national publicity campaign, at the annual meeting of the Tennessee State Florists' Association, at Knoxville, February 5.]

The local florist who ties up to the national campaign has the advantages that stamp his store as one that has standing in his community and, incidentally, this has the effect of making the purchase of flowers half sold before a customer enters his establishment.

Our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," has reached the point where it not only serves as a reminder to the prospective purchaser of flowers, but also determines which store he shall trade at, as it has behind it the Society of American Florists.

Use the slogan in all your local ads, car cards, stationery, etc.; make it work for you to the end that your publicity locally and the campaign nationally bring together the main idea which prompted the campaign originally, the use of flowers more generally, which will continue to grow more and more, provided we all give it the moral and financial support to which it is justly entitled.

Campaign Just Begun.

Ask yourself this question: Would you like to see the national campaign abandoned? The answer will determine whether you should link up to it locally or not. We have only begun to see its possibilities, and the flower industry as a whole will develop only as the men do who get behind this movement, corresponding to the support they give it.

Your own success will depend upon the continuity of copy patterned after the lines of the national campaign, but using your own firm name in place of the Society of American Florists. Our secretary's office can provide you with material aid by way of electrotypes, etc., in connection with copy in national magazines which are fitted for newspaper tie-ups.

The more use you make of this copy the more your business will show results, as the double contact of national magazines plus local newspapers gives you the double advantage of publicity, and backed up by fresh flowers and good service you are bound to succeed.

WORTH OF WATER

OVERHEAD IRRIGATION.

Water's Part in Plant Growth.

Water has at least four functions in the growth of plants. It is a powerful solvent of plant foods; thousands of dollars' worth of costly fertilizer are wasted every year because of a lack of sufficient moisture to make the elements in them available for plant food. Water acts as a vehicle carrying soluble plant food from the soil through every portion of the plant for assimilation, much as the blood in the animal carries to every tissue and organ the nutriment needed. Water not only serves as a solvent and a carrier, but it also holds in solution organic acids, more powerful solvents than water alone. It is essential to the life of friendly bacteria, without which plants cannot thrive. It is a plant food in itself, both as a compound and in its decomposed state, as hydrogen and oxygen, elements which are also used by the plant in the formation of new compounds, such as cellulose, sugar, oils, starch, etc. Hydrogen and oxygen form about fifteen per cent of the dry matter of plants and are almost entirely derived from water. Water also plays an important part in the fixation in the plant of carbon, which forms about fifty per cent of the dry matter and is derived from the carbon dioxide of the air.

Water maintains the condition of highest activity in plant cells, enabling them to bear up large clusters of bloom or fruit. An absence of water will cause these plant cells to shrink and the plant will wilt and droop under its own weight.

The composition of plants in themselves is from sixty to ninety per cent water and the formation of the dry matter requires many times its weight in water, the greater part of which is then exhaled by the leaves in the process of transpiration. Some plants exhale their own weight of water during twenty-four hours of hot, dry weather. It is estimated that an oak tree with 10,000 leaves exhales 123 tons of water in the five months in which it is in leaf.

Thus we see the vast importance of water in the processes of plant growth. Is it any wonder that scientific writers and practical horticulturists are pausing in their discussion of such vital subjects as seeds, fertilizers, soil conditions, microörganisms, bugs and germs, however important these things may be, and are giving due consideration to that one element of soil fertility, without which all the rest are unavailable?

No problem in connection with intensive growing has received greater attention or has made more rapid strides than that of irrigation. Irrigation has been practiced extensively in various parts of the world for thousands of years. However, the obstacles to irrigation among intensive growers in the eastern half of our country have been so numerous as to make their use of irrigation a comparatively recent enterprise.

Overhead Watering Practicable.

The flooding and ditch methods of irrigation, which are so frequently used in the arid sections of our country, have not been practical among intensive commercial growers and it was not until overhead methods of irrigation were adopted that any proper form was available for them. When overhead irrigation, as a system, was first put on the market it met with considerable prejudice, and in almost every new locality where it was tried and on almost every crop it encountered an objection which resulted from experience with the earlier forms of overhead irrigation, such as the use of a hose or of heavy circular sprays.

No more than ten years ago a man who tried overhead irrigation was considered more or less of an adventurer, but it was gradually found that some methods of overhead watering were more successful than others and this led to the conclusion that overhead irrigation in itself was not disastrous, but that the methods which had been used were faulty and if water could be applied from overhead in a proper way, the results would not only be satisfactory, but would be superior to any other method of watering obtainable and would be profitable to the commercial grower.

Must Be Light and Uniform.

In the development of a satisfactory system of overhead irrigation, it was discovered that first of all a uniform watering was essential, but this of itself is a problem not difficult to solve. It was next found that watering in a light form was necessary and that the stream must be broken up into a fine, gentle spray. The results of this were that injury to the plant from bruising was avoided and the ground was maintained in a porous condition, thus eliminating packing and caking of the soil.

It was found that the injury to a crop, which was presumed to be a result of the application of moisture to the leaf or bloom, came in reality from the injury of the foliage or the bloom because of a too heavy application of water. Also, if a stream were reduced to a point where its chill was lost as it passed through the air, it became possible to use cold water satisfactorily and without detriment to the growing crop. The ground does not require leveling or grading, since the irrigation lines conform readily to uneven ground.

There are three essentials to a successful watering system. The first is a system under the control of the operator which will give a uniform distribution with a fine, gentle spray, and which will promote rather than injure the growth of a plant.

The second essential is a suitable crop. Any crop which would at any time be benefited by rain can be benefited by the intelligent and proper use of irrigation.

The third and chief essential is brains or good judgment on the part of the user.

The address delivered by R. R. White, of the Skinner Irrigation Co., Troy, O., at the convention of the Tennessee State Florists' Association, at Knoxville, Tenn., February 6.

MODERN SALESMANSHIP.

[The address of Mrs. Edith Goetz, Chattanooga, Tenn., at the annual meeting of the Tennessee State Florists' Association, at Knoxville, February 5.]

To be "modern," the first essential is an attractively arranged store. Of course it is impossible to keep the workroom of your shop clean, but the front should always be neat and attractively arranged. The iceboxes should be filled with good stock, if it can be obtained, and each vase plainly marked. These essentials must be cared for before successful salesmanship begins.

Your customers should be greeted with a smile or "Good morning." If you are busy when they enter, their presence should be acknowledged with a nod and the information that you will wait on them as soon as possible. Fifty per cent of your sales can be made without showing any stock or photographs. A suggestion is what most customers want and if you can show a knowledge of your stock and an interest in your customer, your sale is easily made. The order should be plainly copied and, if the item is charged, the address and all other information should be plainly shown on the ticket. The customer should always be asked if he wishes to pay for the purchase. Many charges could be avoided if this question were asked.

Modern salesmanship goes further than a sale or the copying of the order; the package should be neatly packed and attractively tied, and delivered in the same condition. No sale is complete until the flowers are received and the recipient is pleased.

Thank your customer, ask if there is anything else he or she needs and request that the customer call again.

BOSTON RETAILERS REPLY

HELPING THE OTHER FELLOW.

Success Through Coöperation.

The year 1920 should be a banner year for florists. The people have never had so much money to spend and it is up to us to have them "Say It with Flowers." Almost all lines of trade cannot get enough merchandise to sell, while we florists of Boston have been fortunate in being able to get nearly all the flowers we want. Of course, we have had to pay a good price, but what of it? Everything else has gone up, and why not flowers? People do not question the price of anything else, but why flowers? We must educate the public to the fact that the cost of producing and handling flowers has gone up just as everything else has.

We retailers certainly must encourage the grower to produce the best flowers he possibly can, and we must make up our minds to pay him a fair price for his flowers. We must try to look out for him and encourage him as much as possible. We must all try to accomplish something. When we grow flowers and plants we should grow the best, and when we sell flowers and plants we should sell the best, and when we handle flowers and plants we should try to pack them the best we know how. Everybody likes to handle flowers that come packed right and not thrown into the box the way some are.

What we need is a better understanding between grower, salesman, retailer and wholesaler. What we need is organization. The future development and the present protection of the cut flower industry require organization. What individuals fail to accomplish can only be done by organization.

Grading of Roses.

We retailers do not kick so much about high prices for roses or anything else if they are handled and graded properly. Take, for instance, Hadley roses. It is fair to say that twenty-five per cent of them are unfit to send out as cut flowers. My suggestion would be to take these weak-necked roses and grade them separately. Then when we pay 30, 40, 50 and 75 cents for Hadley, or any other rose, we shall know how to figure what they cost us. This same rule should hold good on all roses.

Consider the handling of violets. Take, for instance, the violets grown by Kidder Bros. There is not a man here who would not rather pay them 50 cents per hundred more for their violets than he pays anybody else, and why? Because they handle them properly and bunch them properly and select every flower. For that reason we are all anxious for them, never complaining about the price. How many other violet growers do that?

Gluts in the Market.

Every retailer should try to help the grower out when a glut comes. With a little publicity, low prices of flowers would attract many new buyers and bring back many of our old customers who have left the flower stores and gone to the candy shop and book shop. The cost of the advertising would be small compared with the benefit we all would receive. We must all let the public know when flowers are cheapest, and not let George do it.

Let us try to make buying in the markets a little more pleasant. Of course, we are not all college graduates, but, with a little more friendly spirit, I think in time we can have a florists' association in Boston that will be a credit to the city.

The trouble with most of us is that we are knockers instead of boosters. What we need is more boosting and less knocking. What most of us ought to do is to clean house ourselves first and sweep off our own doorsteps before we criticise the other fellows. None of us are perfect and we are all willing to learn. Let us all work together from now on and play the game fair.

Growing New Varieties.

I think it would be a good suggestion for the grower and retailer to get together in reference to the growing of new varieties once in a while. Surely no harm could come out of it and there might be some good. The retailer might be able to tell the grower something which would save him many a dollar.

Remember, Mr. Grower, Mr. Retailer, Mr. Commission Man, and Mr. Wholesaler, in union there is strength.

Paper read by William Penn at the meeting of the Boston Florists' Association February 3.

THE OTHER SIDE.

Threshing out the differences between the various branches of the trade is the first step of the Boston Florists' Association in promoting greater coöperation between them. At the January meeting the growers presented their case. The vigorous remarks of William H. Elliott on that occasion were printed in The Review for January 15. At the February meeting last week the retailers gave their views. Chief among the speakers were William Penn and E. F. Gorney, whose papers appear here.

FROM A RETAILER'S VIEW.

Reply to Growers.

I was much impressed by the talks of the growers at the last meeting. I know they find it necessary to expend much energy on their investment, and there is no reason in the world why they should not get better results, not in particular this year, but every year. I think all growers made money this year.

I agree with Mr. Elliott that waxed and artificial flowers should not be sold by florists and that natural flowers should be used in their stead. The growers could help by not putting the screws on too tight. We should encourage the use of flowers in every possible way, and I don't believe that there is a retailer in this room who objects to paying the market prices for them. Naturally, we try to buy as low as possible and, on the other hand, you try to get as much as possible. That makes the market price, and we do not begrudge the grower what he gets under these conditions.

Boycott a Myth.

What I would like to know is where the impression was created that the retailers were to boycott flowers for Christmas. I was sickened to hear so much talk about it at the last meeting. I will wager any man here $100 that he cannot prove there was any such move among the retailers. This was a false impression spread by someone who wanted to cause trouble. If the retailers proposed to boycott they would injure their own means of livelihood, as their business is to sell flowers and that is why there are retail stores. Don't you growers and salesmen give us credit for knowing better?

The fact is that we met at the request of the chairman of the retail committee, appointed by our chairman, and discussed retailing in general. However, it is true that during our informal talk the suggestion was made that we push plants instead of flowers, and there are logical reasons for that. In the first place, as plants are all bought at reasonable prices, we see our way clear to make a reasonable profit on them. On the other hand, there was no way of telling what cut flowers would cost, and we could not give our customers any definite prices ahead of time. If we did base our prices on what we thought the market prices would be, the customers would be apt to give up the idea of buying flowers for Christmas on account of the cost. It is the same story every year; cut flowers fluctuate more than plants. In November I was selling carnations at $1.50 per dozen and roses at $1.50 per dozen up. During the Christmas season I had to sell carnations for $4 per dozen, and roses from $5 per dozen up, whereas plants were about the same. A cyclamen always costs about the same in November as it costs in December. This is a great drawback to the cut flower business, but it cannot be helped, as the law of supply and demand causes that fluctuation, and it seems beyond our power to do anything but obey that law.

Push Plants First.

As a matter of fact, the retailer pushes plants at first, but when the rush is ended we always find that more flowers are sold than were expected. I have followed the principle of pushing plants ever since I have been in the business and, so far as I can see, it is nothing new. Is this what you mean by boycotting flowers? If so, I will admit boycotting. But I think that Paper read by E. F. Gorney at the meeting of the Boston Florists' Association February 3.

Retailing in Markets.

On the other hand, on the strength of the rumor, you intended opening the market to the public. Of course if that is ever done and done often enough, it will put the retailer out of business. Would that be a benefit to the growers and salesmen? In my opinion, it would certainly be detrimental to everyone, although, as a matter of fact, the markets are open to the public right now and on a large scale. Anybody can go in through any of the doors and buy anything there at much less than the retail price. The public can get the flowers as cheaply as we can. For every bank opening, every ship launching, every prominent funeral, a great many flowers are made up in the market. Department store collections also go to the markets.

Two weeks ago one of our retailers lost a $150 job because he could not compete with the price given by a salesman in the market. Last week I was asked for a price on 100 red carnations for a banquet. As the market price for all reds was $15 per hundred, I quoted $20. My customer said, "Gorney, I am sorry, but I have a price of $16 from a person in the market." I sold a customer a dozen poinsettias at Christmas for $9. After I had put them aside for him, he said, "I am sorry, but I have just bought my flowers in the market for $4 a dozen." I could not blame him for buying more cheaply, could I?

Action Needed.

These are only a few isolated cases. I could get you the facts on hundreds if you wanted them. Do you call that fair to the retailer? Here we are, prepared, under heavy expenses, for retailing, and depend solely on retailing for our livelihood. The markets are situated in the heart of the city and the salesmen who sell have no expenses so far as retailing is concerned. In what other line of business can the public buy anything at wholesale? I know of none. Retailing in the market is of no benefit to the grower. It is only side money to the salesman and does not belong to him, but does belong to us. It is a serious matter and must be stopped. Every retailer is dissatisfied with these conditions, and they are all talking of the necessity of a retail organization.

If a grower sees fit to do retailing, the retailer can find no objection, as he, the grower, has an establishment with fixed expenses, and if he thinks there is money in retailing, he is welcome to it. Some growers know there is more money in wholesaling only; some feel otherwise. That is their business. Is it fair to have a salesman buy up flowers in the market before it opens and then resell them to us at an extra profit only to himself? Is it fair to have a manager of a market buy up flowers for orders that he has to fill? Should not a manager be for the sole purpose of taking care of the market, instead of having a side retail business of his own? Retailing in the markets has been stopped in almost all other cities, and I should like to know if it should not be stopped here. I believe this organization can do it. We do not need a retail organization, as it is much better that we come out in the open and air our troubles. No doubt the salesmen may have some suggestions and complaints to make, and we shall be glad to hear from them. I believe that the Boston Florists' Association is composed of fair-minded members who believe in the motto, "Live and let live."

WHAT ARE FLOWERS WORTH?

MORE ABOUT PRESENT PRICES.

Considering Causes.

An anonymous writer quoted in The Review of January 29 feels that the wholesalers from whom he buys have increased the price on cut flowers in a desire to be arbitrary and dominating. The remarks published editorially with the quotation furnished the needed reply, but there are still other answers that might have been given.

Upon reflection everyone will agree that in view of the steadily increasing costs of fuel, labor, plants, bulbs and equipment, commercial growers must have increased returns per flower.

Not only because of the heavy supply of mums last year have roses lost their usual average, but during the period of cloudy skies from December 1 to January 20, roses were decidedly less prolific than usual.

Criticism of prices can result from one of two lines of reasoning: That the critic's competitors pay less and therefore sell for less, or that the scale of prices is not consistent with the increase in price scales of other commodities.

The first trouble generally results where the competitor grows his own stock. It must be plain that if growers who sell through wholesale houses and who grow their stock on a large scale in the most economical way are getting only enough from their crop to afford them a fair profit, the retailer who is growing his own stock with a huge overhead is selling below cost. It is inevitable that his season's returns will prove this to be true. We all know, however, that such a retail florist is consoling his profit account by figuring his growing and retailing business as one and is satisfied with a small profit on his investment of time, labor and greenhouse and retailing equipment. If the retailer who buys on the wholesale market wants to work on as narrow a margin of interest on his investment as his competitor, he will not need to complain about prices, for the scale will be about the same in both cases.

Flowers Are Essential.

The second difficulty is also unfounded. Cut flowers have not increased in proportion with other commodities and particularly not with other so-called nonessential things. Pleasure cars, candy, theater tickets and musical instruments have increased in cost tremendously, yet they are in greater demand than ever before and statisticians can foresee no immediate fall in the demand for them.

Then why not flowers? Flowers are considerably more essential to the happiness of people than these things and the mission of flowers is far-reaching. Every florist must sometime in his experience realize that his business is not a nonessential vocation. Until he understands this he will continue to be afraid to ask the prices for his flowers that he must get to insure himself a good living.

We are dealing with a product that lends happiness to many a heart in every hour and therefore we are entitled to a good living from this business.

If we allow the current of discontent that seems so prevalent at this time to enter our otherwise progressive business, we may find ourselves adrift among the thousands who are stranded on the desert of self-justification, with no food but the fruits of Bolshevism and no drink but the flow of selfish arguments. Wm. A. Hansen.

PRICES ARE NOT HIGH.

Complaints Always Made.

No invitations have been sent out for "has been" retailers to "horn in" on the discussion going on between the retailers and the wholesalers, but I have been reading with considerable interest the communications in The Review under the heading, "Problem in Prices," and I feel that I would like to say my say, if I have one coming, being now a grower of gladioli solely.

We all look forward to the time when there will be no chronic complainers, but we have them with us now, have had them with us for a long, long time, and the chances are that we shall have them with us for some time to come. They just can't help it. They do it, many of them, as unconsciously as a smoker lights his pipe. They don't mean anything by it; it's just a habit with them. So let's forgive them. They did it when we charged them 75 cents or $1 per dozen for carnations; they are still doing it and still buying.

Comparative Cost.

Flowers are no higher now than they were several years ago, if one looks at the problem from the correct angle.

Should the grocer, the butcher, the baker, the barber, the tailor and the others who have doubled the prices on what they sell the florist complain if the florist doubles the price on the flowers he sells them?

It requires no more effort to earn $2 with which to buy a dozen carnations today, than it did to earn $1 with which to buy them a few years ago; so flowers are no higher now than they were then. The same effort buys the same flowers.

Now, regarding the price the wholesaler should charge the retailer, I want to say that during my ten years as a retailer there were times when the prices were so high it almost seemed as if the wholesaler were trying to put me out of business (though I knew his desire was far from that). Then, again, there were times when flowers were so cheap it was just like taking milk from a baby—and we all took it; so it seems to me it's just about a fifty-fifty proposition.

Demand Governs Price.

The price of cut flowers seems to me to be governed more by the law of supply and demand than that of any other commodity. It is my opinion that a better arrangement for price fixing cannot be found.

Speaking of demand, gentlemen, has it ever occurred to you what has caused the unusual demand of the last twelve months or more? I claim that it is cooperation and with a little more of it you can double the supply of flowers and the demand will take care of it. If I remember correctly, and I think I do, just a few months before this unusual demand began, florists started a national campaign of coöperative advertising in which both the wholesaler and the retailer united in pushing "Say It with Flowers." T. D. Smedley.

NEW YORK.

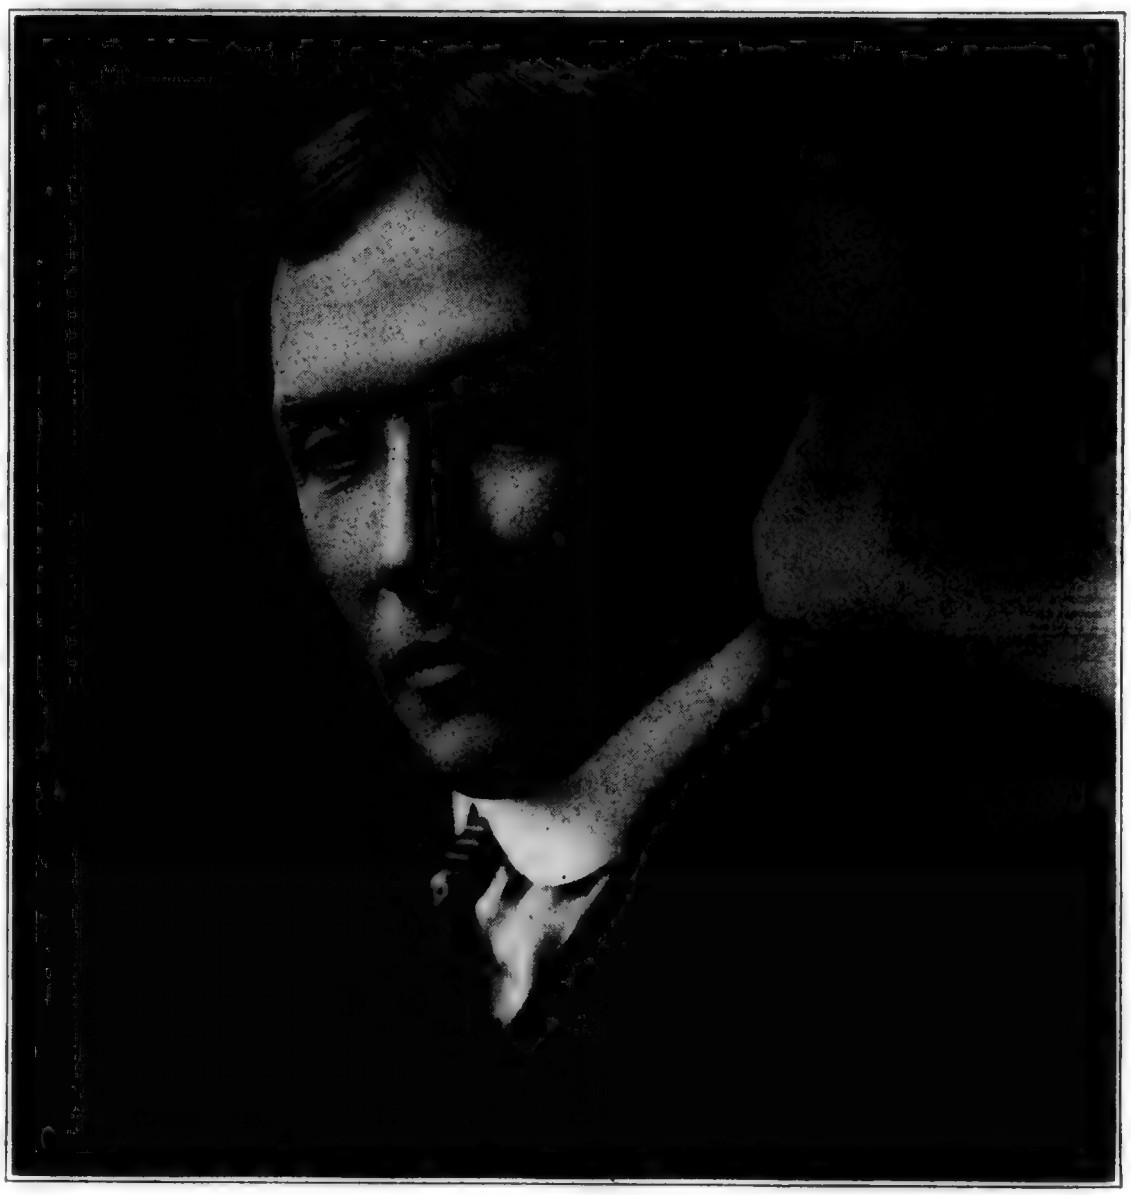
The Market.

New York and vicinity have experienced one of the worst snow storms in history. In some respects it outdid the blizzard of 1888. It started early Wednesday, February 4, and continued throughout the next day, the snow alternating with hail and sleet and some rain to finish it. The result has been a general tie-up of transportation facilities. Under the circumstances the cut flower market has been poorly supplied, many growers finding it impossible to get their product into the city. After bright weather Saturday and Sunday, February 7 and 8, conditions are somewhat improved. The market is well supplied now and the demand is sufficient to take all arrivals. Bulbous flowers predominate and some fine stock is arriving. Tulips and narcissi are in heavy supply and move well at good prices.

Freesias are generally of high quality and bring 35 cents to 75 cents per bunch. There is a big supply of hybrid freesias available in different shades of color, but they do not appear to excite much interest. Roses are in short supply. American Beauty is scarcer than any other and prices remain at the high point that they reached two or three weeks ago. Hybrid teas are in somewhat better supply, but in the short grades continue scarce. Carnations are in better supply, but the price of the best stock is still high, $15 per hundred being the top price now, with Laddie and selected flowers bringing as much as $20.

Cattleyas are in larger supply, but the demand for them is not particularly active. Cypripediums are plentiful. There is a fair supply of gardenias and the quality was never better; in fact, more magnificent flowers have seldom been seen.

Valley is abundant and moves slowly. It is evident that the extreme shortage of the last several months has been overcome and we are not likely to have a repetition of it, at least in the near future. Easter lilies continue scarce and bring as much as $40 per hundred for the best. A few rubrums are to be had at 10 cents to 12 cents per flower.



There is a good supply of miscellaneous flowers, including calendulas, wallflowers, pansies, mignonette, bouvardia, primulas, violets and snapdragons.

Sweet peas are plentiful and move well. Lilac is in small supply. Acacias are to be had at $2 to $4 per bunch and there is a quantity of forsythia branches, which move at prices according to quality. Callas are in better supply.

Various Notes.

The storm of last week seriously affected the florists' business, curtailing the supply and making express shipments impossible. While most of the near-by growers managed to get shipments in, it was only by personal effort and in many cases consignments were brought in as emergency baggage. Many growers report breakage of glass during the storm, but, with a mild temperature prevailing throughout the storm, there was little damage to the stock. By the orders of Mayor Hylan, the only traffic allowed on the street was that in connection with the food supply and the preservation of the public health. This hampered business because of the withdrawing of the express and teaming service. Never before were the streets of New York in such a deplorable condition and only by the suspension of

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE AND WHY

GEORGE C. WEILAND.

OF course you know Evanston, Ill. It is Chicago's highbrow suburb, seat of Northwestern University. George C. Weiland is a hard-headed, hard-working florist; he hasn't been spoiled by living his entire life in the rarified atmosphere of Evanston. He was born there in 1880, the same year that his father, Matt Weiland, established the business of which the son now is the head. In addition to conducting a downtown retail store, Mr. Weiland has a range of glass in Evanston, devoted to carnations and miscellaneous stock, also a new range at Niles Center, Ill., where roses are grown. Mr. Weiland was one of the organizers and now is president of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, the wholesale outlet through which some sixty growers sell their stock on the Chicago market. He is a life member of the S. A. F., a member of the F. T. D., the Chicago Florists' Club and many other trade organizations, besides being a fourth degree member of the Knights of Columbus. He is married and there are six Weilands of the third generation to become florists.

traffic could anything be done to clean up.

One of the houses of the Duckham-Pierson range, at Madison, N. J., was damaged during the storm, about sixty feet of eave giving way.

It is only a little over a month before the international flower show will be held in the Grand Central Palace. It opens March 15. Preparations are in fine shape and, with a good attendance, the show will prove to be as successful as its predecessors. The committee in charge of the show held a meeting, Monday, February 9, at which much business in the way of final preparations was transacted. The city department of parks has again promised support to the show and will stage some fine exhibits. There is not much space left for trade exhibits; so it is certain that this feature of the show will be as important as ever.

Charles W. Knight, vice-president of the New York Florists' Club, was unable to attend the club meeting held Monday, February 2, due to the illness of Mrs. Knight, who is convalescing at the Sunnyside hospital, Babylon, L. I., after a serious operation.

A. M. Henshaw, president of the club, has nearly recovered from an attack of the flu, reaching home last week from Pittsburgh, where he was taken ill.

The Greek-American Florists' Association will hold its thirteenth annual ball Thursday, February 26, at the Hotel Commodore.

W. H. De Graff, Leiden, Holland, arrived in the city last week. He brought with him the gold medal which the General Bulb Growers' Society of Haarlem, Holland, is offering for the finest collection of flowering bulbs and bulbous-rooted plants at the international flower show. J. H. P.

TATE'S TIPS

WAITING FOR THE GROWER.

An Emergency in the Trade.

It is almost pitiful in these days to hear the retailer begging for stock to fill his orders. A man will go into a wholesale house; he perhaps has an order, often a large one, to fill for someone who has been a good customer for years; he will find that his portion of the stock to be had that morning is altogether insufficient for the order he has, to say nothing of the day's sales. Now, this same man may be one who is loudest in his condemnation of the high prices of flowers, but on such an occasion prices are never mentioned; he never thinks of what he will have to pay for the stock, of what profit he is going to derive from his order; he looks upon the whole thing as an emergency and has but one object in view, and that is to get sufficient stock to fill his order. When we come to analyze his motives, we cannot help saying that this is the proper procedure. There is no doubt that in such a case an emergency exists.

When the Pusher Is Pushed.

Let us consider for a moment of what it consists. It is so simple that a child can understand it. The florist's customer wants a certain order of flowers; a retailer cannot take an order subject to being able to get the stock to fill it; his local market is short and there is not much use in trying out of town, for he will find that the same conditions exist everywhere. Is it any wonder that high prices exist under these conditions? Yet such scenes are to be witnessed on the wholesale flower market every day.

Recently a man who has been the head of a large wholesale house for over thirty years said that he had never seen anything like it in all of his experience and recalled that there was a time when they had to push the business, but now the business was pushing them.

The whole trouble is lack of production and there is certainly no chance to deny this when every day we find it impossible to get sufficient flowers to fill the demand. But to say lack of production does not help the situation any. Judging from the reports in The Review, which tell each week what the state of the market is in all the large cities of the country, there is no flower market in this country that is not suffering through lack of production.

Bring Up Production to Demand.

Admitting that the lack of production is an established fact, the next question is, why does this lack of production exist? And, like the Irishman, I think this can be answered by asking another one. If there were no more cut flowers being sold today than there were several years ago, would there be the extraordinary shortage of flowers that exists today?

The publicity committee is working overtime to popularize flowers. Conditions are ripe for this campaign and there is more money in circulation than was ever known before in this country. We have, through this committee, been creating a demand and have been giving all our attention to this phase of the question and not enough to producing the article for which the demand is created. Now, any sensible business man will realize that there are just two things to do in such a case; either stop advertising and creating a demand for flowers, in which case all of the effort and money that have been spent so far can be charged to profit and loss, or else push the campaign harder and then produce the flowers to take care of the increased demand.

To Stay In, Get Ahead.

Never was there an opportunity like the present for the florist to increase his business. When it was said that the business was now pushing the wholesaler, I could not help thinking what an opportunity it was for the florists; all they have to do is get the stock, and even if increased production does bring prices back to normal, you still have the opportunity to push the business.

Another thing that I wish to call attention to is the fact that the florists' business is being watched by those outside of the trade. If present conditions exist much longer it will be only a short time before outside capital will be invested in the business; we hear now of an $800,000 range to be erected in New Jersey. When we think of the capital in this country and the shrewd business men looking for an opportunity to invest it, the growers, if they hope to stay in business, should intrench themselves now. Once let the large corporations get into the production of flowers and it will be only a matter of time until they will be pushing the business and some of those who are now letting the business push them will be working for these corporations.

The florists should do some serious thinking at this time; the business is passing through a crisis and what its future will be is up to those who are now engaged in it. The question arises, Are there enough big men in it to handle it? I, for one, answer yes. Tate.

TYPHA LATIFOLIA.

Can you give us the Latin name of the enclosed specimen of cat-tail? We should like also to know the method of propagation, whether from seed or division. B. H. F.—Kan.

The botanical name of the variety of cat-tail that you forwarded is Typha latifolia. Propagation is either by seeds or by division of roots and is comparatively simple. C. W.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The heavy snow storms during the last week have not helped things any and in some cases the growers found it impossible to get in with their stock. Funeral flowers are hard to get and the demand is still on the increase, due to the flu epidemic. Out-of-town orders are coming in fast and it is impossible to fill half of them. Business has been a little better and all stock has cleaned up well.

Club Meeting.

At the February meeting of the Florists' Club, it was announced that the local florists are to be hosts to the American Carnation Society's convention next winter. A. Gude and D. G. Grillbortzer, the newly elected vice-president of the society, made a report to the club on their visit to the convention of the society in Chicago.

Nominations for officers for the ensuing year were made as follows: President, J. Harper Hetherington and George Anderson; vice-president, A. E. Gude, Jr.; secretary, George V. Schultz and R. L. Jenkins; treasurer, W. F. Gude; financial secretary, Z. D. Blackistone. Election of officers will take place at the March meeting.

The Tennessee State Florists' Society invited Z. D. Blackistone and W. F. Gude to speak at its meeting in Knoxville, Tenn.

Various Notes.

John Sharper, of Oxon Hill, Md., is known as one of the most ambitious young growers in this section. Four year ago he had about 8,000 feet of glass and now he has 32,000 feet under glass, with the addition of about 5,000 feet under construction. His brother, Herbert Sharper, is his assistant. They are both hard workers and are successfully carrying on the business together. Mr. Sharper grows stock for the Leo Niessen Co. G. V. S.

ORCHID HEARING

MAY MODIFY QUARANTINE 37.

Orchid Growers Before Board.

The Federal Horticultural Board gave a three hours' hearing February 10 on the subject of the importation of orchids under Quarantine 37. At its conclusion it was believed that the atmosphere was somewhat cleared and groundwork had been laid for the board to issue modifications of the quarantine at least to permit growers to obtain reasonable supplies of plants for propagating purposes, or to issue a statement indicating clearly the extent to which growers can obtain plants.

According to Dr. C. L. Marlatt, who presided, there is an impression in the trade that the quarantine shuts off both old and new varieties, and during the course of the conference he made statements the substance of which was as follows:

That new varieties as well as old can be imported on application.

That nothing is cut off that is really needed.

That only the purely commercial entry for immediate sale has been cut off.

That if growers find that other growers will not let them have certain varieties or charge extortionate prices, the board will issue permits to bring in enough of these varieties to carry out the methods of reproduction, supplies to be liberal in order to allow for the obtaining of satisfactory flowers.

That if plants for reproduction purposes were brought in under permit in reasonable quantities, the board did not care what was done with the flowers; they could be sold or given away.

That varieties to be permitted entry do not have to be new, the test being unavailability.

Question of Production.

In opening the hearing Dr. Marlatt stated that the board has been assured that the quarantine as it now stands has proved satisfactory generally and that it gives the orchid producers the protection that they long needed. He said that it will be only a few years until home-grown orchids satisfy all reasonable needs in this country if they do not exceed them, and that the question now is whether the orchid business in this country can take care of itself with such importations as are permitted.

John E. Lager, of Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., made an extended statement against the quarantine and asked that it be practically lifted, maintaining that it had not been proved that the orchid was a carrier of pests or diseases that could not be guarded against.

W. L. Jones, representing Thomas B. Young, Jr., Boundbrook, N. J., detailed the success in raising orchid hybrids and seedlings at the Young nurseries and maintained that this nursery could supply 50,000 plants a year.

Joseph A. Manda, of West Orange, N. J., declared that importations were necessary to keep up stocks and that if hybrids are to be kept up we must have the species.

Luis F. Carrillo, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., declared that importations should be freely permitted. He said that a few growers had practically cornered propagating stock and were holding it at high prices. He said that he was asked $7 for plants which he could import if the quarantine were off for $1.

Not Tariff Matter.

Frank R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, N. Y., who made the closing statement, said that to him it appeared that the whole question before the board was whether it was safe to import orchids. He said that the Secretary of Agriculture had decided in connection with quarantines that the burden of proof was on the government, and he advised the board to keep this in mind. He said that arrangements could be made at ports of entry to make examinations of orchids to see if they were infested.

"I think we have been digressing," he said. "We have been discussing whether we can produce or cannot produce. This is not a tariff discussion. Because you merely think that some injurious insects may be introduced, you have no power under the law, as it was intended, to keep these plants out. You have never made a prima facie case that orchids introduce specific diseases or insects."

Dr. Marlatt, in concluding the hearing, said that he agreed with Mr. Pierson that the purpose of the board had nothing to do with the commercial features of the case, and in referring to the suggestion made for a port inspection, he said that the board had recommended such a system to Congress.

In addition to those named above, the following were present, several of whom participated in the discussion: J. D. Eisele, president of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia; George E. Baldwin, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; Edouard Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J.; J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Boston; W. J. Vesey, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Alphonse Pericat, Collingdale, Pa., and G. B. Alberts, Louisville, Ky.

Youngstown, O.—John Walker has recently bought a tract of fourteen acres, part of the Price farm, west of Hubbard, and will erect on it a range to cost about $30,000. He sold his Logan avenue greenhouses and six acres of land to the Youngstown Ice Co.

Richmond, Ind.—Joseph H. Hill Co. has placed a contract with the Lord & Burnham Co., through the Chicago office, for another iron-frame greenhouse, 80x400, to be erected at once. It is to parallel on the north the first L. & B. house, 60x400, separated from it by sufficient space to avoid shade.

THE TRADE'S SHARE

HOW MONEY IS SPENT.

Agricultural Appropriation Bill.

The agricultural appropriation bill for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1920, reported to the House of Representatives by the committee on appropriations, consideration of which was begun February 5, contains several appropriations of interest to florists. One is an appropriation of $54,750 to develop a port inspection service in the enforcement of quarantines established under the provisions of the plant quarantine act. In this connection the committee's report states: "The department is now enforcing fourteen quarantines prohibiting or restricting the entry of foreign plants, fruits and plant products. It is also enforcing seven others regulating and restricting the entry of additional foreign products. These quarantines and orders are being enforced in coöperation with the customs service, but the burden on that service has grown to such an extent that it has been necessary for the Department of Agriculture to take over the actual enforcement of these quarantines at the principal ports of entry, as far as possible, through the service now maintained to prevent the entry into the United States of the pink bollworm of cotton through importation from Egypt, Mexico and other foreign countries. California and Florida are the only states which have established adequate port inspection services." The full appropriation under this heading is $100,450.

$70,000 for Japanese Beetle.

Under the heading "Deciduous Fruit Insect Investigation," the committee stated: "There is an apparent increase in this item of $72,720, but, as $2,280 has been transferred to statutory rolls, the actual increase is $75,000. This additional amount will be used for extending the work in the control of the Japanese beetle. The allotment for this work under the present appropriation is $25,000, which, with $30,000 to be made immediately available, provides a total of $55,000 for this purpose during the fiscal year 1920. The remaining $45,000 of the increase, together with $25,000 allotted for the control of the Japanese beetle from the present appropriation, will make $70,000 available for combating this pest during the next fiscal year."

Seed Reports Cost Less.

The item, "Market News Service," represents a combination of the items for market news service on (1) fruits and vegetables, (2) peanuts, (3) dairy and poultry products, and (4) grain, hay, feeds and seeds, aggregating $392,600 for the current year. The apparent decrease is $78,000, but as $25,620 has been transferred to the statutory roll, there is an actual decrease of $52,380. The full appropriation under this heading is $314,600.

The bill is scheduled to pass the House during the latter part of the week ending February 14, and after passage by the House it goes to the Senate for consideration. T. O. M.

CLUB MEETING

NEW YORK CLUB MEETING.

Many Committees Report.

A regular meeting of the New York Florists' Club was held in the club's rooms in the Engineering Societies' building February 9. There was a fair attendance of members and others, in spite of the bad traveling conditions due to the recent storm. On account of lack of transportation facilities, there was no refectory that evening. President A. M. Henshaw was prevented by illness from being present, and Vice-president C. W. Knight was absent, due to the illness of his wife. Ex-president Philip F. Kessler therefore was voted into the chair and presided throughout the evening.

Roman J. Irwin, chairman of the annual dinner committee, reported that it had been arranged to hold the annual banquet at the Hotel Biltmore, March 17. The price of tickets would be $5, at which price it will be necessary to have an attendance of about 400. After some discussion, the committee was empowered to invite guests within its discretion.

Wm. H. Siebrecht, Jr., for the legislative committee, reported that the club's charter had been duly amended according to the direction of the club.

Arthur Herrington, of the flower show committee, reported that the prospects for a successful show were exceedingly good and bespoke the assistance of every member toward their materialization. Secretary Young reported that at a meeting of the committee that afternoon it had been decided to make the admission fee $1, which will include war tax. Trade tickets will remain at the rate fixed, 40 cents each, with face redemption for unused tickets. Arrangements for the tea garden were practically completed and this feature promises to be as prominent as ever before. Mrs. Wilson has agreed to open the show by pressing an electric button in Washington and also is willing to name any new flowers at the show. There is to be a Governor's day, if it is possible to arrange for the presence of Governor Smith. A change in the schedule has been decided upon, separating the interests of commercial growers and private growers in the classes covering bulb displays and rose gardens. Chairman Kessler brought to the attention of the meeting the fact that the rules prohibiting the transaction of business on the exhibition floors by other than trade exhibitors will be strictly enforced.

Chairman H. O. May, of the exhibits committee, reported that while conditions had prevented the staging of any elaborate exhibition that evening, the committee had done the best possible, setting up a good table of carnations. The next meeting night, March 8, will be Rose night, he said.

Miscellaneous Matters.

The following were elected to membership in the club: William H. Johnston, 131 East Twenty-sixth street; F. M. Pennock, San Juan, Porto Rico; Dwight M. Hills, 205 West street; H. B. Marinelli, Montvale, N. J.; Fred W. Payne, Grand Central Palace; Philip Haas, College Point, N. Y.; Earl S. Shaw, Riverdale, N. Y.

Mr. Marinelli was present and was formally introduced to the members. Sam Seligman, recently elected, was also formally introduced and offered to donate a substantial prize for competition by members if arrangement could be made for a class. Secretary Young stated that the flower show committee is disappointed in the support being given the show by retail florists, intimating that, so far, Max Schling is the only one taking part in the exhibition.

The following were nominated for election at the next meeting: Charles Moles, 321 Sixth avenue, New York; Alfred Campbell, 1510 Sansom street, Philadelphia; Samuel Salzberg, 114 West Twenty-eighth street, New York; A. T. Kohlmann, Tompkinsville, L. I., N. Y.; Leo Loewenthal, 3830 Broadway, New York; Richard Gerling, Irvington, N. Y.; Anthony Ruzicka, Chatham, N. J., and Charles Schultheis, College Point, N. Y.

Secretary Young presented his report for 1919, which showed the affairs of the club to be in excellent shape. The roll of membership included 562 members. Elections for the year covered fifty-five, and there had been five deaths.

The president was directed to appoint a committee to prepare resolutions on the death of George T. Schuneman.

A. L. Miller, president of the S. A. F., spoke of the work done at the recent meeting of the executive board of the society in Cleveland.

The heavy damage and loss sustained by the proprietors of the Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa., was reported and, on motion of Wallace R. Pierson, the secretary was directed to send a letter to the owners, expressing the club's deepest sympathy with them in their great loss.

It was ordered that a basket of fruit be sent to President Henshaw, with the best wishes of the club for his speedy recovery; and a basket of flowers was directed to be sent to Mrs. Knight, who is in a hospital at Babylon, L. I.

The secretary announced the enforced absence of Jos. A. Manda and F. R. Pierson from the meeting, they being in attendance before the Federal Horticultural Board, at a hearing arranged for orchid growers.

Wallace R. Pierson made a lengthy address covering the recently organized National Growers' Association, in which he emphasized the desirability of all growers taking out membership whose ranges were 5,000 square feet or more in extent.

The Exhibits.

Vases of Carnations Belle Washburn, Pink Delight and White Enchantress, exhibited by Harry O. May, Summit, N. J., were awarded a cultural certificate.

A vase of a rose pink sport of Carnation Enchantress Supreme, exhibited by Lecluse & Lecluse, Blue Point, N. Y., was awarded thanks of the club. The awards committee would like to see the variety again when in better condition.

Vases of Carnations Enchantress Supreme, White Enchantress and Belle Washburn, exhibited by the Springfield Floral Co., Springfield, N. J., were awarded a cultural certificate.

Charles Hennon, New Castle, is under the doctor's care. It is hoped that the operation will be successful. Much business and scarcity of flowers are reported from the chain of stores operated by J. S. Hennon & Son.

W. T. Butz, of Butz Bros., New Castle, Pa., commented upon the inconsistency of a prominent retailer wiring an order for a dozen roses to cost a gross price of $4, remarking that the retailer had also a wholesale business and must be familiar with the scarcity and value of stock, "and yet we are expected to give good service to keep up our reputation, while such orders should really be declined with thanks. Not only are we helping out our competitors, since we are the only fortunate growers of roses and carnations in quantity, but protecting the market at the same time."

Charles Peterson, East Liverpool, O., has been an invalid for many years, but carries a smile that would put Old Sol to shame. Our cheerful confrere recently made his business a company—a family concern.

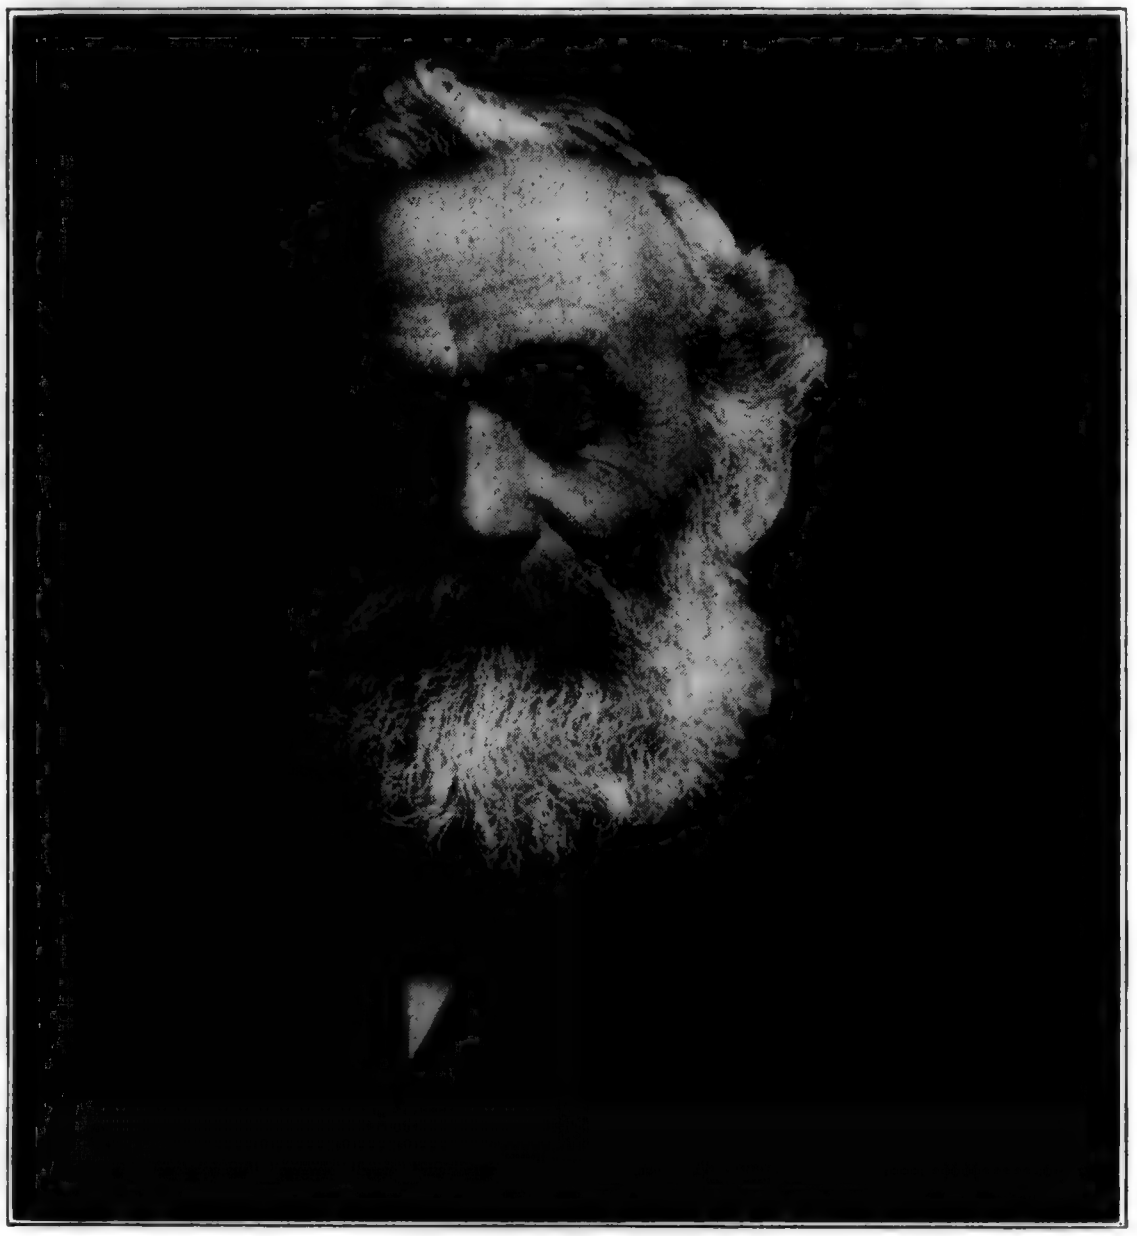
OBITUARY

[See also page 39]

William Berger.

After a gallant struggle for life, William Berger died at his home, 238 Queen street, Germantown, Philadelphia, at 5 o'clock on the morning of February 5. He was in his seventy-third year. Mr. Berger went to the Samaritan hospital for an operation just before Christmas. He rallied splendidly from the shock. His general health was so good that his physicians and family entertained bright hopes of his recovery, but later he lost ground, despite everything that devotion and medical skill could do. His loss is keenly felt by all who knew him.



William Berger was born in Germany July 28, 1847. When a lad of 16 years he entered the Royal Gardens to study botany. Three years later, in 1866, he came to this country, making his home at 238 Queen street, then called Indian Queen lane, in Germantown. He started in business selling fruit, with plants and flowers as a side line. The side line soon developed. He put up greenhouses on land in the rear of his home and gradually built up a thriving florists' business. He was a good grower, frequently exhibiting his plants and flowers at the local shows. About 1888 he opened a small store on Chelten avenue, placing his son, Fred, in charge and supplying it with stock from his own range and from those of other growers. This move proved so successful that Mr. Berger soon moved to larger quarters on Germantown avenue, just around the corner. A few years later he became the recognized leading florist of Germantown, being consulted on all important occasions by the leading people of the large suburb. This was a great step forward from the old days, when the business came through the caterer. Mr. Berger then purchased a fine property at 5522 Germantown avenue, in what is admitted to be the best business block in Germantown. He moved his Queen street greenhouses to the rear of his handsome store and five years ago retired from the business, turning it over to his sons. He was too active a man to be idle and kept up his interest in the greenhouse crops and in all that pertained to the business.

William Berger was of a genial disposition, happy and cheerful, friendly with all, a man of the highest integrity, upright in all his dealings.

Mr. Berger is survived by a widow, three daughters, Anna, Clara and Ida, all married, and seven sons, William, Jr., Fred, Harry, Louis, John, Charles and Edward. The first four are married. Six of the seven are florists.

Funeral services were held Monday morning, February 9, when he was laid to rest amid many beautiful flowers.

Phil.

William Berger, Sr.

Mrs. Mary Jane Glass.

Mrs. Mary Jane Glass, wife of James Glass, died at her home on Erdman avenue, Baltimore, Md., Sunday, February 8.

Mrs. Glass was born in the north part of Ireland and came to this country with her husband about forty years ago. They engaged in the florists' business and by hard work and earnestness it grew to be one of the best in Baltimore. Mr. Glass attributed the success of the business to the untiring efforts of his wife. She was well known by everyone connected with the trade.

Besides her husband, there are three children who survive her, Mary, Ella and James, Jr. The funeral was held Wednesday, February 11, and she was buried at the Baltimore cemetery.

Ohio C. Barber.

Ohio C. Barber, best known as the millionaire match king, of Barberton, O., died at the age of 79 at his Anna Dean farm, at Barberton, Wednesday, February 4. Mr. Barber was the owner of one of the largest greenhouse ranges in the country, having many acres under glass.

Mr. Barber was born at Middleburg, O., April 20, 1841. In 1856, after a common school education in Akron, O., he entered his father's match factory, at Middleburg, and was taken into partnership in 1861.

His genius for organization, foresight and indefatigable labor asserted itself immediately and in 1881 he formed the Diamond Match Co., which absorbed a number of firms engaged in the same business. Ten years later he laid out the town of Barberton, named after himself, and gave employment to thousands of persons in the surrounding territory. The town now has a population of 22,000.

Mr. Barber interested himself in scientific farming. He took over a tract of 1,300 acres near Barberton and turned it into what was known as the "model" farm or the Anna Dean farm. On it he erected a palatial home and spent most of his time there. In 1919 he erected his greenhouses according to ideas obtained from several visits to the Guernsey islands, where there is a great growing industry under glass. The Western Reserve University, of Cleveland, will have the place for experimental purposes under the provisions of his will. The farm is valued at $4,000,000.

Mr. Barber was married twice, the first time in 1866. His first wife died some years later. He married his private secretary three years ago and she has virtually managed his interests since that time.

Joseph Sylvester.

Joseph Sylvester, proprietor of the Oconto Greenhouse, at Oconto, Wis., for over twenty-five years, died Sunday morning, February 1, at Oconto county hospital, where he had been receiving treatment for about a week. He had reached the age of 68 years, having been born in Longshire, England, in 1852.

He is survived by his widow, Susanna; three daughters, Mrs. George Temple, of Oconto Falls; Grace and Olive Sylvester, at home, and two sons, James and Roland, at home.

Mrs. Anna Taylor Stokes.

Mrs. Anna Taylor Stokes, widow of Walter P. Stokes, of Moorestown, N. J., died suddenly Friday, February 6.

Since the death of her husband, Mrs. Stokes had been conducting his Floracroft greenhouses, with the assistance of Edward Ross and Thomas Potts.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

SEND The Review a clipping of the St. Valentine's day ad which you found productive of results.

IF a florist finds collections slow, it probably is because he has no system of reminding debtors when money is due.

"THE voice with the smile wins" is increasingly appropriate as the share of business done over the florist's telephone becomes greater.

ENERGETIC growers are working up large stocks of plants for Easter and spring. There will be good sale for all the trade can produce.

HOW would you be fixed for fuel if a general strike should tie up the railroads shortly after the government returns them to private management?

IN 1918 it was figured that the American people were spending, on the average, about 50 cents per head per year for flowers. Now it is perhaps $1.

HEAVIER snowfall than has been experienced in many years tied up traffic along the Atlantic coast last week, hampering business to an unprecedented degree.

A READER fears the public will pass up flowers, because of prevalent prices, in favor of candy. Wonder if that florist thinks candy still sells at old-time prices?

NUMEROUS instances have been reported, during the last few days, of railroads confiscating florists' coal. Is it in preparation for something the railroad managers expect to happen soon?

PRESENT conditions, while they encourage those now in the trade to increase capacity, do not tend to induce new people to enter the business, either as growers or retailers. It takes more capital to make a start at growing and good retail locations are scarce at high rentals. Present-day wages are better than a business venture.

FREQUENTLY The Review is taken to task as favoring quarantines. How foolish! They must hurt the newspaper for years and years. But why waste energy in vain protest? Today one might as well buck organized labor as fight the autocrats who run our government bureaus. Some day reason will rule again. Better bide our time.

SMILES are exceptionally necessary in a florist's shop. Flowers and a grouch do not go well together, and the latter will never sell the former.

"WHY advertise when stock is scarce?" ask those not yet converted to the trade's publicity campaign. "The time to dig bait," replies a wise man, "is before you go fishing."

THE man who has his spring bedding stock ready early will catch the fattest orders. Production will be much larger than last year, but many growers will be late because of lack of help.

No one can point out either grower or retailer who has "got rich quick" in the last two years. High prices for flowers, unwelcome as they may be to customers, are an economic necessity if the trade is to exist.

SHORTAGE OF EASTER STOCK.

Easter is scarcely more than seven weeks away. Florists have had little time for thought of the nearness of this big day. Just now they are doing all the business they are able to do with the available stock. How they are going to do more the first Sunday in April depends entirely upon the supply of plants they are able to get. The size of this will not be so great as in former years, many think. Fewer lilies were planted this season than before. Every one of them will be sold at high prices. Rambler roses are expected to be few. The early date shortens the time to prepare other kinds of stock. The present demand for flowers is some of it being diverted to pot plants by the retailers in their efforts to hold customers; this decreases the quantity available for later use. So conditions altogether point to a decided shortage for Easter. Every florist who by any means is able to add to his supply and the trade's supply for this day will be amply rewarded by the size of the returns.

DELAYED DELIVERY.

Few publications, if any, feel the necessity of each week's issue reaching the readers as quickly as possible more than The Review and none makes greater efforts to accomplish this desideratum. At the present time the obstacles are many. The deplorable conditions of the postal service in general form one handicap. To these are added just now weather delays of trains, sickness of postal employees from the epidemic of flu, the enormous size of the mails in this period of lavish advertising and other temporary vexations. By persistent vigilance The Review is able to make certain that all copies depart by train from Chicago by Thursday night each week. So much can be done by being "on the ground." Proper dispatch at the postoffice of destination is not so easy to secure, regardless of efforts made from The Review office. The subscriber, being "on the ground" at that end, may accomplish a good deal, perhaps, if he tries. The receipt of a copy at his store sooner than at his greenhouses is sure indication that the delay in delivery is in his own postoffice, since both copies arrive there in the same mailbag. In such circumstances an inquiry of the local postmaster is likely to result in prompter delivery, or an explanation that will give the subscriber an understanding of conditions and an assurance of when he can expect better. So if you do not receive The Review as soon as you think you should, ask your mailman about it. The chances are that, despite present handicaps, you can get prompter delivery that way.

SAME ON THE OTHER SIDE.

The scarcity and high prices of flowers is not a local, not even a national condition. From England comes the following statement of the market on that side of the water:

"Never were such prices obtained for flowers as during this season. This is to some extent due to the shortage caused by the frost. Though the high prices may entice growers to increase their culture and flowers become more plentiful, we shall never have prices as low as they have been in the years gone by. We have nothing to fear from foreign competition. Every expense connected with the business has increased three or four-fold, pots, manure, mold, labor, glass and repairs to houses. Taking this into consideration, growers will be wise to produce first-rate flowers rather than larger quantities of them of third and fourth-rate quality."

BRIEF ANSWERS.

G. & G., Pa.—Greenhouses running east and west receive a greater amount of sunlight than those running north and south. It is the reason for the practically invariable choice of east and west houses where no other condition controls.

C. T. M., O.—You should make Easter. See article page 34, issue of February 5.

M. J. W., Ind.—It does not pay to try to perpetuate one's stock of freesias; throw the old bulbs away and buy fresh for forcing.

B. F. C., Id.—As students of genetics do not approve the mating of defectives, neither do thoughtful growers propagate from defective plants, which bars blind wood.

WHY THE REVIEW IS GROWING.

The growth of The Review this season has been so rapid that it has been necessary practically to discontinue all solicitation and center effort on taking care of the business now coming in unprecedented volume as the result of many years of ceaseless endeavor to give the trade as much as possible for its money. Large as is the circulation of The Review, the subscription list recently has been growing faster than for several years. The increase in the extreme east, where there was some falling off during the war, has been especially notable. It has been the result of florists saying to each other, "You are missing something if you don't get The Review; it's worth more to me than the $1.50 it costs for a year." And of course trade conditions are such that advertisers who make direct offers get really remarkable results. Here is a novel way of putting it:

The telegrams commenced soon after The Review left Chicago and have kept coming as the mail distributed the paper on the road to the ends of the country. The latest just now are from the southwest and far east. If you sent The Review out in relays, a few each day, maybe we would be able to keep up with the orders.—S. M. Harbison, Danville, Ky., February 1, 1920.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

OBITUARY

Samuel Cape.

Samuel Cape died early Saturday morning, January 31, at St. Margaret's hospital, Pittsburgh, Pa., after a serious illness of only two days. Pneumonia had developed from a severe cold.

Mr. Cape had just passed his thirty-fourth birthday, having been born January 22, 1886, at Mount Washington. He entered the trade as an errand boy for Mrs. E. A. Williams, when she was located on the south side; later he went into the employ of the A. W. Smith Co. and then to the employ of Lincoln I. Neff, whose branch store at 4010 Butler street, in the Lawrenceville district, Mr. Cape later purchased in order to have a business of his own. Steady growth forced his business to move to a larger store at the corner of Fisk and Butler streets, and at the beginning of this year he purchased the yet larger building just opposite.

Mr. Cape was an Episcopalian and a member of the Pittsburgh Florists' and Gardeners' Club and of the Masonic order, lodge 484. The funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon, February 3, at 7043 Frankston avenue, the home of his sister, Mrs. Ellen C. Logue. Mr. Cape, who was unmarried, is survived by three sisters and three brothers: Mrs. Ellen C. Logue, Mrs. Laura C. Greenamyer, of Salem, O.; Mrs. Olive C. Snyder, Joseph Cape and Frederick Chester Cape, of Pittsburgh, and John H. Cape, of Dunkirk, N. Y. Another sister and a niece died in the flu epidemic of a year ago at Woodlawn, where Mr. Cape's greenhouses are located. They were the wife and daughter of the superintendent of the range. E. E. S.

Samuel Cape.

Albert M. Boop.

Albert M. Boop, Mingo Junction, O., died at his home on Grand View avenue, Wednesday, February 4, at the age of 60 years.

Mr. Boop was born at Harlem Springs, O., October 13, 1859. He lived for a time in Bloomfield, O., and for the last twenty-five years had been a resident of Mingo Junction.

He is survived by his wife, Sarah Olive Boop, and six children.

F. A. Haenselman.

F. A. Haenselman died at his home at Boulder, Colo., February 5, at the age of 59 years. He had been in poor health for a number of years and had been continuously failing.

Mr. Haenselman was born in Stuttgart, Germany, September 11, 1861. He started his florist career in the Royal Palace gardens at Stuttgart. He came to this country at the age of 19 and worked in various stores and greenhouses in Chicago, St. Louis, Mo., Louisville, Ky., and Denver, Colo. In Denver he started in the business known as Chapman & Haenselman, five years later buying Mr. Chapman's interest and running the business alone, until he lost everything by fire, in 1896. He was then appointed landscape architect for the city of Denver in the park department. He held this position until 1903, when he took charge of the Canon Floral Co. greenhouses at Lafayette, Colo. A year later he started the present business, known as F. A. Haenselman's U. of C. Flower Shop and Boulder Greenhouse. In 1908 his health started to fail and he grew steadily worse until the end, but although he was so crippled for twelve years that he could not walk without crutches, he kept doggedly working and actively managing the business.

He was a member of Boulder lodge No. 566, B. P. O. E., the W. O. W. and the Masonic fraternity.

He is survived by his wife, Carrie Ida, and three children, Minnie, Carl and Florence. He was buried from the Elks' home in Elks' Rest at Green Mountain cemetery, Sunday, February 8.

The business is to be carried on by his son, Carl F. Haenselman.

Raymond E. Cooper.

Raymond E. Cooper, Cohoes, N. Y., died Friday, February 6, at the Cohoes hospital, as a result of the setting in of pneumonia when he had an attack of influenza which he contracted when attending the funeral of his mother in Poughkeepsie two weeks ago. He was 34 years of age at the time of his death.

Mr. Cooper was known by everyone in the trade around Cohoes. He had a genial disposition and understood his work and that of the men under him, and therefore was a most capable superintendent. He came to Cohoes as an employee of Ansel D. Carpenter ten years ago and grew up with the firm.

He was a member of the Albany Florists' Club, Cohoes lodge No. 116, A. F. & A. M., Cohoes chapter R. A. M. and St. John's church.

He is survived by his wife, three brothers, a sister and his father, L. H. Cooper, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

The funeral service was held Monday, February 9, at his home, Rev. Ernest J. Hopper officiating, as well as the Masonic funeral service. The burial was Tuesday, February 10, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

In spite of a considerable increase in the supply of flowers available, the market has stiffened still further this week. Nothing like the present condition ever has been known. Ordinarily at this time of year flowers are abundant, in comparison with the demand, and everybody is pushing for sales. This year the supply probably is as large as it ever was at this date, but the demand is so much greater than normal that any wholesaler will tell you he would have no trouble in selling twice as many flowers. Of course, if everyone had twice the present supply, that would be a different story, but there is no doubt that from twenty-five to fifty per cent more flowers could be sold close to present prices if good stock were available.

For the last two or three weeks there have been predictions that a change was approaching, but the only change thus far apparent is a further increase in the demand and a gradual advance in prices. Everyone who reduces a price finds himself on the wrong side of the market.

The St. Valentine's day demand was just beginning to be felt when this issue of The Review went to press, but it was apparent that the call for flowers will be greater in the closing days of the present week than it has been at any time since Christmas. There seems to be no limit to the retailers' ability to sell flowers. Their business is limited only by their ability to obtain stock. Occasionally a buyer says he will have to stay off some item until the price comes down, but in a general way prices have ceased to be a consideration. The buyers appear to have become accustomed to the present values and they pay the price without protest. The result is a wonderful total of sales for the wholesalers and big checks for the growers.

Our Supply Is Increasing Rapidly, but Demand Continues Abnormal

WE NEVER have experienced anything like the present situation—ordinarily a supply as large as we have now would be enough to fill all regular orders and leave a surplus for those who can use flowers only at a price. But this season the demand is so much greater than ever before at this time of year, it still is impossible to fill orders in full—and there is no question of price.

Freesia Is Plentiful and the already large supply of Spring Flowers, Roses and Carnations is sure to be greatly increased within the next few days. We expect very soon to be filling all orders in full, even if the present abnormal demand continues.

NOTICE While prices necessarily are high under present conditions, buyers of Cut Flowers should note that our supply is of the highest quality, and that the prices of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association never are higher than others charge, IF THEY FILL YOUR ORDER, regardless of the quality of their stock.

We are in constant touch with market conditions and when a decline takes place you can rely upon orders sent us receiving such benefits.

principal feature of this week's , aside from its increasing h, is some addition to the variety ers now available. Bulbous stock ing in much more plentifully. are considerable quantities of jonquils and numerous shipments iving from the south. Tulips are from many sources and the btained are the best ever known. Whites, which had practically dis- d, are again seen in consider- antities. Freesia is in large sup- most the only flowers on the mar- which orders are being filled in d on which the price is easing off. are more callas and a few Easter re beginning to arrive. There is Spanish iris and a small quantity nan iris has been seen. Valley is tely abundant. There are many veet peas.

upply of double violets has been by the big snow storm in the d wires from Rhinebeck say the St. Valentine's day supply will be reduced. Stevia is about gone. There is some fine mignonette and a fair supply of calendulas.

The rose situation shows little change. The call for short roses is so large only a fraction of the demand can be met and buyers must take longer stock or go without. Some growers report an increase in cuts, but others say weather conditions are holding their crops back. There are few Beauties. The supply of carnations is increasing, but the price is advancing; the call has proved stronger than anyone expected.

One of the notable features of the market has been the quantity of miscellaneous stock drawn from outside sources. Quantities of material are coming from California. Of principal importance is the heather. It has been seen in nearly all the wholesale houses this week, but some of them have found it unprofitable and have stopped the shipments. Acacia has come in moderate quantity. Shipments of Paper Whites from the coast usually have proved disappointing. Some of the freesia has come through in good shape, but much of it has been lost. Woodwardia fronds sell well where big, coarse material can be used. Some asparagus also is coming from California. Huckleberry and mahonia foliage also are seen.

A casual visitor at the market is likely to get a false impression as to the quantity of flowers being handled. While little stock is seen, large quantities are coming in. With a normal business, meaning a demand such as was usual at this time of year prior to our entry into the war, we should now have a heavily stocked market.

The new local coöperative undertaking, the Allied Florists' Association, was represented by Otto Amling, who said that practically all of the wholesalers, over seventy-five per cent of the growers and fully fifty per cent of the retailers had already signed up in support of it; the retailers had been so busy that the canvassers had got only halfway through their work. At the conclusion of Mr. Amling's report, the club formally endorsed the new association.

Another new organization to receive much attention was the national growers' association, for which William J. Keimel spoke, showing the many advan-ges of such coöperation. He presented ist of the growers who had already plied for membership and read a ter from J. Fred Ammann, the secre- y of the association, who was in bed h the flu, and one from Wallace R. erson, of Cromwell, Conn. Mr. Pier- 's letter had been written to a pros- tive legal adviser of the association l gave a clear and inspiring outline its plans and possibilities, including fact that the contributions from h grower would probably be in pro- tion to the amount of glass and that association expected to contribute 0,000 to national publicity. Like the A. F. and the F. T. D., this associa- n will include Canadians in its mem- ship. The club gave the national wers' association its hearty endorse- nt.

Among the visitors to the club were lter P. Dunlop, Toronto, Ont.; C. C. llworth, Milwaukee, Wis.; J. J. rins, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Phila- phia, and George Hampton, treasurer the Jos. G. Neidinger Co., Philadel- a. Mr. Dunlop, when called on by sident Waters, told how his father l developed the Frank W. Dunlop e, which drew the best qualities from h of its parents, Shawyer and Rus- . Mr. Pollworth told how the trade Milwaukee had raised about $11,000 eleven months by its coöperative n and proposed to spend $1,000 for al advertising of St. Valentine's day s year. One and two per cent con- butions were, he said, much smaller portions than the amount spent for vertising in most trades. He re- rked that too many florists were dor- nt and needed the application of a le bottom heat to force them.

Various Notes.

8 at his home at 5504 North Clark street. He was 86 years of age. While never a florist, he set his son up in the business many years ago and was well known to large numbers of north side growers. N. J. Wietor and Peter Reinberg, with their wives, are at Miami, Fla. They expect to be absent for about three weeks.

Thomas Rogers, with the Weiland-Risch Co., has been having a bad time with the index finger of his right hand. Following a fashion florists have, he got it full of rose thorns and has twice had it opened by a surgeon.

George Scott, one of the old-timers, has reappeared on the market after an absence in Florida. He is again with E. F. Winterson.

well liked. It is said they have sold so well that they have paid the grower even better than selling the plants would have done.

Herman Rolff, 7052 Stony Island avenue, is planning to start in the greenhouse and florists' business near the cemeteries.

J. H. McNeilly, confectioner and florist at the southeast corner of East Sixty-third street and University avenue, will retire from business, having disposed of his lease. He plans to start again in the same neighborhood.

A huge red heart, symbolical of Valentine's day, tells those who pass W. J. Smyth's boulevard windows to "Say It with Flowers."

M. C. Wright returned a few days ago from a week's visit at the general office of Lord & Burnham Co., in New York. The company is planning for the future on a broad scale.

Peacock's Flower Shop is boosting the telegraph delivery service on its Valentine's day mailing card. It says: "Send a Valentine flowergram to a friend or relative anywhere in the United States or Canada. Merely call at our store or telephone and tell us the amount you wish to spend. We will transmit the order by wire to our correspondent in the city you specify and the flowers will be delivered within a few hours' time. We are members of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, which has a bonded membership of nearly 1,400 leading florists in over 850 cities and towns. Satisfactory flowers and delivery guaranteed."

The business of the A. L. Randall Co. is expanding so rapidly that additional office space became necessary and the headquarters of the household refrigerator, the furniture and the artificial flower departments have been removed to the third floor in the Le Moyne building.

R. Scheffler is doing his errands around Wheaton in a new Buick sedan.

Before E. Wienhoeber left for California he sold his old residence and large grounds at Highland Park and bought a smaller but beautifully situated home at Winnetka.

Fred C. Meyer, of Elmhurst and Addison, has a deal pending for the acquisition of property on which he plans to build a new range of glass.

W. J. Smyth says the growth of the telegraph delivery feature of the business has been especially rapid this season. There was a big increase last year, but nothing like the jump in orders shown this winter, according to Mr. Smyth, who adds that he still sends fully as many orders as he receives. He never misses an opportunity to boost the F. T. D.

The Dunlop roses exhibited at the Florists' Club last week have stood since on the counter of the store of Zech & Mann, where their development has been watched with interest by many people. The flowers were of enormous size and still good February 10.

August Jurgens has been at Ridgeland, Miss., since early December. He is rapidly developing his bulb farm there.

Perhaps it will give an idea of the condition of the market if it is stated that one wholesale house reports the smallest day's sales in the week of February 1 to February 7 as $6,200, with the largest day's sales $9,100. Another reports daily sales ranging between $4,500 and $6,500 for the week partly for pleasure and partly for business.

F. E. McGrath, of Fischer & McGrath, New Castle, Pa., was here last week, investigating sources of supply.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The first week in February was marked by an even greater scarcity of flowers than the weeks that preceded it. Monday and Tuesday brought an increased supply, but by Tuesday night the market had absorbed it all. Then came the worst snow storm of the season, lasting three days and three nights, cutting down the supply. Usually in such a storm the demand disappears. This time it kept up. Saturday brought bright weather, more flowers and an active demand that took everything and could easily have taken much more, even at the prevailing high prices.

The wholesalers are much upset at the situation. Try as they will, they cannot begin to fill their orders. Such expedients as filling one-half or two-thirds of the order, shipping or delivering every other day and arranging to send so many dollars' worth of whatever they can gather together, are resorted to in a vain effort to make the stock go around.

Sweet peas are more plentiful. There are more daffodils, plenty of freesias, some violets, a fair sprinkling of cattleyas and a little myosotis. The supply of roses and carnations is about the same. There is nearly enough asparagus sprays, but not enough ferns.

A Propagating House.

There is a propagating house of much more than ordinary interest at this moment. It is at Chestnut Hill on the place of Myers & Samtman. The house is, at a guess, 12x150 feet. It contains two wide propagating beds. These beds are entirely filled with what appear to be nicely rooted cuttings of three aristocratic varieties of roses, American Beauty, Premier and Columbia.

The quantity, the varieties and the success of the propagation make the house remarkable. The difficulty of rooting Beauties with certainty is well known. The places, outside of Richmond, Ind., that can put in such vast quantities of Premier, are rare. Columbia is less numerous. Of course, this large propagation is not for the place, big as it is. It is for selling in small pots. So great is the demand for small plants of these three varieties that flowering wood is being sacrificed, and a house of roses has been thrown out to produce the stock, and this by a firm preëminently cut flower growers. Practically all the stock above that needed for their own replanting has been grown on orders and enough has been ordered to tax their capacity for four months to come.

Perhaps a few words about the members of the firm who run this little propagating house, and ever so many big houses besides, may be of interest. Frank P. Myers is known in all our large cut flower centers—to be explicit, in New York, Chicago, Boston, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia—as brilliant and successful. He has probably done more than any other grower to make floriculture remunerative. He knows when flowers are needed in some great center and is able to place them there in great numbers at exactly the right moment. This has happened time and time again. Flowers would be needed somewhere. The town and the retailer matter not. The regular source of supply would be inadequate. A wholesaler in the nearest big city would telegraph or call up Mr. Myers on the long distance telephone and the want would be filled.

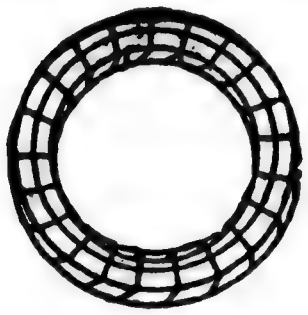
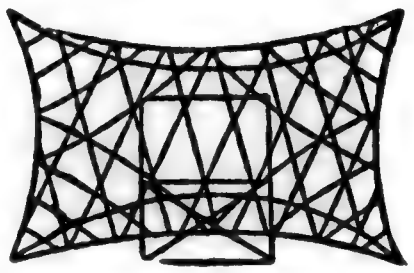
Martin Samtman is a genius in the growing of roses for cut flowers under glass. He knows by instinct what they need and when to give it. He never wastes his efforts on things that don't count. He has certain rules, to which he adheres rigidly, yet his success as a grower is not so much due to his rules as to his almost unerring instinct of the needs of his plants. These two stars are supported by a strong combination.



Primula Malacoides.

The brief telegram describing the exhibits staged at the Florists' Club in the Adelphia on the evening of February 3 did not do justice to the really beautiful table of Primula malacoides. They were staged by Clarence U. Liggit for Harry K. Rohrer, of Lancaster. The plants were shown in valentine baskets. They were exceedingly well grown, making a display that was both novel and attractive. This variety of primula is a specialty with Mr. Rohrer, this particular stock being named after him—Primula malacoides Rohrerii. Mr. Liggit prefers it to obconica. It is charming and it does not poison anybody. He has many of them ordered for valentines.

A Disaster.



It is with deep regret that another disaster is recorded. It also is due to the snow storm. The twin houses of Joseph Beavis & Son, on Limekiln pike near Haines street, collapsed with the weight of the snow at 5 o'clock on the morning of February 5. The houses are ridge-and-furrow with a gutter between. The snow piled up in the gutter until the weight became too great. One house went in. The stock was frozen. The other house was boarded up. These houses are on the north of PROVIDENCE, R. I.

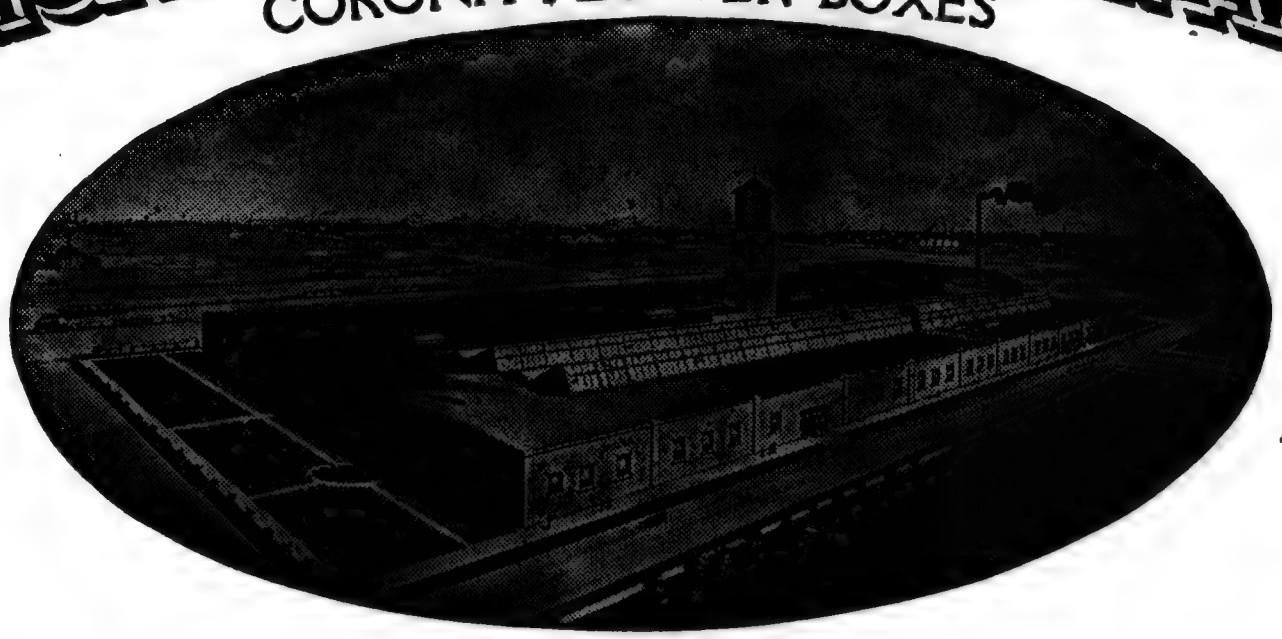
The Market.

Buried beneath nearly two feet of snow and ice on the level, with numerous drifts from eight to twenty feet deep, Rhode Island's business has been almost at a standstill during last week. With trains, trolleys and other means of transportation tied up, passenger service as well as freight has been suspended. It has been the worst visitation of winter weather experienced here since the historic blizzard of 1888.

This statement of the conditions explains the entire business situation. There has been a demand slightly above normal because of the increase in the number of deaths from influenza, but the florists have been unable to fill orders, for in a majority of instances where they could procure flowers, it has been impossible to deliver them. One downtown store had orders for more than $150 worth of flowers for one funeral in a suburban section, but could not deliver them.



Various Notes.

A fire which broke out in the cellar of Vose's Flower Shop, in Woonsocket, R. I., early Saturday morning, February 7, caused a loss of $1,000 to that concern. The store is owned by Herman Dolbeck and Stanley Kaczor and their entire stock and many of their fixtures were destroyed.

The Market.

Potted tulips, jonquils, daffodils and other spring flowers are beginning to arrive at the local market in somewhat larger quantities. The prices are high for this season of the year. The crop this year is fair as to volume, but it is not up to normal, due to the fact that growers have not been able to care for as many plants this year as usual. The quality of the flowers arriving on the market now is good. On account of the influenza epidemic, there has been much funeral work the last few weeks. The storm crippled trade for a few days.

Various Notes.

Charles Luthy, 363 Springfield avenue, reports that there has been much funeral work of late and that he has had a large number of midwinter weddings to provide flowers for. The cut flower trade is rather slow.

Connelly & Plunket, 149 Bloomfield avenue, report business good. The heavy snow storm crippled business for several days. At the branch store, 20 Belmont avenue, a number of weddings have added to the volume of business.

Announcement has been made of the wedding, at Montreal, February 7, of Miss Emma Wilkinson, of Elizabeth, N. J., and William Flemer, Jr., of Princeton, N. J., formerly of Springfield, N. J. The wedding took place at the home of an uncle and aunt of the bride, her parents being dead. Mr. Flemer's parents were at the wedding. After their wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Flemer will reside at Princeton, where Mr. Flemer is manager of the F. & F. Nurseries, owned by his father. The bridegroom served in the ambulance corps overseas for more than two years during the war, and received the French war cross.

SOFT CALENDULAS.

We are sending you some specimen calendula leaves taken from infected plants. Can you tell what the trouble is? The heart of the plant seems to be the most affected; in some cases the center stem is rotting away. On other plants, however, only the tips of some leaves wither. We sprayed with Pyrox, but can see no benefit. These plants are in new soil and have not been unduly forced. We have not watered them overhead. R. M. P.—Pa.

The specimen calendula was received in such bad condition that it was almost impossible to form an opinion as to the cause of the trouble, but it appears to the writer that excessive moisture is causing the trouble, which can also be traced to the plants' having been allowed to become drawn and of soft growth at some time previous to their being planted in the bench. The Market.

There has been little change in the market the last two weeks. Stock remains scarce and high-priced, with no apparent tendency to change.

Funeral work was not quite so heavy the latter part of last week, but sales have not relaxed enough to jeopardize the wholesale market in the least.

Spring flowers are becoming more plentiful every day and a large variety of stock can be obtained. Potted tulips, daffodils, hyacinths and cinerarias are a big help and make the first good showing of blooming plants since Christmas.

Various Notes.

The annual meeting and dinner of the Florists' Advertising Club will be held February 16.

The three wholesale houses have a quantity of frames, the size required for the car cards, on sale at cost. They are complete, with removable back, hanger and stand.

W. C. Smith, of St. Louis, Mo., is visiting with his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Hunkel.

C. C. Pollworth made a business trip to Chicago February 5 and 6.

John Rindfleisch, of Beloit, Wis., was in Milwaukee February 8 and 9, looking for Easter plants.

A. H. M.

Macy, Ind.—Mrs. J. Elmer Landis is resuming the business of growing flowers, after having dropped it for a year.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Order Billboards for Spring.

By ordering now, florists in all sections where winter has prevented opening of the ground can have billboard signs at hand ready for installation when conditions permit. The billboard is a wonderful help in the publicity movement and is an ornament of no mean order to a florist's establishment, no matter how it is used, and it flashes the message, "Say It with Flowers," as nothing else can. The sign is furnished to anyone who has an opportunity to make an installation, at the exact cost, $50, to our publicity committee, a cost which is about half that of a similar sign ordered by an individual. Shipment is made direct from the factory, in Indiana, and freight charges are prepaid. Orders should be sent to the secretary, accompanied by a check for the cost and instructions as to best route to destination, with name of railroad station. Clubs and other organizations would do well to take up the matter of obtaining pledges for installations of billboards, as a liberal display of them in their communities would be of great service to our industry and help to perpetuate the message of the slogan. We have already noted what has been done by a few prominent organizations in this direction.

More Subscribers Wanted.

Our publicity committee is just now in urgent need of further support in the way of funds for a better continuance of the campaign. At present, they are dependent upon the funds pledged by those liberal-minded florists who have lent a hearty support to our project since its beginning and expansion, but with the funds thus forthcoming we are only able to mark time and prevent the benefit already promoted from fading away. Without the slightest doubt we can double this benefit by extending our effort, and this, of course, means the expenditure of more money, which must be collected from those whose interests it is to serve. Wherever there is a community big enough to "Say it with Flowers"

St. Valentine's Day

THE VALENTINE SPIRIT presents to everyone the opportunity of creating new friendships, making old friendships stronger and expressing renewed devotion.

When you choose Peacock's Flower Shop to fill your Valentine's orders in Chicago you assure the satisfaction of your customers—fine flowers, artistic and proper arrangement, with prompt service.

With a lifelong experience as a florist and designer, during which time I, for eight years, had the management of the floral shop of A. Lange, in Chicago, and other prominent men in the trade, I have gained the confidence of my fellow craftsmen and can assure you that all orders entrusted to me by telegraph will have my personal attention, with the sole endeavor to turn out satisfactory work.

I am pleased to say that I am daily in a position to reciprocate with telegraph orders, and that no order will be sent out for less than $5.00.

With best wishes for a successful season, I am, support a florist, that florist's business is increased through the publicity afforded by the campaign. If all florists were to base subscriptions on even a small percentage of their increased business since the opening of the campaign and would voluntarily send them in to the secretary, our committee would not now have to make an appeal, for funds would be ample. But thousands of otherwise astute florists are hanging back, content to let others of their brethren shoulder the expense of this, the greatest and most beneficial movement ever promulgated in the trade, or in other trades. Unlike other trade slogans, "Say It with Flowers" conveys a message so widely appreciated that perhaps only one class of people is unaffected by it and that class has our sympathy and gratuitous service when in need of flowers—the poor and destitute.

HERBERT STONE, Manager

Arouse yourself, then, Mr. Nonsubscriber. Help us to help you to still further increase your business by increasing the demand for your products. You should believe in this campaign as you do in your religion, and support it. You share in the benefit resulting, so why not in the expense of conducting it? If you think the matter over at all seriously, you will, afterward, send a check to the secretary for an amount which your conscience dictates you should send. John Young, Sec'y.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

The Market.

The wholesale market conditions last week brought many worries upon the commission men and the retailers. The great shortage of stock caused business to suffer considerably. Many of the retailers resorted to the use of artificial flowers to make up much of their work and many orders for fresh flower designs had to be turned down. The weather has been fine and it is hard to understand the big shortage, when usually at this time of the year there is plenty of everything and prices are low. The market cleared early every day. Many of the local growers came in only every two days instead of daily as they used to do.

Carnations played a big part during the week. The cuts were good, but the great demand for them caused the price to advance to $25 per hundred for the extra fancies, while the bulk of them brought $20. These prices mark a record in this market for carnations.

Roses advanced in price, as not many of them came in at any time during the week, and the quality was not good. Violets are in good supply and at reasonable prices for the best, but an advance is looked for by the end of the week, when the demand will be heavy for St. Valentine's day.

In bulbous stock, prices are higher than ever. The supply of freesias, jonquils, tulips, Paper Whites, Romans, valley and callas is not enough for the demand.

There is plenty of good heather to be had. Other stock, such as candytuft, mignonette, calendulas, daisies and snapdragons, shares with the others in price and demand. Spencer sweet peas are all sold before they come in and are placed on orders on arrival at top prices of $6 per hundred. All greens sell at sight, especially asparagus, galax, leucothoe and adiantum.

Growers' Meeting.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association held an interesting meeting Wednesday, February 4, at the Eleven Mile House. There was plenty of interesting matter up for discussion. The formation of the national growers' association at Chicago, January 22, was discussed and approved of as a help to the grower. It was decided to change the membership rules so as not to confine eligibility to the county alone, but

Looking Back to the Time of Washington

Whenever Washington's Birthday approaches, I often think of a delightful summer's ride taken with a horse and buggy some twenty-five years ago.

A two weeks' ride following along the historic points that range from the wonderful old Headquarters at Newburgh, N. Y., to the delightful one at Morristown, N. J.

Among the most interesting of all was the old mine and ruins of the blast furnace where was dug and smelted the iron for the chain that stretched across the Hudson.

A chain with huge links half your height and length, that protected Washington's Headquarters from the approach of British men of war.

Some of the links are still there for you to look at and ponder about.

When I think of those links, they always stand for the unbroken strength of the links of this Government of ours.

Links which Washington really fashioned. Links that neither outward nor inward foes have been able to break.

With the recent round-up of the reds still in mind, this thought is one of reassurance and inspiration.

Washington's Birthday should, this year, mean more than ever to us.

Its floral messages carry an expression of contentment and security.

to invite all growers to become members. The first application received under the new ruling was that of J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., father of the new national growers' association.

W. A. Rowe, in a short talk, gave the interesting points that came up at the American Carnation Society meeting in Chicago, January 21 and 22.

Strenuous efforts will be made by the members to get a large increase in membership now that they have opened the way to admit any grower who wishes to join them. The shortage of cut stock came in for its share of discussion, but it seems that everyone will have to be resigned to the existing conditions. The next meeting will take place March 3.

ers held its monthly meeting February 4, at the municipal greenhouses, 5800 Oakland avenue.

J. H. Kellogg gave an interesting talk on native plants, particularly those found in the vicinity of St. Louis. "The Use of Native Plants in The Garden" was the topic of L. P. Jensen. The members were much interested in these talks. L. P. Jensen also outlined briefly what had happened at the meeting of the directors of the Society of American Florists at Cleveland.

Secretary Schaff reported that all members of the various committees are working hard and he said that he looks for the best annual meeting of the National Association of Gardeners ever held.

The next meeting of the association will be held March 3.

Andrew Hoffman and Albert Gumz are again attending to business after sickness.

Frank A. Windler, vice-president of the Missouri State Florists' Association, is making an effort to have the association hold a meeting in St. Louis, May 15 and 16, during the progress of the spring flower show. The St. Louis florists are enthusiastic about this and say that it would be a fitting time to hold the meeting and transact much delayed business, especially the election of officers, as there has been no meeting since its organization three years ago. L. A. Archias, Sedalia, Mo., reports a fine increase in membership since last August and no doubt this meeting in May would attract a large attendance.

Those in charge of the preliminaries of the spring flower show, to be held at the St. Louis Garden Club, met February 6 at the University Club and prepared a program and premium list. The show is to be held May 15 and 16. Those who attended the meeting were Herman Von Schrenk, Dr. George T. Moore, Joseph Frank has closed his flower department in S. S. Kresge's 5 and 10-cent store, owing to the scarcity and high prices of cut flowers, but intends to reopen when stock becomes more plentiful.

All the florists in the city are displaying the S. A. F. St. Valentine's day posters furnished them by the local publicity committee and all predict a record-breaking business this year. The publicity committee used a reproduction of the poster as a double-column advertisement in the daily papers.

The Acme Flower Shop, which will open in the new Arcade building, at Eighth and Olive streets, the latter part of this month, has a handsome Brecht refrigerator ready to be installed. Mrs. E. Turk and Mrs. J. Stewart are the proprietors; both have had long experience and are excellent designers.

The January issue of the Missouri Botanical Garden Bulletin announces some new titles: George H. Pring is now horticulturist, L. P. Jensen is arboriculturist and Paul A. Kohl is floriculturist. John Noyes also was named landscape designer.

At the meeting of the Florists' Bowling League, Wednesday, February 4, the Daisies continued their advance in the race by defeating the strong Carnation team in two of the three games played. The Roses increased their lead to six games by winning two of their three games from the Sweet Peas. The Daisies and Sweet Peas are now tied for the last place. J. J. B.

The problem of flower supply seems to have about reached the point where it cannot get any worse. It has been working to this point for about six weeks. For the last two weeks the demand has been growing daily, with no improvement in any crop save that of sweet peas, and this only a slight improvement, as the weather has not continued bright for a long enough period to bring out the peas in any great quantity. week helped to keep back blooms. An epidemic of influenza, worse than that of a year ago last fall, has caused an abnormal demand for flowers of all kinds and everything else has given way to a rush of funeral and hospital work. With an unprecedented shortage of stock that would be felt under normal conditions, it is difficult to take care of orders that pile up daily. The wholesalers meet less than half of the calls for stock. The retailers manage, by economy, ingenuity and rare good luck, to get by, wondering at the close of each day how they did it and how they will manage the next.

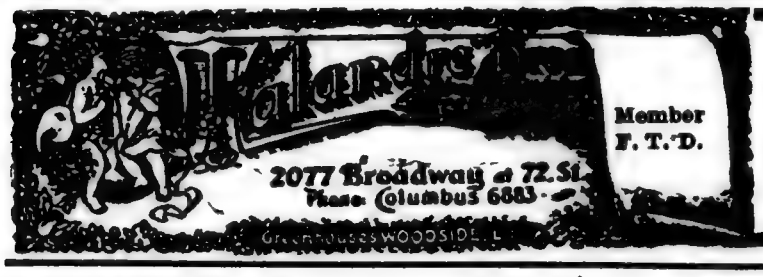
It is a trying time for wholesalers when florists in all parts of the country are writing, wiring, calling by long distance telephone for flowers at any price, to have to turn them down for want of stock. They all do it time after time each day. What stock there is goes to regular customers first and this has to be apportioned so that everybody gets a little. No one can say he is being badly treated by the wholesalers.

Prices are higher than a week ago, with roses at from $15 to $30; carnations, $15; freesias, $8; sweet peas, from $1.50 to $4, and California violets, $2 per dozen bunches. The roses comprise Ophelia, Shawyer, Russell and Columbia. Carnations were never so high at this time of year. The last few shipments of violets have not been up to standard, owing to poor packing.



Various Notes.

Samuel Murray is showing his first white lilac plants of the season. He has some fine cyclamen from growers and baby primroses from his own greenhouses. These have been used for funeral orders and he has sold a good many baskets for funerals.

Ray Blessing, of T. J. Noll & Co., says he could sell five times the quantity of flowers he receives every day. "At this time in ordinary years we are on our third crop of carnations. This year we haven't our first crop yet. There are thousands of buds hanging on the plants, but they do not develop and there isn't anything to take their place. I have been in the business fifteen years and I have never seen such a scarcity of flowers or such a price as $15 per hundred for carnations at this season of the year. All the gypsophila we had put away was used up long ago. We haven't any greens and even the artificial flowers, of some of which we had big stocks, are about sold out."

The Pinehurst Floral Co. has moved to 1121 Grand avenue, on the fourth floor, to remain there until the completion of the building at 1109 Grand avenue. This site has been leased by the Gate City National bank and the building will be entirely remodeled.

Ed Humfeld is getting a good cut of sweet peas daily. February 6 he cut 2,000.

Mrs. M. E. Carter is recovering from a serious attack of pneumonia. Mr. Carter was home for two days with a heavy cold.

L. F. Willis, of the W. L. Rock Flower Co., has returned to work after being out several weeks with an infected hand. Part of the bone in one finger was removed in order to save the finger and, although the wound is healing, he cannot use his hand much. The infection was caused by a thorn.

Mrs. Marguerite Weber, wife of E. C. Weber, died January 28 of pneumonia. She had been ill several days, but pneumonia did not develop until the night before her death. Mr. and Mrs. Weber were married June 18, 1919. Mr. Weber is associated with his brother, Fred M. Weber, in the Linwood Floral Co.

Floral Co. Practically no flowers are being cut there. One hundred carnations were sent up one day. Other days not this many came. J. E. K.

Alpha Elberfield, the indefatigable owner of the Alpha Floral Co., recently returned from a midwinter vacation trip to Costa Rica.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

Demand greatly exceeded supply last week, one report being that there was not one-tenth enough flowers to meet the requirements. The epidemic of influenza, grip and pneumonia has materially increased the funeral demands and there is also a large demand for social affairs, although the promoters of the fashionable functions have been less active or have betaken themselves to California and Florida until after Lent. The sunshine of last week did not continue as was hoped for and consequently there are fewer flowers and larger funeral demands. Prices are practically on the Christmas level, or, if anything, a little stiffer.

Various Notes.

Several of the retailers who were "too busy to get sick" last year have succumbed and are "doing time" in the epidemic of this season. Several more have come down with the disease since the previous week. Undoubtedly the hardest struck is F. H. Riegelmeier, of Carson street, south side, together with Mrs. Riegelmeier and their daughter, Miss Helen. The head salesman of the Riegelmeier store, William C. Kessler, has also been added to the list of victims, leaving Miss Ethel Miller, a recent addition to the staff, and Harry Glock, a temporary assistant, to fill the large number of funeral orders as best they can under the bedside direction of Mr. Riegelmeier.

Mr. and Mrs. Shapiro, of Bedford avenue, Herron Hill, have announced the betrothal of their daughter, Miss Minnie Shapiro, to Max Goldhammer, the salesman at the Rosery of Samuel Gidas on Forbes street, Oakland. The wedding is planned for June.

A marriage which is soon to occur is that of Leo Blaha, of Aspinwall, to Miss Helen Smith, of Sharpsburg. Mr. Blaha is the youngest son of Michael Blaha, the Aspinwall grower, and has charge of one of the largest and most attractive stands in the Diamond Market.

William L. Gallaher, of 221 Diamond street, has just let the contract for the erection of a $7,000 dwelling house on Duquesne heights, South Hills. In addition to the home, there will be a 25x26 conservatory for the growing of palm decorations in the rear. The property will occupy six lots, with a 157-foot frontage. Mr. Gallaher reports his business during the month just past as the best of any January in the history of his business and says that on the whole he finds business much better at his present location than at his old store at 204 Fifth avenue, from which he moved two years ago. His father, Charles H. Gallaher, is assisting in the store.

Andrew D. Megas, whose store is in the Solomon building, reports that his business has been constantly improving since he moved there last May. Michael F. Stafford, who for some time had a store on Smithfield street, has been recently engaged as outside salesman for Mr. Megas in the city and suburban trade.

John H. Cape, of Dunkirk, N. Y., expects for a time at least to take charge of the business of his brother, the late Samuel Cape, a notice of whose death January 31 appears in this week's obituary column.

Stock continues to be scarce, while the demand is increasing. Influenza cases are increasing in number and the situation is becoming alarming. For both sick rooms and funerals, flowers are being greatly sought and the meager supply is quickly exhausted.

The rose supply is inadequate and prices are extremely high. Every available rose is quickly utilized. Carnations, although more plentiful, are far from meeting the demand.

Lilies are scarce and high-priced. Narcissi are available in small quan-

The Market.

The scarcity of flowers is causing prices to soar here the same as elsewhere. So far this month we have had only two bright days and in January we had only six bright days. This is beyond doubt the reason why the roses, carnations and lilies do not open any faster. A few bright days will increase the supply here considerably. The weather has not been severely cold, but stays around the freezing point a good part of the time. We have been fortunate in not having much snow.

The flu is taking a number of people. The death rate is as high as it was a year ago last fall.

Various Notes.

wife has been suffering from a nervous breakdown, but is now somewhat improved.

Karl Zeidler reports plenty of business but no flowers.

Mrs. J. C. Elspermann is rushed with work and has to buy heavily from Chicago at higher prices than she ever paid before.

Henry Seymour says he is turning down a number of orders. His stock is good, but the carnations do not open fast. He has added a few roses and will get a good spring and summer cut.

The William Blackman Floral Co. reports no rest since before Christmas. This firm is sending out an immense lot of funeral work and a large number of potted plants. Its cut of roses and carnations is good, but short of the demand. The cut of freesias, sweet peas, calendulas and lilies is good. Walter Blackman was confined to his home last week with an attack of the flu, but is now back on the job.

William Blackman, who for fifteen years has been unable to walk, felt returning strength to his body and legs about ten days ago and the doctor, who was attending him in a spell of sickness, told him that he could walk and to try it. He did, leaning on the arm of his attendant. He walked around the block and is much encouraged. He is 83 years of age and hopes to be able to walk the rest of his life.

Niednagel & Sons are short of flowers, but report the best January they ever had. They have a fine lot of carnations in 2-inch pots and their cut of sweet florists refuse to make up designs and will supply only sprays. These sprays are often much more attractive than the wreaths made up with an insufficient supply of flowers.

Various Notes.

Many travelers for Holland bulbs have been calling on the Toronto trade and many large orders are reported. No definite information is available as to the prices. One dealer states that only high-class bulbs are available and that an increase may be expected, while another states that Holland is looking anxiously for markets for her bulbs, and that we may even look for a drop in prices this year. In any case, it is evident that quantities of bulbs are available, but it is only conjecture at present as to what the price will be.

The Hamilton and Toronto Florists' Clubs have been trying out the exchange of members at their meetings. The first of these exchanges took place Monday, February 2, when Edward Gale, representing the Toronto Retail Florists' Club, visited the Hamilton Gardeners' and Florists' Association and demonstrated the making of a wreath from mossing to the complete design. He made an exceedingly pretty design of roses, sweet peas, violets and freesias, a feature being the rapidity with which he wired the flowers and made up the design. Several florists commented on the high-class workmanship and the quickness of turning out this class of work. It is expected that a representative of the Hamilton association will attend the next meeting of the Toronto club and give a talk on some phase of the florists' work.

The greenhouses of Carl Grobba, at Mimico, are in excellent shape since he has taken them under his personal supervision. His stock of lily of the valley, which he is now cutting, is the finest he has ever had. He is shipping this and lilac to Chicago, in addition to supplying his regular customers here.

The Ontario Horticultural Association met in Toronto, February 5 and 6. This is an association of amateurs with a membership of over 20,000. Several florists were noticed at the gathering, among them being W. E. Groves, of Hamilton, who was one of the speakers, and A. Gilchrist, of West Toronto. It was announced that there is a movement to secure a plot of ground in some central place in Ontario to be utilized in horticultural experimental work and trial grounds, and the belief was ex-

CINCINNATI, O.

The Market.

The last week has made little change in prices in the wholesale market. The weather has been bad, too dark to be of benefit to any kind of stock. In roses, Premier and Mme. Butterfly are best, Columbia being slightly off quality. Prices are the same as last week, from $12 to $50 per hundred. Ward roses are short to medium and good sellers. More of this popular rose must be grown next year; it is the best of the yellow roses.

Some extra fine snapdragon has made its appearance; while the stems are of medium length, they are long enough for almost any purpose. They sell quickly. Sweet peas are maintaining their good quality. Carnations are still unequal to the demand. Although growers of this favorite flower are in good crop, the flu has kept the demand ahead of the supply.

Single daffodils have made their appearance on this market, selling at $1.50 per dozen at retail. Freesias are plentiful and extra fine. Daffodils are expected this coming week. Narcissi are good and the supply is equal to the demand. A few rubrum lilies have made their appearance, but the main crop is not expected until Easter.

The retailers report business as good.

Owing to sickness, there is little entertainment. The bulk of business is funeral work. Most stores have adopted the plan of selling at least one item at cost. In this way it is possible to satisfy those who complain of high prices and are skeptical about buying.

Is your city represented there?

If it IS—by someone else—you will know the reason why YOUR telegraph delivery business is not so large as you think it should be.

If it is NOT represented, you will see a "grand and glorious" chance to add to YOUR business. Practically every Florist who makes any effort to send and receive telegraph delivery orders finds the profit soon equals what he made on the best three or four customers he ever had.

The opportunity is specially good for the leading Florist in cities not already represented in the Pink Part of the Review. First consult the Index on pages 66 and 67, then use this order blank:

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business during the first half of last week was about normal, with no great change in prices. February 5 the worst blizzard which New England had experienced since the great storm of November 26, 1898, almost completely paralyzed business of every description. The official record gave the snowfall as fifteen and one-half inches, but a fierce northeast gale whirled it into great drifts and transportation of any kind was almost impossible. The Boston elevated and tunnel trains made fairly good time, but surface lines were, in many cases, snowed up entirely and are not yet all in operation. To make matters worse for shippers, few trains were operated on the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. February 5, 6 and 7, while but a limited number came in or were sent out over the Boston & Maine and Boston & Albany systems. Wholesalers who had sent boxes down February 5 were ordered to take them away the following day, as deliveries were out of the question. The commencement of this week saw somewhat milder weather and it is hoped that marooned cities, towns and villages will all be reached soon, but additional snow and sleet February 6 and 7 were discouraging features, and more precipitation is promised.

Little is to be said of the cut flower market. There were few arrivals February 5, 6 and 7 and buyers were scarce, but prices held about the same, with carnations selling at $10 and $15, and roses showing a weakening tendency. February 9 conditions were nearly normal, although it was still impossible to get shipments to or from a good many points, but the outlook is more encouraging, and it looks as though St. Valentine's day would see all lines of traffic opened unless more snow storms come.

Boston Florists' Association.

There was a good attendance at the meeting of the Boston Florists' Association at the Parker House February 3. Acacia pubescens from Fred E. Palmer and pansies from C. T. Beasley Co., East Milton, decorated the tables. Four new members were elected. The retailers presented their side of the cut flower question in vigorous fashion, led by B. F. Letson, of Carbone's, chairman of the retailers' committee. William Penn and E. F. Gorney read papers, while Martin Wax, John Eisemann, Mr. Gibbs, of Lynn; F. E. Palmer, Mr. Robbins, of Cambridge; D. A. Brownstein, William H. Elliott, Frank Edgar and others took part in the discussion, which was long and animated and showed widely divergent views, but was, nevertheless, conducted in a friendly spirit. Daylight saving was unanimously endorsed by a rising vote.

The use of wax and other artificial flowers, condemned by one speaker, was approved by another retailer as being necessary at Memorial day. E. A. Peirce spoke on a recent western trip and said that he considered the quality of cut flowers in this city far superior to any seen in cities visited, the grading better done and the pot plants much superior in quality. Paul Fortmiller, of the Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y., who was a visitor, spoke on cooperation and on the work being done by the American Association of Nurserymen. At the March meeting the wholesalers will present their side, Charles Robinson and Joseph Margolis, of H. M. Robinson & Co., being in charge of this branch of the business.

making an imposing display of over 100 orchid plants in bloom at Horticultural hall February 7. Part of the exhibit came over the road in a truck, became snowbound near Cliftondale and the plants had to be stored in a private residence over night. Another part came over the B. & M. R. R. in a baggage car, some specially choice specimens being brought by hand. Mr. Burrage deserves every commendation for putting up a display under such difficulties. Included in the group were splendidly flowered specimens of Phalænopsis Stuartiana and P. Schilleriana, Cypripedium Minos Youngii, Odontoglossum Othello and O. armainvillierense, Odontioda Lehmanni and O. Bradshawiæ, Cymbidium Veitchii and C. Gottianum and other choice varieties. J. T. Butterworth received a silver medal for a grand specimen of Cymbidium Vandyke, carrying sixteen flowers; a first-class certificate for Cypripedium Archie Neill, with twenty-one flowers, and a cultural certificate for Cymbidium Gottianum, with three grand spikes.

Everything points to a big attendance February 17 at the entertainment, dance and buffet lunch of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club in Horticultural hall. All club members who were in any branch of the service during the late war will be guests of the club.

Entries are starting to come in for the big orchid and spring show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, which opens March 24. More orchids will be shown at this time than at any previous exhibition in America, not excepting the big special orchid show held here several years ago.

Various Notes.

A house of sweet peas just coming into crop, belonging to Everett E. Cummings, of Woburn, collapsed under the weight of snow February 5. Mr. Cummings estimates his total loss at about $10,000. Many other growers had an anxious time clearing roofs, using props inside and in other ways helping to stave off disasters. Only the best forms of construction will withstand such a strain as roofs were subjected to February 5 and 6.

Peter M. Miller, of the T. J. Grey Co., is quite seriously ill at his home with pneumonia.

STELLARTON, N. S.

The greenhouse range of George McLaughlin was destroyed January 26 by a fire, which started at 3:30 in the morning and was discovered by a worker in a near-by railroad yard. The fire had made such headway by the time the firemen arrived that they could only save Mr. McLaughlin's residence. The temperature at that time was 16 degrees below zero and whatever stock the fire did not reach was ruined by the cold. The fire is supposed to have originated in the boiler room. All supplies were destroyed and the total loss is estimated at $12,000; the insurance is $3,000. Mr. McLaughlin plans to rebuild at once.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

The last week was a busy one for every retail store in town. Some large funerals took place and greatly diminished the supply of stock. It is noted, however, that there was some increase in the quantity of the supply, but it is still a hard thing to keep enough stock on hand. Freesias, calendulas and a few snapdragons are helping to fill the shortage, but the two main supports, roses and carnations, are still behind on account of the cloudy weather.

Various Notes.

The crops look promising at the range of A. Rasmussen, New Albany, Ind., where eight acres are under glass. The carnations will be excellent with a few more bright, sunny days. The roses, which are mainly Columbia, show a healthy, vigorous growth and first-class prospects for a large spring crop. Mr. Rasmussen has six of his houses planted in lettuce and that accounts for a good deal of the shortage of cut flowers on the local market.

The Jacob Schulz Co. was busy all last week. The supply of bulbous stock relieved the situation caused by the demand for funeral flowers.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Burlingame, Cal.—F. Peterson is starting in the greenhouse and nursery business.

Pasadena, Cal.—Henry A. Siebrecht, Jr., has been featuring in his House of Flowers an unusually large specimen of the epiphyllum, or Zygocactus truncatus, sometimes called the crab cactus.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Last week started with a scarcity of field and lath-house grown carnations and this became more marked towards the end, so that growers were asking holiday prices. Light and rose pinks that could be shipped out or used for funeral work were especially short and everything cleaned up daily. Growers of indoor stock also put their prices up and, judging by the appearance of the plants in the field, high prices are likely to continue. Freesias will be arriving in larger quantities by next week and will help the situation somewhat, though nothing takes the place of carnations. Roses are still scarce, but the lengthening days are helping the plants, and growers say they will soon be back to normal production. Daffodils are arriving in good shape and are almost equal to the demand, though doubtless more could be sold if they could be had. Small spring flowers for baskets are selling well and the call is for greater variety. Orchids are fairly plentiful, but keep up in price. Statice, helichrysum, rhodanthe and other everlastings have never been in better demand than they are this year; many orders both for shipping and local use have been turned down. Fortunately, greens are fairly plentiful and good. Plumosus is the only kind for which higher prices are asked.

Various Notes.

The San Fernando Gardens are finding great difficulty in getting sufficient help to finish their new place and the work has been delayed, but the Lampert brothers are both hustlers and completion is in sight. They have a fine location and good soil about one and a half miles southwest of San Fernando.

G. Van Bochove, Kalamazoo, Mich., was a visitor last week. He has not been in the best of health and is trying southern California for a few weeks.

At Rudolph Fischer's place, at Santa Anita, Cal., the freesias are a little later than usual, but are coming along in fine shape. Some nice cuts of Purity had been made and also a few of the new colored hybrids and in a few days cutting will be in full swing. Walter Armacost & Co. are handling the entire cut again this season. Mr. Fischer also finds difficulty in finding help and the unusual sight of sprinklers going full blast in January shows how badly rain is needed.

Alphonse Soubirou, well known in Los Angeles, has returned from Portland, Ore. He intends to stay only a short time and will return to Portland later.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

An inadequate rose supply is one of the most serious difficulties now faced by local dealers. With retailers bearing the brunt of the complaints in regard to the high prices of roses, a committee composed of representatives from the leading retailers of San Francisco called last week at a number of the growers' headquarters in an effort to come to a better understanding in regard to present prices. The matter was discussed with due consideration given to both sides of the question, but apparently the matter stands pretty much the same as before the conference. Just now, the demand is so far in excess of the supply that it is extremely difficult to regulate prices to any great extent. It is expected that with the arrival of the second crop, which is due within the next few weeks, the law of supply and demand will manifest itself in a gradual decrease in rose prices and thereby eliminate the present difficulties.

Shippers in San Francisco report that eastern orders have never been larger. Telegrams from all over the country are coming into the local shipping depots with frantic requests for flowers and more flowers, with the shipper in despair at his inability to meet the demand. Fortunately, the violet crop continues in good volume and spring flowers are fast growing more plentiful, thus relieving the cut flower shortage to some extent. Seasonable greens, too, are receiving their share of popularity, and quantities of acacia blooms, woodwardia, ferns, etc., are going out of San Francisco for northwestern and eastern distribution.

Almond blossoms and flowering peach blooms are seen in limited quantity, while in addition to daffodils, freesias, Chinese lilies, narcissi, etc., there is a limited supply of snowdrops, cut hyacinths and lilies of the valley to be obtained. Lilies of the valley, by the room into a delicate pink and white bower. This firm reports a large amount of table and basket work in addition to funeral orders, which continue in unusual volume.

The decorating for tables, etc., for the real estate men's convention, which was held at the Palace hotel recently, was done by Mrs. Copeland. Spring flowers were used. Mrs. Copeland states that her shop is kept busy with table and funeral work, the only difficulty being the scarcity of stock.

Of late the windows of Joseph's shop, on Grant avenue, have been particularly appealing with a profusion of spring blooms and several generous orchid displays. The quality of the present crop of orchids is good and enough blooms are now obtainable for a worth-while showing.

Daffodils and violets have formed the basis for a number of most attractive window displays made by Podesta & Baldocchi. One day last week the entire floor of one of the windows was carpeted with the bright yellow blooms, a stunning contrast to the colorful basket of spring flowers and violets which occupied the center of the window space.

Albert F. Amling, of Maywood, Ill., was a visitor in San Francisco last week.

Another member of the trade who was in this city is Tom Wright, of Wright's Flower Shop, Los Angeles.

Geo. Wilkerson, of the firm of Wilkerson & Brown, of Victoria and Vancouver, was in San Francisco last week. Mrs. Wilkerson, who came with her husband, is planning to remain here several weeks, visiting her daughter, who resides in San Francisco. Mr. Wilkerson is obliged to return to his duties in the north.

A. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., has been chosen president of a recently formed organization composed of presidents of various associations of this city. It was only a few weeks ago that he was elected president of the Downtown Association. At present Mr. Rossi is confined to his home with an attack of the grip. His condition is said not to be dangerous, however. Frank Pelicano, of the same firm, has fallen victim to the same illness. He is reported to be on the way to recovery.

G. Rossi & Co. are bringing in some particularly fine potted hyacinths and tulips, as well as a fair supply of flowering azaleas and rhododendrons.

A convention of the fruit jobbers of the state brought many visitors to San Francisco last week and filled the hotels to overflowing. Both Julius Eppstein's stand in the Hotel St. Francis and that of the MacRorie-McLaren Co. at the Palace report an added amount of business as a result.

Geo. Duffy, who is connected with the Palace stand of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., has announced his intention of leaving shortly for the Hawaiian islands. Mr. Duffy has severed connections with the company and it is said that he is contemplating opening a shop of his own in Honolulu.

Alfred Cuneo, of the Art Floral Co., is quite ill with an attack of grip.

Enomoto & Co. are shipping large quantities of daffodils and acacias to eastern points.

The rose crop of the E. W. McLellan Co. is starting well, according to Henry Avansino, manager of the Bush street store. Ophelia, Russell and Hadley form the bulk of the present cut.

The United Flower & Supply Co. was extremely busy with St. Valentine's day orders. One of the members of the firm remarked that the business of this particular season has never been better and extra effort will have to be made

The Market.

Market conditions remain about the same as last week; flowers are scarce and hard to get. Some of the florists are receiving heavy shipments from California. There is a fairly good supply of potted plants to be had, including cinerarias, tulips, hyacinths, etc.

Various Notes.

Robert E. Newcomb, representing the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, was calling on the trade last week.

Max Smith, 180 East Twenty-eighth street, has sold out to Thomas C. Luke. The store will be operated at present under the name of Smith's Flower Shop. Mr. Luke is well known, having been Mr. Smith's store manager for the last nine years. He is a member of the Ad Club and the Rotary Club.

Stock is still scarce, but an improvement is in sight, as the bulbous stock is starting to put in an appearance. Some fine cinerarias are to be had and they find a ready sale. Genistas are to be seen in many of the windows.

Various Notes.

Among the florists wearing broad smiles lately are Harry Johnson, of the Spokane Florist Co., and F. McCormick, of Post Falls, Ida. Both are proud fathers of baby girls.

E. Hedger, of the Davenport Flower Shop, has been home on the sick list for the last ten days, but reports show that he is on the road to recovery.

sen, Vice-president Herman Junge presided. The meeting was fairly well attended and was interesting. "Publicity in Advertising" was the main topic of the evening and some individual and interesting theories were advanced. Also the new rule regarding the Indiana rose trophy was discussed.

Several new names were proposed for membership: Thomas Affleck, superintendent of the Fletcher estate; Norman and Fred Hukreide, Indianapolis; Frank D. McConnell, of Boonville. The following were elected to membership: Wm. Julius, Jeffersonville; Adam Scheidler, Muncie; Clarence K. Hirth, Indianapolis.

Arrangements are being made to hold the next meeting out in the state. The out-of-town members present were: Lincoln Coles, Kokomo; F. L. Morris, Bloomington; W. H. Cossairt and Edwin Morner, Shelbyville.

Various Notes.

O. E. Steinkamp has just returned from Knoxville, Tenn., where he attended the Tennessee State Florists' Association convention.

The scourge of sickness that has swept through Indianapolis has included several of the local tradesmen as its victims. The entire Schwomeyer family has been sick and, through the courtesy of John Heidenreich, their place has been looked after. E. E. Temperley and his foreman, Martin Nelson, have both been ill and through the courtesy of Baur & Steinkamp, Edwin Nelson, a former employee of Temperley's, took temporary charge of the place. Adolph Fisher and Columbus Jones, of Baur & Steinkamp, have both been ill and Mr. Baur's two sons have been ill. Several others have been ill for a few days at a time and everyone is trying to help out the other in this time of stress.

Cards have been received from George Wiegand, who is having a fine time in Los Angeles, Cal. Carnations are selling at 50 cents to $1 for fifty in California, he says. E. E. T.

Howell, Mich.—Norman S. Chamberlain, proprietor of the Howell Greenhouse Co., has erected a windmill to pump the water supply for his four houses. The mill is an exact reproduction of a small type of Dutch windmill, with a wheel having the characteristic large, broad blades.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, R. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa.; Secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THERE is no sign of weakness in the onion set market.

ENOUGH narcissus and tulip bulbs were grown by the Department of Agriculture to supply the congressional distribution this year.

THE seed selling season is making an excellent start. The mail order houses are unusually busy, provided their catalogues are out.

THE Department of Agriculture included in its appropriation bill for next year $5,000 for the work of producing American bulbs.

THE C. S. Osborn Co., Newark, O., is well settled in its new store, where it is selling plants besides conducting its regular seed business.

SEED catalogues cost real money this season, and were slow of manufacture, but they will cost still more next autumn unless all signs fail.

A GOOD many seedsmen would gain by going over their mailing lists for duplicate names, judging by the fact that The Review has received from two to half a dozen copies of numerous 1920 editions.

FREE seeds for congressmen's constituents prevailed in the House of Representatives, when a motion to eliminate an appropriation of $239,000 for seed distribution was defeated February 9 by a vote of 130 to 71.

NEW LAW IN HOLLAND.

The representatives of Holland houses now traveling in this country, in many cases have received word of a new law affecting horticultural interests in their country. It appears that at the instigation of the nurserymen's organization the Dutch Chamber has enacted a law prohibiting the shipment of any nursery stock which has not been sold. In other words, it prevents the consignment of surplus stock to auction houses. The law is of principal interest in England, because America was closed last June to practically everything in the way of nursery stock from Holland.

The new law, as reported to bulb salesmen traveling here, does not include the regulation of the bulb traffic. Probably pressure will be put on, with the object of prohibiting the shipment of bulbs to America unless to fill bona fide orders.

MISSISSIPPI LEGISLATION.

Unreasonable Label Requirements.

House bill 316, filed January 28 by Mr. Gipson in the Mississippi state legislature and referred to the House committee on agriculture, is a close copy of the Texas seed law, approved July 28, 1919, with, however, some most unhappy alterations. The bill affects both agricultural and garden seeds.

The label required of agricultural seeds is hardly possible because of its indefinite provisions and unreasonable requirements. The label is only required to be attached to field seeds in wholesale lots, without any definition as to what constitutes wholesale lots, contrary to the well-established principle in these seed laws of limiting the labeling to amounts of ten pounds or more, a principle found in the Texas law from which this bill is taken. It requires the correct weight in pounds and ounces and the year grown. It seems an unreasonable duty to state the year when grown, because the Mississippi retailer has no means of ascertaining this fact, as he does not grow the seed himself. The requirement is unnecessary, because the germinating quality of the seed, which this specification is supposed to indicate, is taken care of under the provision requiring the percentage of germination and the date and year when tested. The bill omits the exemption of prosecution on account of labeling as to germination, as provided in the uniform bill.

Two separate provisions require stating the approximate percentage of weed seeds or other foreign matter. This confusion of weed seeds and foreign matter is unfortunate and acts as a distinct disadvantage to the purchaser, because he cannot ascertain from this percentage what are weed seeds and what is foreign matter. The words "or foreign matter" should be stricken out from this provision for this reason and for the further reason that it is completely taken care of by the provision requiring the percentage of purity, which defines purity and expressly refers to foreign matter.

Practically Prohibits Packets.

Section 11 is subject to the most serious objections, for it is so indefinite that it is difficult to understand the meaning of the law. It requires, among other things, that all seeds, whether garden or field seeds, sold in papers or packages, shall show the kind of seed, the year grown, name of the state grown in and approximate percentage of germination, except that this shall not apply to retail merchants who retail seed that is properly labeled. So far as packeted seeds are concerned, this is practically prohibitive of their sale, for, under the perfectly proper methods of packeting seeds, it would be impossible to state this information and, moreover, the mechanical difficulties in the way of such labeling would make it unprofitable to packet seeds for Mississippi customers. As this provision would affect even small 5-cent packets, concerning which there is no complaint and in which the amount of any possible natural deterioration is too small to be important, it is fair to ask that these small packets be eliminated from consideration in the law. It is equally reasonable to ask that the entire section be stricken out, for it is bad judgment to require the labeling of garden seeds in the same fashion as that in respect to field seeds, for reasons well known to those acquainted with the difference in character of the seeds and of their planting, cultivation and harvesting.

Curtis Nye Smith.

PENDING SEED LEGISLATION.

In New York State.

There have been filed in the New York legislature now sitting two seed bills, Senate 31 and Assembly 54, to amend the existing seed laws of New York, which are admitted by all persons to be unsatisfactory. The two bills mentioned are identical in wording and are similar to the Witter seed bill, which was passed by the New York legislature last year but vetoed by the governor on the request of the seedsmen for the reason that, by a clerical error, the word "approximate," preceding "percentages" of purity and germination, was omitted. The pending bills correct that error.

It is hoped by the seedsmen that the pending bill may also be amended to authorize the state experiment station, at Geneva, under the charge of Analyst Munn, to test seeds sent in by the seed dealers of New York state. It seems unfair to require seed dealers, under heavy penalty, to sell seeds accurately labeled as to purity and germination and weed contents, etc., and not provide them with an official laboratory wherein this information may be obtained. While the larger dealers may be able to afford the expense of a private laboratory and competent analysts, the smaller dealers, many in number, would have no means of testing their seeds, as of course it is inconceivable, and in some cases contrary to law, for the official laboratories of other states to test seeds for non-citizens, and the government testing station at Washington cannot be expected to handle the tests for all parts of the country and in unlimited quantities. If the state of New York is unable to handle this expense of testing commercial seeds, it is possible to cover this expense by charging a reasonable fee for these commercial tests.

Definition Desired.

Another modification of the pending bill desired by seedsmen is to eliminate the imperfect definition of the word "approximate" in the bill, for the reason that the definition applies to large and small seeds with equal force, limiting the margin of tolerance to an arbitrary two-tenths of one per cent plus twenty per cent of the lesser part. It is desired to eliminate this definition and provide in the bill, as is found in the uniform state seed bill approved by the Seed Analysts' Association and the seed trade associations, a provision permitting the official administrator of the law to promulgate reasonable regulations carrying out the provisions of the act. Under this mandate the administrator could provide for this interpretation of "approximate." This practice has been followed in other states where the uniform law has been adopted.

These matters will be considered before the assembly committee on agriculture, Daniel P. Witter, chairman, at the capitol at Albany, N. Y., February 18, at which hearing interested New

NEW FLOWER

Celosia Chrysanthefolia or "CELOSIAMUM"

A cross developed to its present perfection after five years of continued experiments. The color is a most beautiful cardinal red. In size it resembles Chrysanthemum. It was the sensation at the Detroit convention of the S. A. F. Can be cut and shipped from one end of the continent to the other and come up smiling. Wonderful for baskets, for vases and funeral sprays. One worn individually makes a handsome corsage. Can be dried, if so desired, and will readily sell at Christmas time and throughout the winter. The larger ones should retail at $12.00 per dozen, as we received $6.00 per dozen for them wholesale, and could not supply the demand of Chicago alone.

They are very easily grown—seed sown in greenhouse in February and transplanted outdoors the end of April will bloom in June—or they may be sown out of doors about May 1st and will bloom from July until frost.

We offer a limited amount of seed at $2.00 per trade packet

It was our intention to withhold the sale of this seed until 1921, when we would have a larger supply. But owing to the repeated demands and urgings of the trade, we have decided to let the Florists have this remarkable creation now.

Charles G. Curtis Co., Callicoon, N. Y.—A 6-page folder, offering "hardy native trees and flowering shrubs." Enclosed, also, is a wholesale list from Miss Edith Helen Curtis, who is in business at the same address, collecting and shipping native wild plants, which she lists under both the botanical and the common name.

Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O.—Illustrated 176-page catalogue of the Painesville Nurseries. The establishment is termed by the owners "the leading departmental nursery of America," and the orderly division of the business into departments is clearly indicated in the catalogue. Seeds and implements occupy the first fifty-six pages; then follow greenhouse and bedding plants, roses, perennials, ornamental shrubs, fruit-bearing stock, nut trees and ornamental trees.

A. E. Kunderd, Goshen, Ind.—"Kunderd Gladioli," a finely illustrated 40-page booklet, containing a history of the development of the Kunderd type of flowers, with two pages of cultural directions. "This is not really a catalogue," says Mr. Kunderd, "but a pamphlet sent out for the benefit of my customers, since I recently sold all my surplus stock of bulbs for 1920 and will not issue a catalogue before next January."

G. H. Hunkel Co., Milwaukee, Wis.—"Hunkel's Seeds," illustrated; seventy-two pages, besides an 8-page insert, which is printed on yellow paper and occupies the center of the book. In the flower seed department the prices are quoted in connection with the descriptive matter, as in the majority of catalogues. The prices of most other items of stock are omitted from the text, but are quoted in the insert, which serves as a condensed price list and also contains an order sheet.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE Lake Nursery Co., Leesburg, Fla., has been incorporated with a capital of $300,000.

AT the meeting in New York of the market development committee of the A. A. N., O. Joe Howard, of Pomona, N. C., was appointed chairman. Plans for carrying on the campaign were formed for the coming year.

WILLIAM FLEMER, JR., manager of the F. & F. Nurseries, at Princeton, N. J., was married February 7 at Montreal to Miss Emma Wilkinson, of Elizabeth, N. J., at the home of the bride's uncle. Mr. Flemer's parents were at the wedding.

THE law of action and reaction applies to supply and demand of nursery stock. Excess of demand, such as we have now, leads to excess production, when the pendulum reaches the other end of the swing. Market development will counteract that reactionary swing.

RHODE ISLANDERS POSTPONE.

The second annual convention of the Rhode Island Nurserymen's Association, in Andrews hall, Providence, was postponed to Thursday, February 12, just a week later than was originally planned. The postponement was due to the complete tie-up of transportation by the severe storm which has affected the whole Atlantic coast.

Charles H. Greaton, of Providence, in addition to delivering the president's address in the morning session, was scheduled to read an interesting paper in the afternoon on "The Standardization of Prices" and Paul V. Fortmiller, of the Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y., to discuss "The Present and Future Demand for Nursery Stock."

ILLINOIS ASSOCIATION MEETS.

Program in Chicago.

The Illinois State Nurserymen's Association held its third annual convention at the Hotel La Salle, Chicago, Wednesday and Thursday, February 11 and 12. The opening session was occupied chiefly with the delivery of the president's address by Guy A. Bryant, of Princeton, and with the reports of the standing committees. In the afternoon P. A. Glenn, chief inspector of the state department of agriculture, Urbana, discussed "Necessary Precautions in Nurseries Preventing the Spread of Dangerous Insects and Plant Diseases," and J. A. Young, of Aurora, read a paper on "What Does the Nurseryman Sell?"

The program for Thursday assigned to the morning the election of officers and the presentation of two papers, one by A. H. Hill, of Dundee, on "Coöperation between the Illinois State Nurserymen's Association and the American Association of Nurserymen," and one by J. C. Blair, head of the department of horticulture of the University of Illinois, on "The Possibilities of University Education for Nurserymen." In the afternoon the discussion by Alvin Nelson, of Chicago, of the question, "Should the Illinois State Nurserymen's Association Certify to the Sales Made by Members?" and the address by F. W. Von Oven, of Naperville, on "The Forestry Problem in Illinois," were on the program, followed by an open forum.

Free-for-all in Open Forum.

The stimulating nature of the discussion in this forum is shown by the following questions printed on the program:

To what extent does it pay the retail nurserymen to grow stock?
Are present wholesale prices justified?
What effect will the high prices have on the retail trade?
Can Illinois nurserymen grow their own grapevines to advantage?
Would a vigilance committee be a good thing for the association to have?
Would it pay the association to publish a list of stock for sale by its members?
Should the members of the association attempt coöperative buying of material or propagating stock?
Should the association attempt to reform improper practices in the trade or should such reforms be left to legislation?
Does newspaper advertising pay the nurserymen?
What method of advertising pays best?
Shall we hold the next convention in the southern part of the state?
Do southern-grown roses give as good results as northern-grown?
Will a reliable nurseryman grade poorer during a time of shortage?
Does it pay best to sell at retail through dealers, commission agents or salary men?
Is substitution permissible in the retail trade?
Should any attempt be made toward standardized prices in the retail trade?
Should the retail nursery business organize in Illinois or the middle west?
Is the nurseryman who furnishes stock to the retail customer at wholesale prices an injury to the trade?

DANGER FROM QUARANTINES.

THE WAYSIDE GARDENS CO., Mentor, Ohio

heir to, now comes to all of us the imminent hazard of the quarantine. These quarantines have become so frequent that nurserymen cannot longer view with complacency the possibility that at any time their nurseries may be further restricted or even entirely prevented from shipping by the power that the federal government and many individual states possess over our industry.

This country will spend upwards of $2,000,000 in 1920 for pest control. Of course, this is as nothing compared to the value of our forest and agricultural industry, including nurseries' protection and freedom to expand and prosper; so no one can complain.

The entomologist and the nurserymen ought not to be at variance. The entomologist should provide us with practical formulæ for attacking and controlling pests and, if necessary, see that the remedies are applied. Only seldom and for a short duration should a quarantine be necessary.

Make Investigation.

Haven't we a right to expect, from the money available and the growing experience and skill of the entomologist, to find the quarantine a measure to be resorted to with decreasing frequency? If it doesn't decrease, after expenditure of such sums of money, will not the taxpayers be interested in knowing why their efforts to provide such encouragement and protection to horticulture have been unavailing?

I therefore suggest the following measures be taken:

A. That nurserymen, right now, look into the appropriations their states spend upon entomological work. If your legislature is in session, examine the pending appropriation bill; there may be some things in it nurserymen of your state will take exception to. Consider if the amount of money expended brings the result.

B. Ascertain if your state has authority to quarantine your nursery. If the entomologist can place such quarantine, I recommend that you seek to have the bill amended, making your secretary of agriculture or your governor the person who can issue such an order, and then see that such a quarantine may only be ordered after a hearing has been held at which all interested parties may be heard. Remember that when your entomologist has power to issue such a quarantine order, he is detective, prosecutor, jury and judge. Our entomologists, I believe, are high-class, well-intentioned men, but nurserymen can only view with concern the well-nigh arbitrary power that some laws give them over our industry.

C. Make sure that the necessity for any quarantine issued under the laws of your state may be reviewed annually upon the request of a small

Here is a Good One

ANNABEL is darker in color and therefore better than Godfrey—and Godfrey is conceded to be the best of the "single" mums.

Everyone who grows single Pompons knows Mrs. E. D. Godfrey. It has been the best late pink variety. Now comes a sport of Godfrey, its name is

ANNABEL

It is a sturdier grower with exceptionally good foliage. Has long, stiff stems, well branched. Have cut stems with seventeen flowers and buds running up to 3½ in. across. Unusually good keeper in bench or when cut. Color, a beautiful cerise, tending toward lavender. Flowers of anemone type with several rows of petals, and yellow center. Season of blooming, Thanksgiving to Christmas. It is better than parent or any other Pompon and will bring more money. It is later than any variety we know of. 2¼-in. plants for delivery April and later. Orders filled in rotation. Order early. Sold under agreement that you dispose of no stock to any person until 1922.

This photograph was taken December 6, 1919, and will give a good idea of what HAMBURG LATE PINK looks like when grown to single stems and planted six inches each way.

HAMBURG LATE PINK CHRYSANTHEMUM

is an improved late pink Maud Dean, having more petals and, if grown for late, will hardly ever show an open center.

The average grower of Chrysanthemums must have varieties which are easy to handle, and from which he can cut as near 100% of perfect blooms as possible. Hamburg Late Pink has been grown for the last four years, and produces a very high proportion of good flowers. It is not an exhibition variety, but for late pink is one of the best for commercial purposes. It can be had in bloom the latter part of November by taking an early bud, but some of the flowers will show open centers. By selecting late buds, after October 1, most of the flowers are cut during December, and would advise to select late buds, as the later buds will hardly ever show an open center, and some flowers can be had even in January.

Keeping qualities are excellent and where a graceful pink flower is wanted, Hamburg Late Pink cannot be surpassed.

Plants will be ready March 1, 1920, and all orders will be filled in rotation.

Do you realize

That January Gold and Dr. Hitch are midwinter blooming varieties of Chrysanthemums? Have you been worried all winter because we have had so little sunshine that your Carnations and Roses have refused to bloom? We do a great deal of funeral work, but we have had no worry about flowers and the high cost of them. We have had just a few carnations and roses, but with our benches of beautiful, fluffy, white Dr. Hitch and the soft, yellow January Gold, we have kept right on cutting flowers every day from Dec. 20th till Feb. 10. No worries for us.

The Market.

The demand far exceeded the supply t week in spite of heavy production. e influenza epidemic is somewhat re- onsible for this condition. The call flowers for funerals is exceeding en the heavy demand during the epi- nic a year ago. The greatest diffi- ty of the wholesalers is to distribute ck to please everyone. They find it possible to fill orders as received, but to be fair by making what they have around so that everyone will have nething. It is said that more mag- ia leaves have been used in the last o weeks than in the whole six months evious. Everything sells quickly, even it carnations, short tulips and free- s. Paper and wax flowers are being d in funeral work.

Prices are higher than ever before this time of year, but they are con- erably lower here than in the east. veral firms are handicapped by the kness of members of their forces.

HEATING GARAGE.

lease tell me whether my plan for ng a garage 9x23x28 feet is cor- . I am taking a 20x30-inch Wilks water boiler out of my greenhouse placing it in the middle of the north of my garage. I shall run a 2-inch along the east wall and return with oil of four 1-inch pipes, doing the e on the west wall. The boiler has 2-inch taps, which I shall use for two flows. The flows and returns be under the windows, with about nches of rise from the boiler to the h wall. The lower end of the coil be about level with the top of the r. I can set the boiler lower in the f necessary. The garage is built of , with an air-tight ceiling and door.

he inquiry does not indicate the ber and size of the windows. Un- there is more than fifty square feet lass and if a minimum temperature 0 degrees will answer, the radiation cated should suffice. However, it ld be preferable to use either 1¼- or 1½-inch pipe for the coils. It ld be desirable, also, to have the r considerably below the returns, cially if 1-inch pipe is to be used. ead of running the flow pipes under windows, run them above, as this make it possible to raise the coils tle higher on the walls. This will e the same effect as to lower the r.

ROM STEAM TO HOT WATER.

lease tell me how to pipe two houses, 92 feet, for hot water. How many s of pipe will each house take, and t size of pipe? Could I use 3-inch s and have them on the purlin s? Are houses 192 feet in length long for hot water? The boiler n is at the west side of the north se and the floor of the boiler room en feet below the walks in the nhouses. Will hot water require much care as steam? How large iler will these houses need to keep n at 50 degrees in zero weather? y are being used for carnations and et peas. At present I have steam , with six lines of 2-inch pipe in house, but I want to change to water. O. B. M.—O.

Wilks Self-Feeding Hot Water Boiler

For Economy, Durability, Dependability

Install a WILKS and Forget Your Troubles

No night fireman required—as the magazine or coal chamber holds sufficient fuel to keep fire 10 to 12 hours without attention. Best made for a small greenhouse.

S. WILKS MFG. CO., So. Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 28th, 1920.
3523 Shields Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sirs: Received your boiler O. K. As for the boiler, it is all you claim for it and more. Would not trade it for six like the cast iron one I had before it. When it comes to keeping heat over night, it's right on the job. During our coldest weather here this winter (7 below) it kept the house at 55 degrees, and did it easy on slack and nut mixed.

Thanking you again for past favors, I remain,

Yours truly,
(Signed) JAMES McCRAY.

NOTE: Mr. McCray is using a 36 x 48 Wilks magazine feed hot water boiler.

om the sketch one sees that the e has a width of twenty-five feet, there is nothing to indicate its th. There is nothing to show that drawing is made upon any definite ; if it is to scale, the length is where between forty and fifty feet. e boiler is evidently located oppo-the center of the south side of the e and the main flow and return s enter at that point and pass across house, giving off 2½-inch flow pipes, h run on the purlins to the west of the house, where they connect the ends of the coils. The number and size of the pipes in the coils is correct, but unless the house is more than fifty feet long, a 2½-inch pipe will answer for the main flow, 2-inch pipes will answer for the purlins and 1½-inch pipe for the returns.

Great Saving in Preparing Land for Carnation Stock

Following is what Kretschmar Bros., of West Nyack, New York, say of the System:

"It has always been a great expense to prepare our land for the carnation stock before planting, as each day we would only plow enough for the day's planting so that we could work in moist soil. This also would be all hand raked to get it in the best condition. We can now plow the whole strip and harrow with a spiked tooth harrow and use the Skinner System after each day's planting to water them down."

S. A. KOST, Inventor

GLAZING CEMENT Applied with an "OH BOY" Automatic Glazing Gun

Evertite Glazing Cement remains elastic at all times—forming a waterproof and air-tight joint over the sashbar. Evertite Glazing Cement will stand the extreme expansion and contraction that a greenhouse is subject to and will not check or crack—nor will it harden.

You know what putty will do. Just think how vastly superior Evertite Glazing Cement is to putty.

Evertite Glazing Cement applied with a new "Oh Boy" Gun (see cut above) makes an ideal combination. This gun, which is the last word in glazing guns, allows Evertite Glazing Cement to flow in a uniform consistency all the time. Note the ease with which this gun can be handled. Think of what you have used and draw your own conclusion.

The Market.

he month just closed has been hard florists throughout the Dominion. weather, shortage of coal and fre- t freezing of shipments en route brought about more troublesome eriences than have beset growers for y years. The influenza epidemic is ng another visit to the province, the result of many deaths, and the e is compelled to work overtime to pace with the incessant demand in nection with funeral work.

usiness is brisker than it was last , but there is a scarcity of good s at the present time. Bulbous stock lling at higher prices than ever be- and cattleyas find a ready market 0 and 40 cents for the Schroederæ Trianæ varieties. There is a fine of violets, which, though arriving , are a great help in funeral work, freesias are meeting with a much er demand than in previous years.

"Master Soil Builders"

MASTER Brand

Concentrated Vine and Plant Manure

Guaranteed analysis: 5% ammonia, 2% phosphoric acid, 1% potash

In offering "Master Brand" Vine and Plant Manure to florists and gardeners we have put on the market an absolutely pure manure product made up from the most powerful of animal and poultry manures, thoroughly sterilized and scientifically mixed without any loss of the essential plant food elements—in no way has the manurial value of the organic matter of which it is composed been impaired.

"Master Brand" Vine and Plant Manure supplies at reasonable cost a natural plant food and soil builder that is more efficient than any of the imported plant foods that are so highly esteemed by professional gardeners.

No capable grower can fail to produce profitable crops if he feeds them with "Master Brand" Vine and Plant Manure in connection with his usual good culture. This soil builder and plant food is equally adaptable for feeding outdoor and greenhouse crops. It is particularly valuable as a top dressing or liquid food for roses, carnations, chrysanthemums and the general list of decorative and flowering plants grown under glass.

For feeding the general list of greenhouse bench plants 75 to 100 pounds for each 500 square feet of bench surface is sufficient for one application of top dressing. The frequency of application depends on the condition of the plants and time of year, but in general the treatment would be the same as with any high class manure. For potting soil use a 5-inch or 6-inch pot of "Master Brand" Vine and Plant Manure to each wheelbarrow load of soil.

"Master Brand" Vine and Plant Manure is guaranteed to be a pure animal manure product, thoroughly sterilized and packed in burlap bags containing 50 pounds and 100 pounds, net weight.

Send a trial order, or write for the names of well pleased users, descriptive circulars and prices.

Have us quote you also on "Master Brand" Bone Tankage Manure, "Master Brand" Precipitate Phosphatic Manure and "Master Brand" Concentrated and Sterilized Sheep Manure of guaranteed analysis.

DULUTH, MINN.

The Market.

The cut flower market has been uncertain for the last week, stock being scarce. There has been a large run on funeral work and it was almost impossible to get flowers at any price for this work. Flowers for the hospital and sick room are in great demand and, though the prices are somewhat higher than holiday prices, it is hard to get enough stock to supply the demand.

The stock that is available is good. Roses were never better and carnations are fine. A few daffodils and Paper Whites are arriving, but not enough to be noticed. Freesias, mignonette and calendulas are in short supply. Single and double violets have been a great help in the funeral work. Flowering plants such as cinerarias, cyclamens and primulas were life-savers last week, having been used in the place of cut flowers. Valley is plentiful, good and much lower in price.

Various Notes.

Philip Weil, of C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, Wis., was a visitor last week.

The Duluth Floral Co. had a large casket cover for the Ames funeral, composed of valley and Russell roses.

O. J. Eischen, who has been away from business for a week with the flu, is improving now, but it will be some time before he will be back at business again.

J. J. Le Borious reports business good. He has had to turn down many large orders for carnations. J. E. S.

The Markets.

Trade conditions are still at the nerve-wrecking stage, with only a short supply in all lines. In spite of high prices, the demand is such as to tax the retailers' efforts to the utmost to meet it.

Potted plants are having an unprecedented sale, as they take the place of cut flowers for the sick and as birthday remembrances. It would be a relief to be able to accumulate a little stock.

Various Notes.

R. E. De Rycke, private gardener at Velie Villa, has purchased the interests of Eckstam Bros., at 540 Tenth avenue, Moline, Ill. The place has 10,000 feet of glass and an established business. Mr. De Rycke takes possession February 15. W. G.

A wise business man figures costs by the year, right down the line, and especially so if his business has to do with greenhouses. He knows, either by experience or from a close study of the subject, that the only businesslike method of determining material costs in greenhouse building is by the year—first cost and up-keep cost.

CYPRESS, "the wood eternal" for greenhouse construction, is positively the cheapest wood to use, figured by its years on the job, without repairs or replacements.

All good constructors in these days are insisting on genuine "Tide-Water" Cypress, "The Wood Eternal"—every board and bundle bearing the famous Cypress Trade-mark.

Vol. 3, CYPRESS Pocket Library, is a little book filled with a big bunch of facts and figures about greenhouse construction—profitable reading. There are 43 books in the "Library," all of which give useful facts and plans about HOW, WHEN and WHERE to use CYPRESS, "The Wood Eternal," AND WHY. Which one shall we send you?

CYCLAMEN MITE.

Can you tell us the cause of the short stems on our cyclamens at this season? Is there a cure for this trouble? The plants are in 7-inch pots and are well-leaved, with the blossom near the bulb.
J. L. H.—Ia.

The most probable cause of short-stemmed flowers is cyclamen mite. This both dwarfs and disfigures the flowers and, in a lesser degree, the foliage. You can do little at this stage to remedy the trouble, but persistent fumigation and rather frequent spraying with nicotine, being sure to have it reach the axils of leaves and flower stalks, is believed to ameliorate conditions. I doubt, however, if there is any real cure for mite, and, if you really have this trouble, I should advise dropping cyclamen culture for one season.

NAMES OF THUJAS.

I enclose two pieces of arbor-vitæ and should like to know the correct name of each. B. F. G.—Va.

As nearly as I can tell from the samples sent, one is Thuja occidentalis and the other T. occidentalis pumila.

GERANIUMS NOT FLOWERING.

For the last few years I have been growing geraniums, but did not have any success in getting them to bloom by the middle of May. The plants are always big and sturdy, but do not seem to bloom early enough. The cuttings were put in the sand in the fall. What fertilizers should be mixed with the soil to force the blooms? A. S.

The chief cause for geraniums not blooming is the use of too rich a soil. With a lot of nitrogen in the soil they make a rank, but flabby, growth, which will produce but few flowers. This holds good both when bedded out and in pots. I have never had any trouble in flowering geraniums freely, but have used a compost far from rich. To each bushel of soil I add a 4-inch pot of fine bone and mix this thoroughly. Avoid all fresh manure; that which is old and crumbly is safe to use in the proportion of one-fourth manure to three-fourths loam. Loam from a sod heap which has been stacked a couple of seasons is ideal for geraniums, but old chrysanthemum soil answers well if you add the bone to it. What you need is a short, stocky, firm growth. This is sure to give you flowers.

Geraniums need a bright, sunny house. They should never be sprayed overhead, as this tends to make them soft. They enjoy an abundance of pure, fresh air and will not stand coddling. It is better to run them a little on the dry side during winter than the reverse. Firm potting is desirable; plants loosely potted will make a softer growth than those with the soil well firmed. I think if you will follow out some of these suggestions you will have no trouble in making your plants flower by the middle of May. C. W.

Watch Nielsen, the grower, grow

Back in 1918 the AGMCO built a big 62 x 400 ft. steel frame house for A. N. Nielsen at Pana, Ill. It wasn't anything new to him, for he had grown prize-winning stock in houses just like it in the magnificent AGMCO range of Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, Ill.

Nielsen was acquainted with AGMCO performance.
He preferred it to any other, after trying them all.
That's why—

he placed a second order for four AGMCO houses, 34 x 200 ft., detached, and a big boiler room 50 x 90 ft., steel frame.

Here's a man with a breadth of growing experience seldom equaled. A man who is a member of the craft by right of heredity—one who has studied the game in five different countries, and grown stock in every kind of greenhouse built. THE FRUITS OF HIS EXPERIENCE ARE BEFORE YOU. They cost him YEARS and DOLLARS. Now—

The secret of success lies in profiting by the experience of others.

Why not seize the opportunity and profit by Nielsen's?

Greenhouse Builders

The Low Cost Of High Prices

You have heard of the hundreds of thousands of dollars lost by the recent big storm, by greenhouses that went down.

You have heard not alone of the cost of the ruined houses, but the big sums of money lost in lost crops. Crops that were bringing money-making prices, such as never was the like before.

The loss of such houses is not to be figured at what they cost; but what it will cost to replace them.

Knowing the cost of building materials today, you fully appreciate what a terrific loss it all means.

Among all these houses that went down by the weight of the snow and force of the wind, none of them were Lord & Burnham construction.

In fact, never in our half a century of greenhouse building, has one of our Iron frame houses ever collapsed.

Some have accused us of being high priced, and haven't taken the pains to find out if we really were.

Others have accused us and then backed up, when they found out how our prices are always backed up with a full dollar for dollar value.

What does a man save, by saving a few hundred dollars when he buys a house, only to lose it and a lot more, when it goes down with the first big storm?

You may say that "a storm like this last big one only happens once in a lifetime."

Once is enough, isn't it, when in a night the savings of a lifetime are lost?

It's for just those once in a lifetime storms, that we construct our houses.

We construct them so the money you put in them is a permanent investment.

They do cost more than some houses.

The only reason they cost more is because they are worth more.

It's a case when a high cost is a low one.

When you are ready to talk building, say when and where and we'll be there.

DREER'S CANNAS

This season we harvested the finest and largest crop of Cannas that we have ever grown.

KING HUMBERT

And all the other good varieties you should have are included in our list and the roots are heavy and firm.

PRICES. The prices quoted are for dormant roots, which can usually be supplied until about the first of April, after which pot plants will be sent out and in which the advance in price will be as follows: All varieties listed at $7.00 or less per 100 will be supplied in pot plants at $8.00 per 100 or $70.00 per 1000, and on varieties listed above $7.00 per 100 there will be no change in price between dormant roots and pot plants.

All have green foliage unless otherwise specified.

TWELVE SPECIAL VARIETIES

Carmine Beauty. Deep bright carmine flowers freely produced high above the heavy dark-green foliage which has a narrow red margin. 4½ ft. 15 cts. each; $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.

Cheerfulness. No more appropriate name could be given to this brilliant novelty. Its beautiful bright fire-red or deep orange flowers appear early and continue without interruption until frost. Add to the prevailing color a golden border and center with each petal flaked carmine-crimson and you may form some conception of this fascinating variety. 3½ ft. 10 cts. each; 85 cts. per doz.; $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

City of Portland. A wonderful bright rosy-pink, much deeper in color than Mrs. Alfred Conard or Hungaria; a free-flowering, vigorous grower. 3½ ft. 20 cts. each; $2.00 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Fairy Queen. The dwarf, compact plants of this distinct novelty are covered with flowers from spring until fall. The plant rarely exceeds 3 feet in height. The flowers, of a clear rose-pink, are of medium size, good substance and borne upright on stout stems in great abundance. Each flower has a distinct cream-colored border.

We believe Fairy Queen will become one of the very popular Cannas. 60 cts. each; $6.00 per doz.; $50.00 per 100.

Flag of Truce. A large-flowered, creamy white with faint pink dots on each petal. The general effect is white. Not as white nor as tall as Eureka, but quite distinct and valuable. 4 ft. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.

Golden Eagle. A wonderful clear golden-yellow of free, upright growth. The flowers are produced in large clusters well above the foliage. 4 ft. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.

Harmony. Great clusters of good-sized, well-formed Geranium red flowers are arranged on good stems in such a manner as to give the trusses an almost globular appearance. 3½ ft. 20 cts. each; $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

Pocahontas (Bronze-leaved Olympic). Large oriental-red flowers borne on firm upright stems, just high enough above the foliage to show the entire head. The foliage is a dark bronze-green with emerald shadings; the ribs a darker bronze. 4 ft. 20 cts. each; $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Poppy. Intense poppy-red. Large perfect florets in good trusses over greenish-bronzy foliage. Rich and effective. 5 ft. 20 cts. each; $2.00 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.

Remarkable. This effective bronze-leaved variety stands out boldly among other sorts, not only on account of its height (6 ft.), but because of the beautiful scarlet-carmine trusses of bloom surmounting the rich green-bronze foliage. 20 cts. each; $2.00 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.

Surprise. The brightest red Canna we have. It surpasses in brilliancy such popular varieties as Meteor and Lafayette and produces its great trusses with equal freedom. 4 to 5 ft. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

The President. When the Canna Firebird was introduced its immense florets and bright red color immediately insured its popularity. In offering The President we may best describe it as possessing all the good qualities of Firebird enhanced by extraordinary vigor and perfect healthy foliage. It grows to a height of 5 ft. and produces its immense trusses of giant florets in great profusion. The most sensational introduction of recent years. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.

Increase In Rose Supply

A larger supply of roses is in sight. Though the very severe cold wave of the first part of the week set back the cut of roses considerably, still, as more moderate weather is experienced, a larger cut is sure to become a certainty. This will result in decreased prices.

We will give our customers the benefit of these reductions as fast as possible. Our regular customers know from experience that they are given promptly the benefit of any drop in prices. It is this square dealing, together with the exceptionally fine quality of our roses, that has built up our immense shipping trade. We invite those who wish to place regular shipping orders direct with the grower to give our stock and service a trial.

Find out by comparison the advantages of buying direct of a large grower. The value of his greenhouses is largely in his ability to satisfy his customers.

A larger supply of miscellaneous flowers, including carnations, is being received. Any flowers which we do not grow ourselves, we will buy for our customers and give them the advantage of the lowest market prices and best quality.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

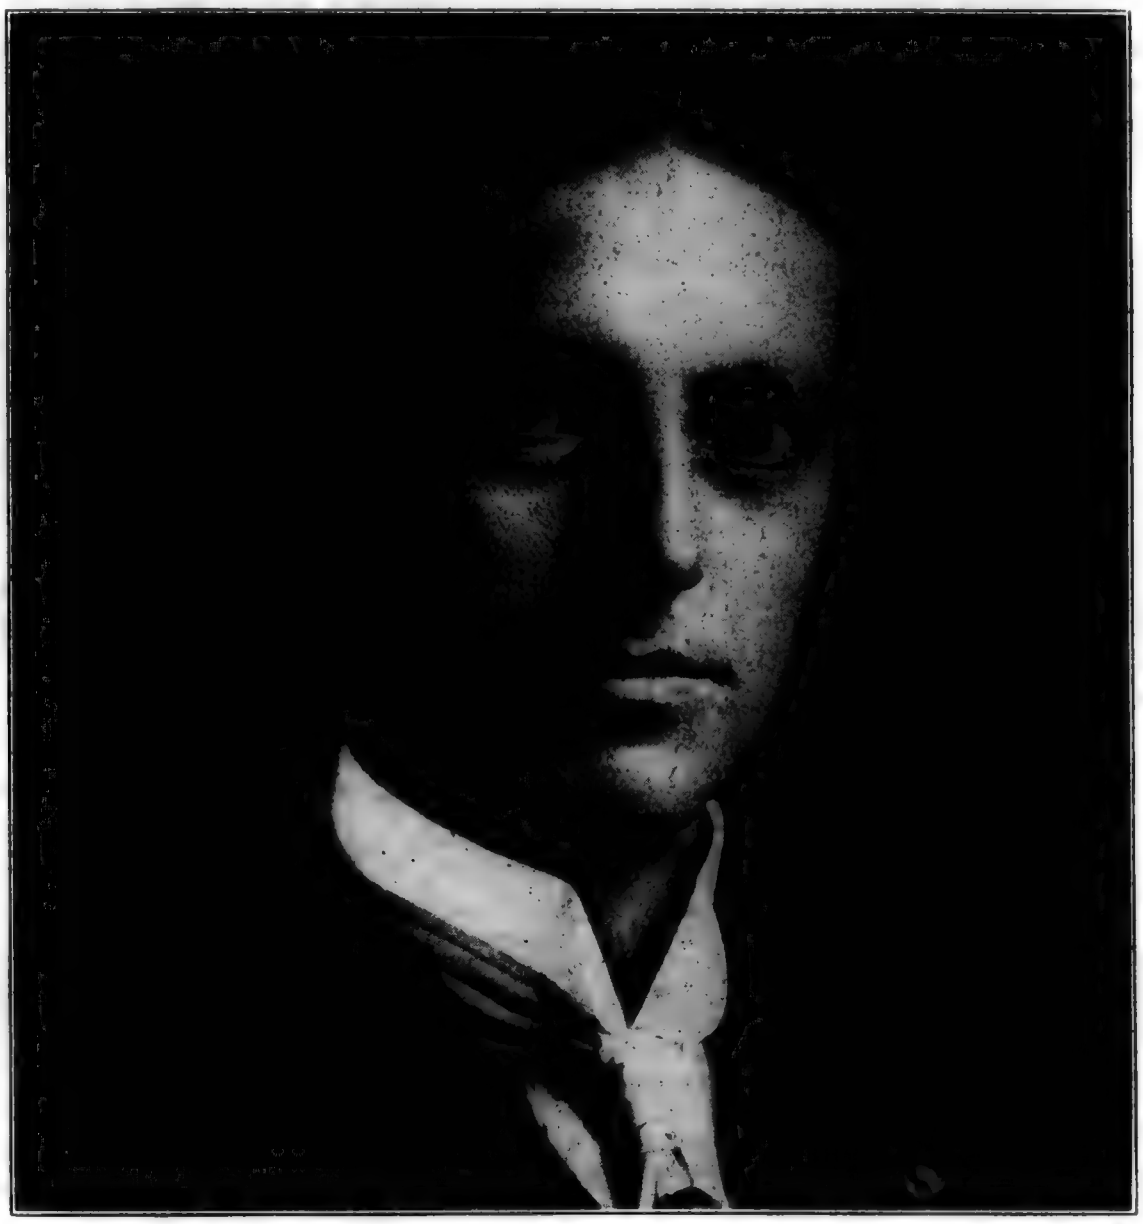
CAN CARNATION COME BACK?

That the carnation has not attained the popularity to which it is entitled is laid by this great advocate of that flower to conditions which the trade can remedy. His judgment will be heard by the whole trade with the same interest it received at the convention of Tennessee florists.

By A. F. J. BAUR

MUCH has been said, during the last year or two, about the waning popularity of the carnation, the reasons therefor, etc. I submit that the carnation is not losing popularity, except in certain quarters, and in these instances its loss of prestige is not due to any fault of the carnation itself, nor to the public. The fault lies entirely with the grower and the dealer.

There is perhaps no flower that offers a greater range of color or greater possibilities in combinations and contrasts than the carnation. Then why, may I ask you, do the growers limit their stock to the few staple colors, white and two shades of pink and red, and why do not the dealers demand of the growers a steady supply of the many beautiful shades not seen in the large markets now? And why do the dealers not avail themselves of the opportunity to use them when they are offered?



Monotonous Fare.

It is a well known fact that one may become surfeited with the finest delicacies if they are served up too steadily. Can you blame the public for tiring of carnations, or of tabooing them in their home decorations, when the only thing they can buy is what they see at every funeral? Even at the funerals there is too much sameness, and because of this lack of variety the public tires of your carnations. I feel safe in saying that ninety per cent of the carnation sprays you make are of one solid color and that color is either white, light pink or dark pink.

How many of you have made sprays of the beautiful Benora, or a combination of Enchantress Supreme and Pocahontas? You have, all of you, made sprays of daffodils, but how many have ever used Yellow Prince carnations in a spray, and who among you has ever gone out of his way to procure blooms of a flaked variety to offer a customer who would appreciate "something different"?

Whetting the Public Appetite.

This, I claim, is one of the principal reasons why the carnation has lost popularity in the big markets. It is up to you floral artists to whet the public's appetite for new colors and combinations. The growers will produce anything that you will assure them a sale for.

A. F. J. Baur.

I maintain that the carnation has lost popularity only in the large markets, partly for the reasons already stated and for the further reason that the blooms are not handled properly. Unless there is a radical improvement in the method of packing and handling carnation blooms in the wholesale houses, there will be little chance for the return of the carnation's old-time popularity. How many of the carnations that you buy in the average wholesale house have even a semblance of the form the flowers possessed at the time they were cut from the plants, especially if the blooms were shipped to the wholesale house from a distance of 100 miles or thereabout?

While a pleasing color may be of first importance, a form that is pleasing to the eye is not far behind.

Many of the carnation blooms that come through the wholesale houses have a striking resemblance to colored rags on sticks.

Popular as Ever.

But the grower who retails his own carnations, or the retailer who has his carnations brought to him direct from the greenhouses, finds the carnation as popular as ever, especially if he does not confine himself to the three or four staple colors.

This brings us to the buying of new varieties; also varieties of earlier introduction, but not seen growing in the average carnation range. That we must procure stock of the new varieties as they are offered, goes without saying. New varieties must be produced; otherwise, not only would improvement stop, but within a few years there would not be a single variety with health and vigor in cultivation. Without a market for the fruits of their labor the carnation breeders could not continue their work; hence there is a double reason why we should purchase the new varieties. Fortunately, those who follow this line of work usually conduct either a plant or cut flower business and do not depend entirely on the results of their breeding for their livelihood. Thus they are able to carry on their work until they have produced a variety which they really consider an advance over existing sorts.

Testing New Varieties.

That a large percentage of the new introductions fail of success is a well known fact and is often made the basis for complaint. To my mind, this does not indicate that the carnation breeders are dishonest. To anyone who holds such opinion, I would suggest that he get personally acquainted with the men engaged in this line of work and I feel sure that his doubts about the honesty and integrity of these men will soon be dispelled. This, I consider, is one of the real problems confronting the industry—to see to it that there shall be no lack of confidence between the growers and the hybridizers.

Few, if any, varieties are disseminated these days without having really made good with the originator, and, if given similar growing conditions on your place, they will do the same for you. If one of these varieties fails with you, do not blame the disseminator, but rather blame yourself for having failed to provide the conditions most favorable to its maximum development. We, all of us, are inclined to pass final judgment on a variety after one season's trial. This is a mistake, for which the numerous introductions are largely responsible. If we were privileged to buy, for instance, a new white carnation only once in five years, we would exert more effort to learn the special requirements of each variety purchased.

Learning Mrs. Lawson's Whims.

Only a few growers succeeded with Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson the first season after its dissemination, but these few succeeded so tremendously that almost everyone who had bought it resolved to master its whims, and finally, after a few years, every grower was growing his bench or house of Lawsons and swearing by it. Matchless had nearly the same experience. Many growers were disappointed in it the first year, but it showed up so finely at the exhibitions and the more skillful growers did it so well that many were encouraged to try it again and now Matchless is displacing all other whites on many places. I do not mean to advocate three or four years' trial for every variety purchased. That would not be practical. But the cases cited show that we should blame ourselves rather than the disseminator when a variety fails with us.

During the last two years the dissemination of new carnations came practically to a standstill and, now that new varieties are being offered again, it might be interesting to run over the list of what we now have and see where we may effect improvement by displacing the old varieties with the new. In white we have been growing White Enchantress, White Wonder and Matchless, a trio that is hard to beat. Crystal White is now added to the list and is finding favor with many growers.

In a Class by Itself.

In flesh pink, Enchantress Supreme is still the leader. Laddie, which comes in the same color class, is really in a class by itself. Its size and general excellence are setting a standard for the breeders to aim at. Naturally, it does not bloom so freely as the standard varieties. Don't throw out all your Supreme to make room for Laddie. You will have use for both.

In light pink, some are still growing Winsor and Gloriosa, for this is a color the public wants. Our own Ruth Baur comes in this class and we shall allow you to pass judgment on it next season. In medium pink, we have Mrs. C. W. Ward and Rose-pink Enchantress. Neither of these is entirely satisfactory, but nothing has appeared so far to displace them. Rosalia is easily the best in dark pink, although a few growers are still doing Rosette extremely well. Washington is also grown by those growers who stick closely to the Enchantress family. In red, Beacon is still holding its own in some localities, but its propensity for splitting in midwinter has brought it into disfavor with most growers. Belle Washburn is fairly free and fine in quality. Nebraska is freer in flowering, but not so good in quality. As Merry Christmas is our own production, we naturally think it is "it."

New Scarlet Carnations.

Peter Fisher is giving us Ethel Fisher, a scarlet which he considers superior to Beacon, and the Dorners are getting a fine scarlet ready for dissemination next year. Nic Zweifel's Edna, which we have on trial, is a splendid scarlet. We also have a fine scarlet sport of Rosalia and expect to have it ready for you in the winter of 1921-22.

In crimson, Pocahontas rules in point of quality, while Samuel Goddard's Doris leads in production. Donald, as shown by Strout's, looks like a winner and Bernice has made a splendid showing at the exhibitions. Benora has no rival in the variegated class and Maine Sunshine is a yellow that will find a welcome wherever things out of the ordinary are appreciated. Just at this time, there is no flaked variety offered, but Strout's flaked Matchless will soon fill this gap. There will soon be a supply in all colors and the improvement of the carnation will again catch its stride.

Within the last two years, prices on cut blooms, cuttings and plants have increased materially. There can be no disputing the fact that the increased cost of production of both plants and cut flowers justifies this increase. The extraordinary demand, brought on by abnormal conditions, has shot prices skyward. This, however, need not cause undue alarm.

Adjustment of Prices.

But let us, as soon as possible, get our prices adjusted, keeping them as reasonable as may be, figuring on a basis of cost of production. On the other hand, we owe it to our employees to see to it that prices remain high enough to keep their wages where they now are. Greenhouse employees have never received the wages they were entitled to, as compared with wages in other industries where the intelligence required is no greater and where the acquirement of skill and proficiency demands no more time and patience. Wages in other industries are high and probably will be reduced in the future, but greenhouse wages must remain where they now are.

Greater effort should be made to produce in each growing establishment its maximum yield, rather than to raise prices unduly. There are too many houses that produce only a half crop. In every large flower market you will find a few growers who are making money, selling their product in the same market that consumes the product of numerous growers who barely make both ends meet. The prosperous ones do not get higher prices for the same grade of stock, but they produce a higher quality and at the same time secure the maximum yield from their houses. Better growing methods are needed, rather than radical increases in prices.

Carrying Carnations Over.

Along this line, I might mention the possibilities in carrying carnation plants through a second season. This question has been discussed pro and con on many occasions and, as we have practiced the method more or less during the last ten years, our experience might be of interest to you. We have not found all varieties amenable to this treatment. Some varieties will not bear the summer heat as well as others, and therefore are not so good for this purpose. We have carried over successfully White Enchantress, Enchantress Supreme, Pink Delight, Good Cheer, Beacon, Ruth Baur, Rosalia and a number of seedling varieties. We have failed with Gloriosa, White Wonder and Benora. We find that the key to success in this is to avoid cutting back the plants too hard at one time and to get them restarted before the summer's heat sets in.

Having a considerable rooted cutting trade, we are able to work to better advantage than the purely cut flower grower. We select a bench or house for carrying over and begin propagating early in December, taking off all the young breaks as fast as they reach the proper size for cuttings. We continue this until the end of the propagating season, by which time the crop of blooms is beginning to thin out, and by May the crop will be entirely off. We then go over the plants and trim back any stems that were not cut low enough at the time the bloom was cut, our aim being to keep the plants compact. If there is much dry foliage, we remove what can be taken off without barking the stems. After that, we top the young shoots the same as on newly benched plants, until we are ready for the crop to come. We aim to have the crop come in late August or early September, as by that time the asters are usually on the wane.

Profits on Carried-Over Plants.

Should we decide to carry over a variety of which we have plenty of stock without using the cuttings as stated, we allow the plants to come along naturally until about March 1. At that time we cut back all the shoots that have not reached the bud stage. In this way the cutting back is done gradually and the results are the same as in the other method. Our records show, in estimating the profits on a bed carried over a period of two years, counting the cuttings taken and the blooms cut, that the yield will run away ahead of a bench planted each year with young stock. I feel that this method could be employed to good advantage and made to yield a handsome profit by the carnation growers.

Whether this process of carrying over stock would be as successful in the south as in the northern latitudes, I am not prepared to say, and this calls up the question of varieties adapted to your climatic conditions. Sooner or later, there will be developed a strain of carnations that will thrive in your warmer climate. I cannot suggest any definite course of procedure, except that by a series of crosses you will gradually evolve a strain especially suited to your needs. Some of your growers have raised seedlings and I would urge them to continue making crosses from year to year, selecting each year those varieties that show the greatest heat-resisting power.

POT SHOT AT WRONG TARGET.

The daily newspaper's favorite sport is posing as the defender of the "long-suffering public." It indulges in diatribes to this end whenever it sees a target, with little or no preliminary investigation as to whether it is a fair target or not. If the business or trade that is shot at is sufficiently strong or well organized to reply, the public often learns that it is not suffering so much from that particular source as its defender assumes.

Just now the eagle eyes of the journalistic marksmen see profiteers everywhere, so many indeed that they feel they can take a pot shot wherever prices seem high. Naturally, the florist seems an easy target, so the St. Louis Star took the shot at him printed below, which doubtless came to the attention of many others of the trade besides George E. Beal, of Creal Springs, Ill.

How little responsibility the newspaper wished to assume in its attack is indicated by the phraseology. The writer states that the average retail price of flowers "is said" to have jumped at an extraordinary rate. He is not even sure enough of his subject to state the charge positively; evidently he has not been a florists' patron himself.

Could the florists' trade follow the example of others, the actual facts—that for the first time in its history is the trade as a whole on a profitable basis—might be presented to the public to counteract such statements. Few people realize the expense in flower production.

As a matter of fact, the Star's writer himself gave the reason why a florist cannot be a profiteer—that his commodity is not a necessity, as is bread and clothing, and therefore the public will cease to buy it as soon as the price asked seems unreasonable. The St. Louis Star's editorial follows:

CURBING THE FLORIST PROFITEER.

According to reports, the germ of profiteering has affected the florists' trade to a degree said, in many instances, to surpass anything which hitherto has formed the basis of complaint on the part of the long-suffering public. While prices of other commodities frequently have doubled or tripled, the average retail price of flowers, whether for funerals, parties or mere tokens of affection, is said to have jumped at a rate in which it would be difficult to imagine the multiple.

With respect to flowers, however, the situation is somewhat different than is the case with bread, clothes and street car fares. People, as deeply as they may cherish blooms, can get along without them. They could not be classified as essential. Hence, it is not a difficult matter for the public to fight the florist profiteer effectively. The process is a simple one—merely to stop buying flowers. One florist has suggested the use of artificial flowers and plants, to escape the high prices of the genuine article. Such suggestion, however, might not prove popular. For real lovers of nature, artificial flowers would not succeed as a substitute. Furthermore, should the substitution prove popular, the contagion of profiteering probably would creep very quickly among the dealers in artificial plants. Public demand is all that it takes to nourish the profiteering process. However, the public need not be a victim of the florist profiteer. If the public stops buying flowers, the florist promptly will discover that he has got beyond what the traffic will bear.

COMMENT ON HIGH PRICES.

If newspapers are to comment on the higher prices of flowers—and most of them do, sooner or later—the attitude of the reporter can be affected by the florist from whom he gets his story. The florist can, if he chooses, make the high prices seem a matter of course, or, on the other hand, make them seem a deplorable and objectionable result of circumstances. A little diplomacy will affect the public's view through the newspaper reporter.

Compare the following, headed, "Carnation Prices Set New Altitude Record," in the Kansas City Journal, with other newspaper comment:

In these days of aviating prices comes the almost common carnation to join the ranks of the uncommon.

Back in the pre-war days, the carnation hung its head with shame when a dozen of its sweet-scented family were exchanged for a $1 bill. During the war the carnation was lifted to the $2-a-dozen plane.

And in these days, well, the carnation has learned not to hang its pretty head. It has joined the regiment of costly fancies and today sells for $4 a dozen!

The price is the same at every florist's shop in Kansas City. Florists scoff at the idea of "fixed prices." They say Chicago is the criterion and Chicagoans are paying $4.

Of course, the demand for carnations and all other flowers and floral designs has been unprecedented this winter. With sickness in many homes and a curtailed output, prices of all flowers have been boosted considerably.

Florists say the high prices have caused prospective buyers to turn from cut flowers to the potted offerings; especially in cases where the flowers are to form sickroom decorations. And physicians are recommending that potted flowers be placed in sickrooms.

"They grow and encourage patients, while cut flowers soon wither away and tend to lower the hopes of a sick person," a doctor explained.

PRICES VS. PRODUCTION.

The high prices of flowers have occasioned much comment of late, in St. Louis going so far that an editorial in one of the local papers called the florists profiteers and suggested that, in order to curb them, the public should stop buying flowers. Now, when our national and local publicity committees are endeavoring to get the public to follow our slogan and "Say It with Flowers," such suggestions should cause the grower, wholesaler and retailer to get together. We as florists must certainly tell the public that flowers are essential, but the public does not see it that way. They argue that they must have clothes and shoes and, to emphasize that, they tell you that they are patching their shoes and mending their clothes. They also tell you that they can eat candy, which, by the way, has greatly increased in price, but that they cannot eat flowers.

Now, I think that, after the growers organize, some system must be established that will prevent flowers from being sold too high or too low. The trouble, however, appears to me to strike root from the fact that flowers have been sold so cheap that the public imagines that the retailers and growers are making enormous profits. Of course it will always be said that supply and demand rule the market. That is true to a certain extent. Since Christmas there has been a big demand and only a limited supply, but now spring is coming on. Are we to jump from the sublime to the ridiculous by quoting roses and carnations at 25 cents per dozen? I think the great problem of the hour is, what to do with increased production if the demand is lowered, but I believe that the answer should be, better quality in flowers and fewer of them; if not, put a limit on the low price of flowers. If the public were given at normal times carnations at $1 and $2 per dozen and roses at $1 to $3 per dozen, they would then not argue over paying higher prices when stock did get scarce.

Soon sweet peas, which are now selling at wholesale for $1 to $1.50 per bunch, will become plentiful. Are we to see them on bargain counters, retailed to the public at prices that do not pay for the picking and bunching of the flowers? The argument that vegetables and fruits go up and down does not hold in our case; they are something to eat, whereas flowers are for enjoyment and pleasure. Let us supply flowers to the public at reasonable prices, but not at ruinous prices which do not pay for the growing or the handling. C. W. Wors.

SNOW ON GREENHOUSES.

There are times when "scientific facts" and practical application refuse to work together. Instances of this are the recent greenhouse accidents at North Wales, Pa., and elsewhere. The office man tells one that certain glass will stand a pressure of thirty pounds to the square foot when the pressure is evenly applied. Any practical florist knows that this is impossible in the case of snow on a greenhouse.

When snow falls on a greenhouse, that which falls on the glass begins to melt, while that on the bars does not. As the snow continues to fall, sooner or later—depending on the inside temperature—an arch or bridge is formed between the bars. In the case of bars set sixteen inches apart, this bridge is sufficient to withstand almost any amount of snow. I have seen it hold up three feet of drifts, endangering the bars themselves, as they had the whole weight to support, hardly an ounce of weight being on the glass.

But where bars are set twenty-four inches apart, under a snow arch of that length glass will not stand up and, of course, gives way in the middle, since the pressure there is farthest from the supporting rods.

It is a safe bet that, if the glass had been set the 16-inch way, not a pane would have been broken. Certainly the little additional light obtained with 24-inch glass would not justify the ordinary florist in thus playing with fate, since the odds against him would be too large. S. C. Templin.

QUARANTINING THE ORIENT.

A recent mail brought a copy of a "notice of public hearing to consider the advisability of quarantining Asia, Japan, Philippine islands and Oceania on account of dangerous plant diseases and insect pests."

Here is a cool announcement of a proposal to quarantine half the world, the half of the world to which our gardens and greenhouses are most indebted for their most valuable plants and, moreover, the half of the world to which we may look for a continued increase of our collections. In view of Quarantine No. 37, now in operation, one may ask: Will raising the fence a little higher make any difference?

The object supposed to be obtained by these quarantine acts is the exclusion of pests dangerous to vegetable growth of all kinds. This object is impossible of accomplishment in its entirety, since such pests as are of a bacterial nature and others of fungoid origin may be disseminated by air currents, as was the germ of the recent influenza epidemic. Those of insect character can travel on material other than living plants. Witness the corn borer, now alarming New England farmers, and the wood borer, found in American packing cases and about which Australia is just now agitated. The logical end of all such legislation is to cut off all international trade and intercourse.

These quarantine acts will not effectively keep out disease. They will accomplish no more in that direction than proper inspection at ports of import would do and have done in the past.

Panics are everywhere contagious. The effect of the actions of the Federal Horticultural Board is seen in recent hysterical legislation in Illinois. In view of this and what is threatened in New Jersey, it behooves all those interested in horticulture, both trade and amateur alike, to pause a moment and consider the logical outcome. Following the lead of the F. H. B., state will quarantine against state, then county against county, until finally it will be impossible to move a plant from one's garden to that of a neighbor. The trade has the choice of two things, either to resist this pernicious legislation with all its might, or wind up business while the winding up is possible. The cry of quarantine measures assisting nurserymen and florists is mere camouflage. The bankruptcy court is where it leads to and, worse than this, it means not only the bankruptcy of the horticultural trade but the bankruptcy of the garden art in America.

The same mail brought a notice that the House had appropriated $239,000 for free seeds. Here's the secret of much legislation. Politics pure and simple. The farmer's vote is necessary to the politician. Maybe the only way of injecting reasonable common sense into the "powers that be" is by bringing them to an appreciation of the value of the votes held by those who love flowers and gardens and cater to their needs. E. H. Wilson.

C. O. D.—CASH OR DIE.

Between January 28 and February 13 there were in Fort Smith, Ark., 1,645 cases of flu and the death rate averaged three per day. Financially speaking, it has nearly been the death of me; I mean that it has taken all the cash that I can lay my hands on to pay for the C. O. D. shipments that come in. For example, Friday, February 13, I had three funerals which aggregated over $600; of that amount, I paid over $100 for flowers and took in only $26, as the rest was charged. When one's daily averages are $75 worth of C. O. D. shipments arriving, $300 on the books and $24 cash, it is clear that, if the flu keeps up, I shall soon be on my way to the county farm.

I am not kicking about the business, for it is the best ever, but it certainly hurts a fellow's pocketbook, especially when his bank account is none too large. I write this simply to show the conditions in this town; it is a big credit town, most of the orders coming in over the phone. Then, too, the prices of flowers are the highest ever known, both wholesale and retail, but still people will buy. When you have to carry them for from thirty to sixty days, it is some hard job to keep your head above water. George Rye.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

The Giles Flower Shop, of Reading, Pa., has been rushed with funeral work, owing to the increase in the number of deaths from the flu.

• • • •

Albert M. Herr, of Lancaster, Pa., who has for several years been regarded as one of the largest growers of geraniums, looks for one of the biggest seasons in demand and the smallest in supply, unless present conditions improve.

• • • •

T. J. Opperman, of Camp Hill, Pa., lost some glass as a result of the recent heavy snowfall, but he feels consoled by the fact that his loss was lighter than that of some of his neighbors. The new houses and combined office and workroom built recently put a finishing touch to the plant.

• • • •

C. E. Rossiter, of Sunbury, Pa., has turned over the active management of a good business to his son Frank, who, in addition to possessing a natural love for flowers, argues that it is far easier to carry on an established trade than to sell it. Mr. Rossiter, prior to entering the profession, was a naturalist and taxidermist and possesses a valuable collection of native animals and birds, which he intends presenting to the high school museum.

John B. Rudy, of Elmira, N. Y., specializes in bedding stock, of which a leading feature is Geranium S. A. Nutt. This is only one item, but when grown in quantity it is a strong line.

• • • •

The Cowgill Floral Co., Salem, O., was forced to refuse orders for funeral work, owing to inability to get flowers. "I never saw it like this before," observed the head of the company, and when he was informed that $5 was paid to a florist in Dayton for two dozen freesias, he shook his head wearily at a fine lot almost ready to cut.

• • • •

Evenden Bros. Co., of Williamsport, Pa., found no large increase in business on St. Valentine's day, but could not have handled it if there had been. The wholesaler failed on a standing order and it was useless to try any other place at such a late hour. John P. Ring, former grower at the Evenden range for several years, returned from Montana on account of the poor health of his wife, but he made the trip in vain, for she died soon after his arrival. The funeral took place February 12. Some beautiful floral pieces were sent by the local craft. Mr. Ring will probably remain with his former employers.

LOCAL PUBLICITY FEATURES

The address of Z. D. Blackistone, of Washington, D. C., on "Local Publicity," delivered before the Tennessee State Florists' Association at Knoxville, February 6.

IN REGARD to the objects and ambitions of the national publicity campaign I am sure all up-to-date florists everywhere are well informed. The real up-to-date, honest-to-g o o d n e s s, amount-to-something florist knows that he is in a wonderful business. As sponsor for that business, he feels that he has a wonderful product to offer to the world. Flowers represent the indispensable thing which you and all educated people demand for certain and numerous occasions the world over. This is the story that the national publicity campaign is trying to tell.

Now, you gentlemen have asked me to come down here to give you a plan as to how each and every community can pursue a local campaign to coördinate and harmonize with this national campaign now being carried on.

As a general proposition, I will state that the conditions prevailing in the different communities are bound to differ to a considerable extent. In this discussion, however, I will endeavor to point out some things which in my opinion are essential to the future success and advancement of our business. I will divide my suggestions for this local campaign into four captions, not given in the sequence of their importance, but in the order in which they occur from this date on:

Steps to Success.

First, a better general and technical education among all workers in the florists' trade; second, a spring flower week campaign for the different communities; third, a general newspaper publicity campaign to cover as much of the entire year as practical, and fourth, a "Say It with Flowers" week campaign for the fall. In other words, those who desire to follow my suggestions can now start on number one and a little later take up in order two, three and four to cover the entire year.

A publicity campaign is supposed to be synonymous with an educational campaign. If we are to have an educational campaign in flowers for the public, we, as florists, must be the teachers. Are we competent, as store proprietors, salespeople, designers, decorators and general florists, to be teachers of the public in our respective lines? Have we equipped ourselves with all available information on the various subjects? Are we in a position to give final and satisfactory information on all subjects which are referred to us? There are a few, no doubt, who are studying the business all the time and are able to give intelligent and satisfactory information on all subjects which are referred to them. This, however, is not general. I do not believe the ordinary florist is as well posted on his business as he could be and should be. Therefore, the first step which I recommend would be better education, both technical and general.

For the spring flower week campaign I have an idea which, so far as I know, is original. We all are confronted with the problem of waste flowers during the prolific blooming period of spring. The question of how to prevent this loss has been a thorn in the side of the florists, so to speak, since the business first began. Now, flowers are not a material substance. We cannot eat them or wear them, but they have a mission in life. That mission is to spread beauty, fragrance, sunshine, happiness, love and sympathy. Therefore, if these flowers can be so used as to fulfill their mission they are not wasted. Though the florist may not be paid for them directly, they are fulfilling their reason for existence and the world is better for them. Now, my idea is that if the florists in each community, for one week in the spring, would assemble their surplus flowers and, instead of throwing them away, would advertise them through the newspapers by giving them away, they would be doing a big thing.

Spring Sunshine Week.

Disseminate these messengers of sunshine to the sick wherever they may be and call it the "Florists' Spring Sunshine Week." In this way they would redound to the good of the general trade and compensate the florists in publicity for all expense and trouble of the undertaking. There is one thing that we must always bear in mind and that is, that the flower business is founded upon the idea of G-I-F-T. In other words, of every hundred dollars' worth of flowers sold probably seventy-five per cent or more are sent as presents, just through kindness of heart, sympathy and love. Now, if our business is so dependent upon this gracious disposition of the public, does it not behoove the florist himself to set the example in liberality? This is, in my opinion, one of the greatest opportunities we have for publicity. There should be no taint of commercialism, or giving with a string tied to it, but it should be on a broad and liberal basis. With each contribution going out there should be a well worded card or letter. Tell the public that it is one of the joys of the florists' profession, that they have the opportunity at this time of the year to shed through the bounteousness of nature's own gifts the message of sunshine and hope. Not only say this, but train your minds to think it and believe it. If you don't get business returns from it, you will get heaps of satisfaction and pleasure, which after all is the thing which everybody in life is pursuing.

BLACKISTONE'S BIG FOUR

Four features recommended in florists' local publicity campaign:

Educational Campaign

Spring Sunshine Week

General Newspaper Publicity

"Say It with Flowers" Week

Newspaper Publicity.

My idea is that the general newspaper publicity campaign should be carried out through combined effort. This subject has been treated so well and has been handled so ably by many different communities that any remarks from me would be superfluous. I would suggest to those interested to f a m i l i a r i z e themselves with the history of the publicity campaign which has been conducted by the combined florists of Milwaukee. Remember that the best insight into the future is obtained through the study of the past. Therefore, I say seriously that we should study the history of this publicity campaign which has been conducted by the combined florists of Milwaukee.

As I am supposed to be the father of "Say It with Flowers" week, no doubt you will expect me to specialize on this subject. I am frank to admit that I consider it one of the greatest opportunities for publicity that we have. In other lines of life the year dies with the fall, but with the florists it begins, so to speak. This is one of the reasons why the "Say It with Flowers" week is so appropriate for opening the fall flower campaign in every community. The time for this campaign can best be decided by each and every community according to the conditions prevailing there. It would be folly to have this at a time when flowers are not abundant. The spirit of generosity and giving should be the keynote of this campaign.

The florists all over the country will certainly be losing an opportunity if they do not take this up and make it an annual affair. It is absolutely essential at the end of the dull summer for us to have something to stimulate and awaken us to new ambitions and hopes. If the "Say It with Flowers" week does nothing more than awaken and enthuse ourselves and the employees, the battle is already won. In addition to this, it awakens the public, which has drifted away from the habit of buying flowers during the summer, to the fact that the greenhouse flowers and plants are putting on their most welcome aspect to make the home happy and bright for the winter.

In our campaign in Washington the keynote was giving and not receiving. We started by sending flowers to the churches; next we sent flowers to hospitals; then we sent large baskets of flowers with suitable "Say It with Flowers" pennants on them to be put in large store windows, flowers to the inmates of the aged homes, flowers to newspaper men who had extended courtesies, flowers to soldiers, and flowers to any sick people we knew of. The point to be emphasized is the sending of a nicely worded letter with each and every flower sent out. In some cases these letters were read before a whole congregation of the church. This, you can readily understand, would not happen unless great pains were taken to word the letter in the choicest language.

These are some of the ideas that I suggest for local publicity. Observe that the keynote of them is spelled in four letters, G-I-V-E. Remember that it is more blessed to give than to receive. If your community wishes to be up-to-date in the flower business, it should embody the spirit of generosity. If your firm wishes to be one of the leaders in its community, it must embody the spirit of generosity. If your firm wants to be one of the leaders among the florists of the country, it must embody the spirit of generosity.

"There was a man, though some did think him mad,
The more he gave away, the more he had."

TATE'S TIPS

INCREASE THE DEMAND.

And Grow to Meet It.

There is much talk these days to the effect that advertising should be discontinued, since there are not enough flowers to fill the present demand. While such an assertion would seem ridiculous coming from business men, yet, as conditions now stand in the florists' business, there is, to say the least, an element of plausibility in such talk.

The $50,000 subscribed last year to the advertising campaign was contributed by just 2,300 individuals. Now, there are in this country something like 15,000 florists. This would mean that there are over 12,000 who are contented to go along in the old rut and do nothing to improve the business. When we find that such a condition as this exists, is it any wonder that we hear of a shortage of flowers all over the country? Is it not reasonable to suppose that this large majority of florists who had absolutely no interest in the advertising campaign would make no preparation for the increased demand that this campaign has caused all over the country? Those 2,300 florists, who made the campaign possible last year, and from its start, have demonstrated to the large majority of their fellow-craftsmen that advertising pays; surely this majority is not going to stand idly by and see a small number of their brother florists carry the burden any longer.

Handling Big Business.

Coöperative advertising has demonstrated that it pays; it has brought a greater volume of business to your doors than you are capable of handling. The florists' business is passing through a crisis; this is the time to look the situation honestly in the face, probe the wound deep and find out just what the cause is, and then, like the true surgeon, remove it.

When the S. A. F. selected the national publicity committee, they chose a set of men who took their position seriously. They are all broad-gauge business men; they were appointed on this committee for the specific object of popularizing flowers in the United States, and they went into this fray with printers' ink for their weapon and "Say It with Flowers" for their slogan. They have put up a battle that is attracting the attention of the whole country and now those who should be supporting them are crying for peace; they can no longer get sufficient ammunition up to the firing line.

Fighting the Fight.

Here is an illustration of the problem: There are in this country about 100,000,000 men, women and children. During the war about 2,000,000 of this number, the flower of the country's manhood, were overseas; they were there for a specific purpose, "to whip the Hun." It was their business to do the fighting. Did we ever stop to think what it cost to sustain this army in a foreign country? They were, in a way, as dependent as new-born babes; they had to be fed; they had to be clothed; they had to be armed and have the ammunition supplied. There was not a man in this great army who could not have provided for himself, but he did not have the time. They were fighting our battles and we were just as much interested in the result as they were. What would the consequences have been if, when they had the Germans on the run, the 98,000,000 on whom they were depending had failed to get ammunition to them? But they did not fail; everyone did his bit; our grandmothers knitted socks; our sisters took men's positions; everyone bought Liberty bonds, and we accomplished the job we started out to do in about one-half the time expected.

The Advertising Emergency Force.

Now put the publicity committee in the place of the officers; the 2,300 subscribers are the A. E. F., and the balance of the florists of the country are the American people. Can you go back on them now? To the credit of the American people be it said that they stuck and there is no one who can make me believe that the florists of this country are not going to stick just as loyally to their little advertising army as did the American people to the A. E. F.

At the beginning of the war we heard the usual criticism of the authorities failing to get supplies up to the front. It took time to get the machinery in smooth running order, but this fault was soon corrected. The whole thing was new, but American brains soon found a solution for this problem and the same sort of brains is going to solve the lack of production of flowers.

As I said before, first find the cause and then remove it. When the cause is found, count me a poor prophet if it is not that more flowers are being used in this country than ever before, that the source of supply is altogether insufficient and the only way to correct this shortage is to build more houses and grow more stock. Tate.

DUMSER'S DATA.

The G. B. Smith Floral Co., Prudden building, Lansing, Mich., suffered several hundred dollars' damage through water from the fire department's hose, Thursday, February 5. Mrs. Ballas, of the Lansing Floral Co., discovered flames coming from the fourth and fifth floor windows and turned in the alarm. The fire was soon under control, but the water caused considerable damage to all the lower floors. Mr. Smith, who was at home at the time, was notified and he quickly arrived at his store and did the best he could to protect his property, but it was a difficult job, as the upper floors of the building were drenched by the firemen. New stock was brought to the store from the greenhouses and everything was back to normal by noon next day.

Warren G. Matthews, Dayton, O., is enthusiastic about the F. T. D., especially since the meeting last summer, as his business in wire orders has exceeded his most optimistic expectations. Says Mr. Matthews, "Dayton, O., is my headquarters, but the whole U. S. A. is my field of activity."

Gustav Schneider, Springfield, O., remarked, "Since remodeling my store, business has increased in leaps and bounds and I am convinced that a good store front pays, especially if it is backed up by service." He has added another clerk to his force to help handle the increase in business.

At the Lewis House of Flowers, Pontiac, Mich., where a new house, 100 feet long, was completed just before cold weather set in, there is a fine crop for Easter and spring sales. The sweet peas have been yielding heavily right through January and February and a new crop is coming in for Easter.

The Pontiac Floral Co., Pontiac, Mich., grows a full line of up-to-date cut flowers and pot plants, but every visitor of the trade marvels at the fine quality and enormous size of a house of the old Bride rose. Harry Pierce, the manager, said, "Why should we discard a money-maker? Our soil and conditions are just what the Bride requires and for our work we need it." The daily cut includes many extra fine blooms on 3-foot stems. D. W. D.

ANOTHER QUARANTINE

BANNING THE CORN BORER.

Proposed Quarantine of the East.

The most recent aspect of the quarantine ghost that stalks among us, laying his repressive hand here and there, is given in a notice from the Secretary of Agriculture, under the date of January 30, indicating the probability of a quarantine prohibiting the movement from the New England states, New York and Pennsylvania of "cut flowers or entire plants of chrysanthemum, aster, cosmos, zinnia, hollyhock, also cut flowers or entire plants of gladiolus and dahlia, excepting the bulbs thereof, without stems, and other herbaceous plants," as well as various vegetables. The notice announces a public hearing to be held at the office of the Federal Horticultural Board, Washington, D. C., at 10 a. m., Tuesday, February 24, in order that those interested in the proposed quarantine may appear and be heard either in person or by attorney. This quarantine will shut off the mentioned trade stocks of New England, New York and Pennsylvania from the rest of the country, affecting a great amount of eastern business in mum plants, etc.

Bulbs Without Stems.

It is interesting to note that this proposal is in one respect less stringent than the Illinois quarantine, reported in The Review of January 15. The Illinois restrictions apply to all parts of gladioli and dahlias except the seeds, whereas the proposed federal measure specifically excludes the bulbs from its provisions. The reason for the inclusion of dahlia and gladiolus bulbs in the Illinois quarantine is given in a letter by P. A. Glenn, chief inspector of the Illinois state department of agriculture, as follows: "The corms of gladioli and the tubers of dahlias were included in this quarantine because we understand that a part of the stem is frequently attached to them when shipped, and it is this portion of the stem which is likely to carry the larvæ of the borer. I do not know how thoroughly this class of plants is inspected in New York and the New England states, but, so far as my information goes, they are not inspected as a rule, except, perhaps, in a general way in cases where they are grown by nurserymen. * * * If the authorities in New York and all the New England states should undertake to make such inspections, undoubtedly we should be able to modify our regulations." Although the punctuation of the proposed federal quarantine is not precise, it seems to provide that bulbs without stems are exempt—surely a more satisfactory solution of the difficulty suggested by Mr. Glenn than the proscription of the bulbs altogether.

Notice of Public Hearing.

However, the quarantine proposed in the notice of the Secretary of Agriculture affects so wide a territory and such important flowers that the public hearing February 24 is likely to draw a large representation from the trade. The text of the notice of the public hearing is as follows:

The Secretary of Agriculture has information that the European corn borer, Pyrausta nubilalis, a dangerous insect not heretofore widely prevalent or distributed within and throughout the United States and on account of which the notice of Quarantine No. 36, which became effective October 1, 1918, was issued, is now known to occur in portions of the counties of Essex, Middlesex, Suffolk, Norfolk, Plymouth and Barnstable, Massachusetts; Rockingham, New Hampshire; Saratoga, Fulton, Montgomery, Schenectady, Albany, Rensselaer, Erie, Cattaraugus and Chautauqua, New York, and Erie, Pennsylvania.

Since the promulgation of Quarantine No. 36, further investigation of the European corn borer has developed the fact that, in addition to corn and broomcorn, including all parts of the stalk, being susceptible, this insect breeds in and may be transported by celery, green or string beans in the pod, beets with tops, spinach, rhubarb, oat and rye straw as such or when used as packing, cut flowers or entire plants of chrysanthemum, aster, cosmos, zinnia, hollyhock, also cut flowers or entire plants of gladiolus and dahlia, excepting the bulbs thereof, without stems, and many other herbaceous plants, and further, that such products from infested districts have been moving throughout the period of corn borer infestation, with only minor restrictions, into the other New England states of Maine, Vermont, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

It appears necessary, therefore, to consider the advisability of quarantining the states above-named in accordance with the plant quarantine act of August 20, 1912 (37 Stat. 315), as amended by act of Congress approved March 4, 1917 (39 Stat. 1134, 1165), and of restricting or prohibiting the movement from these states, or from any infested districts determined therein, of corn and broomcorn, including all parts of the stalk, celery, green or string beans in the pod, beets with tops, spinach, rhubarb, oat and rye straw as such or when used as packing, cut flowers or entire plants of chrysanthemum, aster, cosmos, zinnia, hollyhock, also cut flowers or entire plants of gladiolus and dahlia, excepting the bulbs thereof, without stems, and other herbaceous plants.

Notice is therefore hereby given that a public hearing will be held at the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., room 11, Federal Horticultural Board, at 10 a. m., February 24, 1920, in order that any person interested in the proposed quarantine may appear and be heard either in person or by attorney.

ILLINOIS STATE ASSOCIATION.

Secretary Ammann Resigns.

Because of the great amount of work which will be required of him as secretary of the national growers' association, J. Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, has resigned as secretary of the Illinois State Florists' Association. William J. Hembreiker, president of the state association, asked Albert T. Hey, of Maywood, to serve as secretary in place of Mr. Ammann and Mr. Hey accepted the honor and responsibility.

The officers of the association will meet shortly after Easter and form plans for the next twelve months.

CHICAGO CAMPAIGN

Directors Elected.

At the meeting February 16 of the Allied Florists' Association of Illinois, the name under which the Chicago florists will undertake their advertising campaign, the start was set for March 1. Since the beginning of the month and the beginning of the week fall on the same day, this date is the most suitable that could be chosen, stated Otto Amling, who moved that assessments should begin March 1. Upon the seconding of A. Lange, the proposal was unanimously adopted.

Formal organization was made by the election of directors. The representatives nominated by the separate branches of the trade were elected, their terms being as follows:

Three years—George Asmus, August Poehlmann, John Michelsen.

Two years—W. J. Smyth, Otto Amling, Paul Klingsporn.

One year—A. Lange, Peter Pearson, Eric Johnson.

Upon the motion of C. S. Claussen, a resolution was passed that the president, vice-president and treasurer be elected by the directors from their own number. At the next meeting this will be adopted as an amendment to the by-laws, which now provide for such choice by the members of the association.

Over 300 Signed Up.

The meeting at the Hotel Randolph had not the large attendance expected because the retailers, busy with St. Valentine's day and flu orders, and the growers, coping with a spell of zero weather, overlooked the notices. Work of securing signatures had been pushed since the previous meeting, so that Secretary Swenson was able to report a total of 107 retailers, 135 growers and thirteen wholesalers whose signatures he had actually in his possession and a sufficient number in addition secured by the district captains but not turned in, to bring the total to more than 300.

Fred Lautenschlager reported that the meeting called of members of the allied trades had produced no results. He had learned that the opinion was that, since an equitable assessment was difficult to determine for the various allied branches, the firms should, at least for the present, make their contributions to the national publicity campaign. The opinion of Mr. Lautenschlager was confirmed by a resolution passed by the meeting recommending that the allied tradesmen contribute to the national fund.

Plan Whirlwind Finish.

To push the organization to completion while enthusiasm is high and to get as many as possible in line by March 1, a whirlwind finish was proposed for the campaign. In addition to further mail solicitation, there will be a day of personal interviews by directors and leaders in the campaign Friday, February 20.

Chairman Asmus called for volunteers to offer automobiles to take parties of three or four to cover various sections of the city and for others to form such canvassing parties to visit florists not yet signed up. Those who volunteered at the meeting and any others who are able to join in the work on that day will meet for luncheon at the Perfecto at 12:30 Friday and spend the afternoon rounding up the remaining signatures.

The final meeting of the association before the plan goes into effect, March 1, will be held at the Hotel Randolph Thursday, February 26. By that time signatures of practically all the trade are expected to be in the hands of the directors. Those who have not signed applications may mail them to Secretary Swenson, at Room 305, 431 South Dearborn street, Chicago.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

The supply of stock continues short and prices are good. There is less than half enough flowers to meet the demand. Funeral work has slackened somewhat in the last two or three days, which indicates that the influenza epidemic is waning, but there have been enough orders of this kind to use everything available and to keep stock cut to the limit. Plants and baskets have never been sold to any extent for funeral work until this winter, but they have been used in many instances where flowers could not be obtained and they have pleased the buyers. Carnations are arriving a little more freely.

Various Notes.

The Longview Farm has completed plans for a new greenhouse, 85x425 feet, which will be devoted entirely to roses. C. J. Tucker and Russell Parker have returned from the east, where they purchased a large number of rose plants. Among the varieties which will be grown are Columbia, Premier, Madame Butterfly, Dunlop and Milady.

W. E. Tredup was in Leavenworth last week.

S. Bryson Ayres cut 15,000 sweet peas in two days recently and has been getting good cuts every day for two months.

The Pinehurst Floral Co. has cleaned up on cyclamens and cannot supply the calls for daffodils, jonquils or hyacinths.

Tucker Smith and Earl Parker, of Pleasant Hill, Mo., were in the city the early part of last week.

P. A. Manson came up Sunday, February 8, to help Mr. Wade move the local equipment of the Pinehurst Floral Co. to 1121 Grand avenue, where the company is now located.

Miss J. E. Murray is renovating the interior of her store, having the woodwork painted white, and changing the arrangement of fixtures.

Mrs. Margaret Simpson, of the W. L. Rock Flower Co., is visiting her daughter, Elizabeth, who is attending school in Newark, N. J.

J. Austin is cutting some carnations, narcissi and calendulas and has a good supply of pot plants and baskets. He cannot get enough jonquils and hyacinths to meet demands, but has plenty of other bulbous stock. He is cutting from 300 to 500 sweet peas a day.

Mrs. Hardy, of the Hardy-Bernard Floral Co., is of the opinion that the growers should put in larger crops of bulbous stock, because it is increasing in popularity each year.

R. S. Brown & Son are getting all the carnations they need for their trade and plenty of cut stock of all kinds.

Among the recent visitors were: Edward Fetters, of Detroit, Mich., en route to California; Mrs. J. C. Rennison, Sioux City, Ia.; Carl Hagemeyer, Paola, Kan.; Frank Stuppy, St. Joseph, Mo.; James J. Karins, of H. A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia; C. F. Edgar, of the McCallum Co., Pittsburgh; George Hampton, of J. G. Neidinger Co., Philadelphia; Martin Reukauf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; Roy Murray, Olathe, Kan.

Miss Nettie Seymour, of the W. L. Rock Flower Co., has been ill for several days.

A. Newell has recovered from an attack of influenza and is able to be downtown, although still weak.

Samuel Murray had a dinner decoration one night last week for which he used oncidiums, Premier roses and heather in striking effects.

T. J. Noll has returned from two weeks' visit in Michigan. His sister, Mrs. Max Chandler, of Jerome, Mich., who has been quite ill, is improved. Mr. Noll stopped over in Chicago on his way home.

The Peterson Floral Co. had a big display of baskets for St. Valentine's day.

Henry Kusik says he has not half enough flowers to take care of business.

Miss J. S. Murray has been receiving shipments of freesia and violets from California, both of which have come in perfect condition and have helped out through the shortage.

The Muehlebach Flower Shop had a big decoration for the dinner for visitors to the tractor show.

Adolph Mohr says his lilies are coming on in good shape for Easter and will be on time. He is selling a good many cinerarias and has a large quantity of Christmas stock for next year.

The Rosery was prepared for St. Valentine's day with a supply of corsages made up early in the day. They received a number of advance orders Thursday and Friday, February 12 and 13, most of which were for corsages.

R. S. Brown has been ill for several days.

E. A. Humfeld made a white blanket of roses and sweet peas for the casket of C. C. Chiles. This blanket was one of a number of orders that Mr. Humfeld had for this funeral.

A. F. Barbe has been cutting carnations in the bud in order to get enough flowers for his trade.

Charles Robinson, formerly with the Apollo Flower Shop, is now with the Moseley Floral Co.

J. G. Eggleston had about fifty calls for sweet peas and other cut flowers, Friday, February 13, none of which he could fill, as he had sold all of his peas the day before. Some persevering customers called five or six times and one even wanted to know if Mr. Eggleston wouldn't watch the blooms and cut them if they came out. J. F. K.

L. G. Johnston has bought land in this city and expects to start this season by growing annuals for the local trade. He was formerly located in southern California and grew for the Los Angeles trade, but says that the cheap Japanese labor put him out of business.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Considering the serious disarrangement resulting from the snow storms and blockades, business has held up well. Even at the beginning of this week, train service had not reached normal and some of the branch railroad lines were still snowed up. In its effect on the railroads the storm of February 5 was even more paralyzing than that of November, 1898, since mild weather followed the earlier storm and soon melted the snow. An additional snowfall of six inches February 13 did not improve matters, but the worst is believed to be over.

Roses continue in a strong position. There is not much call for American Beauties, but hybrid teas are in good demand, with a specially strong call for Ophelia, Ward and reds. The lack of sunshine has prevented a heavy cut of roses. Carnations have shown no decline, still selling at from $10 to $15 per hundred, and the quality is of the best. Violets are somewhat more abundant. Sweet peas are coming in quite freely and the best sell as high as $5 and $6 per hundred. Narcissi are more abundant, but the prices hold up well. Tulips are not yet particularly plentiful; La Reine, White Hawk, Yellow Prince and Prosperity are most in evidence.

Some fine mignonette is coming in and snapdragons are improving. Myosotis was in fair demand for St. Valentine's day; so were English polyanthus and primroses. Stevia has passed, but it is not missed, as there are now more flowers to take its place. Acacia Baileyana and A. pubescens sell at $3 per bunch. Cattleyas are plentiful. A few gardenias and some valley are seen. Lilies and callas are both in good supply. Asparagus moves better with the passing of stevia.

St. Valentine's day business was the best that Boston ever had. February 13 snow fell all day, but Saturday was clear and pleasant and all the stores did a big business.

Club Meeting.

A driving snow storm and blockaded roads were hardly conducive to a successful carnation night at the meeting of the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club February 10. Only fifty members were present, the smallest attendance in a dozen years. Five new members were elected. It was reported that tickets were selling at a lively rate for the dance and buffet lunch, February 17.

Exhibits fell far below the club's usual February record, as nearly all the large would-be exhibitors were unable to attend. C. S. Strout came from Biddeford, Me., with handsome vases of Maine Sunshine, which was awarded a report of merit, and White Delight, which received honorable mention. These two varieties will be disseminated next season. William C. Rust showed a magnificent vase of Laddie, awarded a cultural certificate. Edward Winkler had a nice vase of the ever popular Morning Glow, awarded honorable mention. C. J. McGregor & Sons, Newburyport, showed their new crimson seedling, Ruth W. Somerby, which they will introduce next season.

From James Wheeler came Godfrey callas of remarkable size, grown in solid beds. Mr. Wheeler has 4,000 planted in this way and finds them an inexpensive crop to care for and most profitable. A night temperature of 48 to 50 degrees suits them. From Walter H. Golby came a fine selection of flowers, including nemesias, Myosotis Sutton's pot variety, Schizanthus Sutton's Pink, and Narcissus White Lady, Seagull, Barrii conspicuus, rugulosus and Golden Spur, awarded honorable mention. The T. J. Grey Co. received honorable mention for a representative collection of seed potatoes.

C. S. Strout made an interesting address on the Chicago convention and discussed the merits of varieties seen there. He discussed the present wholesale prices of carnations and disapproved of the high prices asked. His policy had been to hold prices down as low as profits would permit in winter and hold up prices in warmer weather, rather than charge an extravagant figure at this season. Retail florists in outside cities dependent on Boston for their supplies, he said, could not pay $15 to $18 per hundred for carnations and make any profit. Present conditions would simply force many to the wall. The present condition is unhealthy, he asserted, and it is time something was done toward stabilizing prices on carnations, so that retailers can make some profit.

He advocated the use of a book for all carnation growers. He carried a small one in which he could tell in a moment what each variety grown had yielded in flowers and money each year. For instance, this season to date Snow White has given seventeen flowers per foot at an average price of $10 per hundred; Maine Sunshine, seven flowers, and Laddie, three, at an average of $25 per hundred. He tried to produce some fancy varieties and more of others which were free bloomers. Pink Delight with him was a steady but not heavy cropper. He always aimed to sell reasonably to those outside his own city, as he was largely dependent on them later in the season. He commended the great work being done by the Dorners in carnations and said they had some excellent salmons, smaller, but much freer, than Laddie.

Gustave Thommen followed Mr. Strout with an interesting talk on the benefits of oil heating as proved at the M. E. Moore range, at Arlington, where half the area of 150,000 feet of glass is heated with oil much more economically than with coal. He later discussed the help question and criticised florists for their slack bookkeeping methods. The income tax had proven a blessing to many in showing them how little money they were earning.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting and the cakes, specially made for the occasion by Mrs. W. H. Judd, were much appreciated.

Various Notes.

William Sim has brought action against the state for $6,000 damages as a result of the corn borer campaign waged last season. He had a large field of early sweet corn which an inspector condemned and ordered him to plow up. Mr. Sim promptly complied. A day later another inspector called and said he need not plow the field up, as there seemed no danger from the borer. Other growers who had delayed their plowing suffered no loss.

At Thos. F. Galvin's Back Bay and Park street stores St. Valentine's day business broke all records. Funeral work has been heavy of late.

E. J. Ahearn, of Wellesley, one of our leading marguerite specialists, was unfortunate enough to lose a large house of these flowers from the weight of snow February 5. C. J. McGregor & Son, of Newburyport, lost a house of carnations during the same storm.

At Penn's, St. Valentine's day business went far ahead of all previous records. Large, telling ads in the Boston papers brought an avalanche of orders. Owing to the blockaded streets, delivery was difficult. Automobiles used the cleared streets and fifty boys were hired to make deliveries on streets still impassable to automobiles.

Some remarkably fine mignonette is coming in from Donald Carmichael, Wellesley, and W. R. Nicholson, Framingham.

B. A. Snyder & Co. report a good shipping trade. Customers at a distance continue to buy freely in spite of high prices.

At Hamlin's, in the Little building, a fine St. Valentine's day business was done, sweet peas, violets, primroses, pansies, roses and orchids being special favorites.

The next meeting of the Boston Florists' Association will be held March 2. The wholesalers will present their case to the meeting.

The continued high price of flowers is forcing some of the smaller retailers to the wall. This is most unfortunate, as the class of patrons frequenting these small stores rarely venture inside the more pretentious ones.

A. C. Burrage will make another large exhibit of orchids in Horticultural hall February 28. The annual winter lecture course will start the same afternoon. These orchid exhibits will hereafter be open on Sunday afternoons in addition to Saturdays.

The local soft coal situation is serious and as critical as at any time during the war. The inducements to export coal at higher prices than can be obtained in the domestic market is one cause. The tremendous snow blockades are another serious factor. Some greenhousemen are reported to have little supply on hand.

Ten days after the snow blockade started some towns within eighteen miles of Boston were still without railroad service. Paine Bros. and Peter Hylen, of Randolph, large bulb specialists, were unable to ship at all for several days and even February 16 had not secured normal train service.

William Gillson, head salesman for Thomas Roland, was back on duty again February 16 after several weeks of sickness. W. N. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Weather conditions were better last week and the supply of stock has increased. The demand still exceeds the supply and all stock is cleaned up at good prices.

The St. Valentine's day demand was large and the wholesalers faced a hard problem in dividing up the stock. The growers were called upon frequently during the final rush to hurry in with anything they might have.

Various Notes.

Z. D. Blackistone had an attractive St. Valentine's day display. The window was cleverly arranged, with a large heart in the center.

George C. Shaffer was unusually busy with St. Valentine's day orders, and his entire floor was covered with boxes ready for delivery. G. V. S.

Ellsworth, Kan.—Roth & Spicer have taken over the cut flower business of William Macaulay, who died recently.

Cambridge, O.—Fred W. Arnold has been kept exceptionally busy of late while his grower was down with the flu.

Hamilton, O.—Rudolph Bock has taken over the old Roquet greenhouses, on Fair avenue, which he opened February 2. Mr. Bock recently returned after eighteen months' service in the Seventh Machine Gun Battalion, with the Third Division, overseas. He has had twelve years' experience in greenhouse work, having been with some of the largest growers in the country.

A RISE in freight rates approximating twenty-five per cent is among the early probabilities.

LENT has not been a welcome season for retailers in years past, but this year it may be.

THE railroad strike is averted, or at least postponed. One worry is removed for a time.

CAN you see and count your lily buds today? If not, you would better push a little harder or you won't make Easter.

WITH Easter April 4 and Mothers' day May 9, the test of the stability of the flower business will come in the intervening weeks.

FORTY days from next Wednesday, February 25, Easter will be with us. Wonder if flowers will be scarce in Lent this year? If they are, it will be the first time.

BUSINESS is a healthy pursuit, but few florists are in business for their health. They are in it to sell their services, for which they should get what those services are worth.

WHEN one picks up a copy of The Review of a year ago he realizes more accurately what progress it has made. The Review is the paper that has grown with the trade.

IT is reported one greenhouse material concern, anticipating a record season, some time ago acquired options at the factories on 15,000 boxes of greenhouse glass.

ALWAYS put street addresses on the things you send by mail, express or telegraph. In the present state of affairs the postoffice, particularly, returns to the sender large quantities of matter lacking street address which would have been delivered promptly under the old order of things.

THE Pacific Coast Department is becoming one of the most interesting features of The Review. Many new things have come from the coast and many others will come, because trade interests there are just entering upon that stage of development which will be felt throughout the country. It will pay to watch the Pacific Coast Department.

FEW of us are pleased with the continuous rise in prices, but none of us will be pleased when prices begin to fall, because that will not be until there is unemployment.

IT would be a mistake to go too fast in the matter of advancing prices, but any florist who grows really good stock can get profitable prices if he asks just a little more and then again a little more until he has worked his trade up to the necessary level.

FLORISTS who plant soft-wooded stock in the busy spring miss a fine chance if they do not plant hard-wooded stock in the quiet autumn. Take orders all summer and fill them in the fall. Get ready for it now by putting out some sample shrubs on your own place this spring.

THE man who advertises "cash with order" and gets more orders than he can fill, need look for little sympathy if he holds the checks. There is only one course to pursue when a man receives money for which he cannot send the goods. It is to practice the golden rule.

LARGE growers vexed with the unskilled help problem find a little hope in the report that immigration showed an increase last year, small though it was. Statisticians have little expectation of a cessation of labor scarcity till foreigners come in again as they did before the war.

ACTING on a suggestion in these columns, a subscriber investigated in his local postoffice and found that the mail sacks containing his Review reached that postoffice on Friday, but often lay there unopened until the following Monday or Tuesday. A chat with the postmaster fixed it up so that city now gets its Reviews delivered promptly. Suppose you try it.

A SUPERFLUOUS HOLIDAY.

Holidays are of particular value to the florist because they furnish occasions for creating an additional demand for flowers. Under ordinary circumstances that additional demand is much welcomed by the florist, bringing him, as it does, increased business at good prices. For that reason the trade has made flower days out of certain dates on the calendar, one of them St. Valentine's day.

This year, however, the efforts of the florists to create additional business were not great, nor, in most cities, were they needed. Retailers have had all the orders they could find flowers for in most cases. Additional help and additional flowers were wanted more than additional demand. The prevalent prosperity created a great many valentine orders for florists on top of the trade caused by the flu. Retailers who did advertise for St. Valentine's day found more business on their hands than they could comfortably take care of. In Milwaukee, where an increased supply of stock seemed to warrant the advertising committee's use of the newspapers for the holiday, the resulting business was characterized as "like a small Easter."

The zero weather that hit a good many centers St. Valentine's day and the heavy snow in the east made deliveries a difficult task, also. So, whatever this day brought in additional business to the retailers, they fully earned by the efforts to handle it.

Of course, stock is expected to be more plentiful by Easter, though indications are that there will be none too much under any circumstances. If the wave of sickness will have passed by that date, florists may be able to handle the business on that day. But if that demand should still be of some strength, stock will be all too scarce. It's but a short time till the big day. Last week's holiday should warn everyone to get all the stock possible ready for April 4.

LOOKING AHEAD.

Every grower must look into the future to make the most of opportunities as they come. Today he must look pretty far ahead, for what was once a long time is now a brief space, so fast is the trade advancing. The prosperity that is responsible for part of today's flower buying may not endure forever, but no one, even the economic prognosticators, see the top of the hill and the down-slope yet. The advertising campaign is like a snowball growing more rapidly as it rolls along; the momentum at present will be surpassed even if the rate of acceleration is not increased. In addition, local coöperative campaigns are being organized in a number of cities to ward off the spring and autumn gluts. Though the flu will, we hope, soon be over, the other factors that augment the demand for flowers are going to work more strongly.

Under the circumstances, the grower will seek to increase his production. For this he must look ahead, too. For the greenhouse builders are booking orders far ahead. Materials cannot be obtained on short notice. All lines of manufacture, from the steel mills down, seem to be working to capacity, filling the orders as they come, with a slight preference for those that are largest, easiest and most profitable. For that reason all lines that supply the florists' trade must order far ahead in order to meet the needs of a later date.

The sure way to be certain of profits when they are to be had is to plan far enough in advance to be ready for the occasion.

BRIEF ANSWERS.

D. F. C., Colo.—Don't try to pinch the lilies.

EASTERN READERS, NOTE!

Numerous as the users of Classified ads in The Review have become, there still are many hundreds of other florists who could use them profitably. And at present any florist who has good stock he does not need for his local trade is conferring a benefit on others in the business by advertising his surplus. Particularly in the east, there are many florists, relying principally on local demand, who would be serving the trade as well as making a profit for themselves by offering some of their stock in the Classified section of The Review. It works like this:

The little ads in The Review bring good results.—Hugo Kind, Hammonton, N. J., February 10, 1920.

We are completely sold out of the snapdragons advertised in The Review.—J. C. Bigelow & Sons, Utica, N. Y., February 10, 1920.

The Classified ad of geraniums has done its work as usual. Sold out.—William A. Murdoch, Titusville, Pa., February 12, 1920.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

OBITUARY

Edward W. Habermehl.

Just one week ago Ed Habermehl was talking of the bright prospects for next season. Full of life and vigor, he pictured what a wonderful season it will be in floral decorations. Today he lies quietly at rest, his work here finished. It is so sudden. It seems past belief. Taken from our midst at a moment's notice in the prime of manhood, the intense sadness of it all is well-nigh overpowering. God's will be done.

Edward W. Habermehl died Wednesday, February 11, at his home, 2105 Diamond street, Philadelphia, of double pneumonia, after a few days' illness. The street was profoundly moved by the death of Mr. Habermehl. Mark P. Mills said: "He was our best decorator and the best judge of plants among our retailers." Edwin J. Fancourt said: "I have seen many decorations outside of Philadelphia. None could equal those put up here by the Habermehls." Harry Bayersdorfer said: "He did his share of the big things done by his firm." Edward Reid said: "I have known him for thirty years and I consider it an honor to belong to the profession to which he belonged." Alvah R. Jones said: "In his business dealings he was always a courteous gentleman."

The firm of J. J. Habermehl's Sons consisted of two brothers, John P. and Edward W. Habermehl. The present generation first knew them when they were on the south side of Diamond street. This ground was sold to William M. Singerly and a fine store and greenhouses were built on their present lot at the northeast corner of Twenty-second and Diamond streets. Here they conducted a general retail florists' business and were recognized as the leading uptown florists in Philadelphia. Gradually the firm went more and more into decorations, adding one after another the accessories now considered indispensable by the first-class decorator. They could successfully handle extremely large decorations. This class of work narrowed down to two firms, the Grahams and the Habermehls. To enlarge their field the Habermehls, who were in search of a downtown store, leased the flower shop in the Bellevue-Stratford hotel before it was completed. This business stroke was most successful. Founders' week followed, when the Habermehls took the entire contract for decorations for the city, a gigantic undertaking requiring six months' preparation with a small army of assistants. This work won their fame.

After the withdrawal of the Grahams from the field of decorations, William Graham became decorator for the Habermehls and on his departure for Chicago Edward Habermehl undertook the work himself. It was in this branch of his firm's business that he made his mark. He was a hard worker, with a vast capacity for detail. The things he undertook he carried out thoroughly, always aiming that his work excel. It has been my privilege to see eight or ten of Ed Habermehl's best decorations. I have marveled at the rapid advance made in the art. The material used was always first-class. It was selected with judgment and with taste. It was extremely well put together. The effect was always finished to the smallest detail. The work was never late. Just think what that means, the careful preparation, the early hours and the late hours, the self-denial, the resourcefulness. There is one other factor in the success of the brothers Habermehl that has an especial bearing on the business life of Edward Habermehl; that is the demonstrating department. When a ball was to be given the host usually named the place where it was to be given, the amount to be spent and what was expected. From this often hazy outline a plan in water colors was prepared, showing exactly what could be done for the amount proposed. Another plan was also prepared showing how this plan might be improved upon and what it would cost. This always resulted in a better understanding and frequently in much finer decorations than were originally intended.

Ed Habermehl was laid at rest Saturday morning, February 14. He was 52 years of age. Phil.

Edward Lennon.

Edward Lennon died suddenly at his home, 38 Weaver avenue, Newport, R. I., Monday, February 9. He was one of the best known of the old-time gardeners in Newport and was employed for a number of years by the late Commodore William Edgar on his estate on the Old Beach road, now occupied by his daughter, Miss Lucille Edgar. He was a devout churchman at St. Mary's parish. He is survived by two sons, of Newport, and a daughter, in Boston.

Willard L. Wyckoff.

Willard L. Wyckoff, of Chagrin Falls, O., died Friday, February 13, of influenza. The funeral was held the following Sunday at the residence. His widow was well known to the trade, before her marriage, as Miss Grace Hunt.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Market.

The business on St. Valentine's day was unusually heavy this year, floral valentines being more in demand than ever. The only drawback was the acute scarcity of stock. Sweet peas, the usual leaders at this time, were limited and the supply was soon exhausted. Freesias, violets and other small flowers were rapid sellers. Roses were especially scarce and high in price. Carnations were in good demand. Baskets, with both cut flowers and plants, sold well. Plants were particularly good property. Cyclamens and primroses were leaders in this line, although begonias, daffodils, hyacinths and ferns were also shown.

The market continues extremely tight. A few new varieties are seen, but these are just beginning to come in and, as yet, are meager. This is particularly true of hyacinths, jonquils and daffodils; the latter are bringing $10 per hundred wholesale and $2.50 per dozen retail, perhaps the highest price ever obtained for them in this vicinity.

Roses are available in limited supply, bringing from $12 to $50 per hundred. Carnations are selling at $12 and $15 per hundred. Sweet peas and freesias are especially popular and high-priced; the former bring $3 per hundred stems, while the latter vary in price according to quality.

The demand has been strong; there has been a great deal of sickness and the death rate has been unusually heavy. Funeral work has been so rushing that some of the stores had only enough flowers to fill these orders and were forced to disappoint many who wished flowers for other purposes.

Various Notes.

While driving the delivery car of Clarence R. Greene recently, the chauffeur narrowly escaped injury in an accident, in which the car was ditched and almost demolished.

D. L. Fern, representing the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, and J. J. Karins, with Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, called on the trade last week.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Conditions remain practically unchanged; the market is not yet able to fill all orders, although no regular buyer goes without part of his needs.

Last week proved another record-breaker for the Chicago market. There are wholesale houses reporting a larger week's business than at Christmas, unbelievable as it may seem. The explanation lies in the fact that the market was extremely active and exceedingly strong all through the week, with two remarkably heavy days just before St. Valentine's. The Thursday and Friday business not only exceeded everything heretofore known for St. Valentine's day, but not so long ago would have constituted a good Christmas or Easter business. Prices advanced slightly as St. Valentine's day approached. Everything cleaned up with the exception of violets. There was a shortage of roses and carnations, just as there has been for weeks, and some increase in sweet peas and bulbous stock did not serve to ease the situation. There was an abundance of freesia, so that any florist who could use this flower got all he wanted. Cattleyas also were equal to the demand. The only surplus was of violets. There was a bad smash in this department. Early last week growers in Rhinebeck telegraphed that the storms had interfered with their shipments and some of them added that there would not be many violets for Chicago for St. Valentine's day. The result was that the Chicago wholesalers either declined violet orders or put the price so high that the orders were small. Then the Rhinebeck growers shipped practically their whole week's pick to this market! The reason assigned is that the great snow storm had resulted in an embargo on New York city; being shut out, or practically shut out from that market, most of the week's pick, instead of only a small part of it, was sent to Chicago. It took this market unawares. No doubt the violets could have been sold at fair prices if there had been advance information of their coming, but all the advance information was the other way. The result was that the buyers made their own prices and it was not possible to sell all the stock at any price.

Of course the best of them went first, but there were a great many poor flowers that could not be sold at all. One wholesale house reports having dumped 25,000 leftovers February 16.

After St. Valentine's day the market eased off to a slight extent. There was no change in the prices of the shorter grades of roses, but the longer grades went down a little. Carnations also slipped back to where they were before the last advance. There was no special increase in the supply, weather conditions being such that production was checked, as it always is in a spell of zero temperature. But there has been an increase in the supply of sweet peas and of bulbous stock. There are few tulips this year, many growers not having cared to run the risks incident to the high cost of bulbs. Jonquils, however, are fairly abundant and freesia is plentiful. There are more callas than a week ago and Easter lilies are coming in small quantities from several sources. There is a quite general feeling that the long expected turn in the market is not far away. It probably will take several days of good weather to start the roses and carnations, but the sweet peas and bulbous flowers are coming much stronger. At the beginning of this week orders were filled much more nearly in full than has been the case since Christmas. At the same time the epidemic of flu evidently is on the wane, because the de-

Frank Schramm's Expansion.

Frank Schramm, at Crystal Lake, Ill., has placed an order, with the American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., for material for two houses, each 43x225, which will double his bench space. The new glass is to be planted, as soon as possible, to Russell and Milady, as the older houses are.

It is reported that James Spandikow has sold his stock interest in the Maywood company with which his name is associated, resigned his position as manager of the greenhouses, to take effect February 29, and March 1 will return to Mr. Schramm, a contract for a partnership having been signed.

Mr. Spandikow made his reputation as a rose grower while in Mr. Schramm's employment. It has been reported, and confirmed to the present writer by both Mr. Schramm and Mr. Spandikow, that in the last ten months of Mr. Spandikow's connection there Mr. Schramm's gross sales averaged $2.51 per plant for Russell and $3.51 per plant for Milady; that in the next two months the cut averaged 20 cents per plant, with the result that for the year ended June 30, 1919, Mr. Schramm's gross takings averaged $2.71 per plant for Russell and $3.71 per plant for Milady. The Chicago Flower Growers' Association, which sold the stock, also has confirmed these figures. In explanation of the $1 per plant difference in the two varieties it was stated that the Milady plants were all in their second year, while a considerable part of the Russell was young stock, benched just before the year opened.

All Is Not Gold that Glitters.

In spite of the well known fact that supply and demand govern wholesale prices, there always is complaint when values go temporarily above accustomed levels. The complaint has been much less during the last month than it has been under less provocative conditions in other seasons, but still there is complaint. It is said, for instance, that the prices of the early bulbous flowers have not been justified. They have not been higher, relatively, than the prices of roses or carnations and not so high as the December and January prices of cattleyas, but perhaps the prices of these flowers have been so long maintained they no longer seem out of line.

In this connection it is interesting to note that, while the forcers of bulbs are doing well, their receipts are not all subject to the income tax. For instance, take the experience of Sam Pearce, known as among the most successful of bulb forcers. Mr. Pearce does not furnish these facts, or speak of the matter at all, but they are well known to many. In the first place, this grower invested $30,000 in bulbs four months or more before he cut a flower. How many retailers would have been willing to commit themselves to that extent under the conditions which prevailed last summer and autumn? The quarantine which took effect last summer shuts out bulbs of Iris tingitana, which the retailers have found extremely useful in recent years. So Mr. Pearce took a chance; just before the quarantine went into effect he brought in $1,400 worth of these bulky bulbs. He gave them space and the best of care for seven months and then he gave them up—he did not cut a dozen flowers. Nor did he cut a flower from any one of 20,000 Yellow Prince tulips. Many of the Paper Whites were blind, the first batch of jonquils ditto. On the other items the loss has run from ten to fifteen per cent.

If this has been the experience of one of the most successful forcers, what has happened with growers less well equipped or skillful? Is their reward out of proportion to their risk even in this season of unexpectedly strong demand?

Rents and Renters.

As an example of what is happening in the wholesale cut flower district, the concerns which have space on the second floor of the Atlas block with leases expiring May 1 have been notified that renewals will be made at rentals which approximate $1.30 per square foot. This is an advance of from forty to seventy per cent. There are eighteen trade concerns in this building. Of these twelve are on the second floor, three in the basement and three on the street floor.

The rates on the street level are, of course, much higher, while those in the basement are somewhat lower than on the popular second floor. Of the eighteen concerns nine are wholesale, seven are wholesale and retail, one is a seed store and one deals in artificial material. All the leases have been for short terms, as rebuilding has been in prospect. In some of the neighboring buildings housing florists long term leases have been made, but as these expire corresponding advances are being made.

The tenants of the two buildings on Wabash avenue at the northeast corner of Randolph street have been notified to vacate, as demolition will start at midnight April 30, a skyscraper to be erected. The trade firms affected are Percy Jones, Inc., and A. L. Vaughan & Co. H. Van Gelder, president of the Jones company, long ago protected that concern by acquiring space in the Atlas block, where the sales headquarters has been located for nearly a year, but he has a large stock of florists' supplies stored in the basement and on the second floor of one of the buildings to be demolished. If he can not find other convenient storage space he will have a clearing sale. A. L. Vaughan & Co. have not yet announced their plans.

Mr. Wienhoeber's Deal.

In The Review last week it was reported that E. Wienhoeber had sold his home property in Highland Park and bought a smaller place for himself and his daughter, in Winnetka. The deal got into the real estate news of the Sunday papers February 15. The Tribune said of it:

"On the north shore Thomas J. Byrne bought the north thirteen acres of Ernst Wienhoeber's 28-acre tract in Highland Park on Green Bay road overlooking the Skokie valley and just east of the Bob-o-Link Golf Club. There is a 10-room residence. The price reported by Murray & Terry, brokers, was $45,000. The same firm sold to Ernst Wienhoeber the residence of Samuel H. Gereley, of Winnetka, in Bryant avenue, 200 feet south of Lloyd place, lot 85x190, for a reported consideration of $28,000."

Various Notes.

Albert Koehler, secretary and treasurer of the American Bulb Co., left for New York Tuesday, and February 21 will sail for Rotterdam, intending to spend four months looking after the company's interests in Holland, France, Italy and England. The latest addition to the A. B. C. staff of salesmen is Guy W. French, who is widely known in the trade, first as in charge of the carnation department of Poehlmann Bros. Co., later a member of the firm of French & Salm, and for his activities in many trade organizations. He was a member of the S. A. F. committee which started the national publicity campaign and is at present chairman of the good-of-the-club committee, in charge of most of the activities of the Chicago Florists' Club. Since retiring from the firm of French & Salm Mr. French has been a member of the sales staff of the A. L. Randall Co.

The charter of the Meyer & Dramm Co., Elmhurst, has been amended to change the name of the corporation, which now is Dramm Greenhouses, Inc.

H. J. Corfield has started in business for himself, as landscape architect and dealer in seeds, bulbs, plants and nursery stock, at room 412 Standard Trust building.

The news which came out last week concerning the ordinance pending in the city council, which would impose a license fee of $1,500 on anyone who buys coal by the carload and hauls it through the streets, seems to have provoked a storm of protest. Not only florists, but many others would be affected. The aldermen heard from their constituents in no uncertain terms. The explanation given was that in transcribing the ordinance four words were omitted in that section relating to carload buyers. The words were: "For the purpose of resale." The inclusion of these words will make the ordinance harmless to florists. But so much protest has been made that the ordinance probably will be materially changed in other features before it is passed.

Charles Erne says that among the season's shortages must be listed the green carnation dye so necessary to the celebration of St. Patrick's day. The right chemicals are hard to locate, he says.

Herbert Hansen, who has charge of Peter Reinberg's sales department, says the orders for carnation cuttings exceed anything in the previous experience of that establishment. He says they come by every mail and that nearly every order refers to a Classified ad in The Review.

P. C. Schupp says he figures that Lent, which begins February 25, will have little effect on the flower business this year, except, perhaps, on the demand for valley, principally used for wedding work.

"It isn't art they want," said Peter Miller; "it's great, big, bulky bouquets for the bridal parties that bring the people back for more."

The monthly meeting of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago was called for Thursday afternoon, February 19, at the Hotel Randolph.

F. C. W. Brown, general manager of the J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland, was here February 17, on one of his frequent brief trips. One of the things he took home with him was a carload of baskets!

C. H. Fisk and Mrs. Fisk started for Japan February 18. They expect to spend four or five months in the Flowery Kingdom and then will proceed westward to China and India.

It is reported the American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., which recently sold $200,000 of preferred stock to provide new working capital, has over $750,000 of unfilled orders on its books. A material part of this, of course, is represented by the contract for fifty-four houses to be erected in sections for the East Coast Hothouse Operators, a vegetable forcing project in New Jersey now in process of flotation. E. E. Burton has been transferred from the New York office to the Chicago sales department.

To remind the public to "Say It with Flowers" February 14, Schiller's used the daily newspapers and the street and elevated car cards. Lange and Fleischman each used large display ads in the Tribune.

Abe Kabibble, the well known character in the Chicago American cartoons, was discomfited by his rival, Sparkbaum, who "Said It with Flowers" and won the lady in question.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Flowers have bloomed more freely during the second week in February than at any time since Christmas. They have all been sold at Christmas prices and many more could have been used. Parties took some, home brightening took some, St. Valentine's day took some, but the real strength of the demand was due, alas, to the epidemic of pneumonia. They call it grip and say it is not to be compared in severity with the influenza that raged sixteen months ago, yet it is so severe that flowers are more used for sad than for joyful occasions in the height of the pre-Lenten rush.

Sweet peas, Golden Spur narcissi and roses are more plentiful. There are a few more carnations and callas. Violets were short of the demand early in the week, but became too plentiful St. Valentine's day. The singles did well then, but in New York were in oversupply. It seems hard to induce the buyers to take up valley again at the higher price made necessary by the higher cost. The grip is affecting shipping quite as much as it does local orders. Telegrams from distant points for quantities of flowers for funerals are not infrequent. There is a slight decrease in the demand for the fancy long-stemmed roses, due possibly to the greater number of spring flowers. Tulips have come, notably in double varieties, Murillo and Couronne d'Or. There are a few cowslips. The volume of business for the first half of February far exceeds that of the same fortnight one year ago.

March 2.

Hugo Niessen, chairman of the essay committee of the Florists' Club, announces that J. Otto Thilow, secretary of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., has kindly consented to give an illustrated lecture on "Australia" Tuesday evening, March 2. Mr. Thilow took the photographs, from which the slides have been made, on his trip this winter. He promises that this lecture will be equal to any that he has ever given.

It is proposed to make the occasion ladies' night. Each member is asked to bring his better half or his best girl, as the case may be. The roof garden has been engaged at the Hotel Adelphia in order to have plenty of room, as Mr. Thilow's talks on his pictures are popular. Put the date in your engagement book, Tuesday, March 2, 8 p. m.

On Spring Garden Street.

Raymond Brunswick, secretary and treasurer of the M. Rice Co., chatting about business matters of interest, said that the only difficulty about orders for St. Valentine's was that the season was too short. Florists would not order for St. Valentine's day before January and the orders could not be booked, filled and delivered to all points of the country in a little over a month. If the business in valentines is to be developed, orders will have to be placed earlier.

Mr. Brunswick said that the present shortage in natural flowers had created an unprecedented demand for artificial flowers. This demand is so great that his shipping department cannot keep pace with the factory and it has become necessary to hold up any orders that can wait to get out the artificial flowers on time.

Floral Movies.

1—A woman is seen in the room behind her flower shop. She is crying. She holds a sheet of orders in her hand. Before her are empty jars. She has no flowers for her orders. A man enters the front shop with a small pasteboard box. She rushes forward to welcome him.

2—The scene this time is in the buying room of a flower shop. The buyer is calling the wholesalers, one after another, on the telephone, apparently without result. The order clerk comes in, seizes the few remaining flowers and goes out.

3—Scene, a fashionable flower shop. People are coming and going. About half of them go out without purchasing, when told the prices. There are not enough flowers for the others.

Various Notes.

The death of Edward W. Habermehl has cast a gloom over floral circles. He was extremely popular. His career is described in this week's obituary column.

John R. Andre is cutting a good crop of roses at his range in Doylestown. Mr. Andre ships to the Leo Niessen Co.

Thomas Potts is bringing in a great crop of Golden Spur for the Floracroft Greenhouses, at Moorestown.

The Edgeplain Floral Co. has opened temporary offices at 2027 North College avenue.

Pennock Bros. had a handsome window display of exquisite floral valentines. The most striking was a basket of Golden Spur narcissi with a bunch of forget-me-nots and a bow of light blue ribbon.

Most men hate to carry packages. W. W. Crawford is the exception. His willingness to carry his purchases has won him the sobriquet of "Bundle Bill."

Edwin J. Fancourt went with William F. Gude to the Knoxville, Tenn., meeting, which he greatly enjoyed.

Berger Bros. are receiving some nice valley.

The Market.

It looked like a big snow storm early Saturday, February 14, but it cleared before noon and everybody was happy. From all reports, St. Valentine's day business was better, in all respects, than in any of the previous years and the splendid clean-up that was anticipated came true.

Violets were not favored, as was the custom in former years. Roses, carnations and bulbous stock sold equally well this year. Of course, violets sold as well as ever, but the big increase in business for this day caused a demand for anything in sight that looked good.

The wholesale market was firm all the week, with prices up on high-grade stock. Everything was more plentiful last week, but the great demand cleaned up all the markets daily and the prices remained stationary throughout the week.

The supply in roses was not equal to the demand and to fill orders, even for the local trade, was out of the question. In carnations, the market was better than it has been for many weeks, while the price remained at $18 to $20 per hundred, with extra fancy at $25. The market cleared daily. It is predicted that these will be quite plentiful in the next ten days and a big drop in prices is looked for. Violets were good all the week. A big crop of sweet peas is looked for, as the supply now is heavy and all our local growers have planted heavily. Valley has dropped in price to $10 per hundred, with extra fancy at $12. Bulbous stock arrives heavily, while jonquils, tulips, Von Sion, Paper Whites, etc., clean up well.

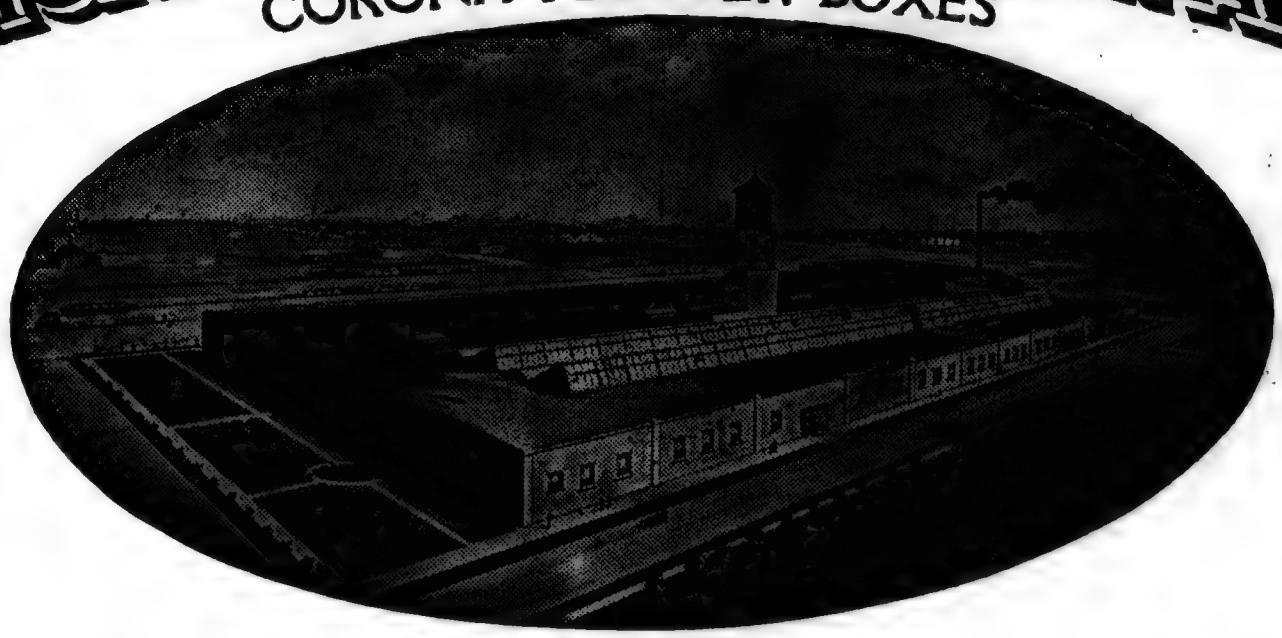
Present indications are for a heavy crop in all seasonable flowers soon.

Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting, February 12, in the salesrooms of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co.

The meeting was not well attended, owing to the fact that many were sick. When President Hummert called the meeting to order, there were thirty-five members in attendance.

The report of L. J. Bourdet, chairman of the publicity committee, was interesting. He showed the members what the committee had done for St. Valentine's day advertising and what is being done to advertise Easter.



Frank Windler, vice-president of the Missouri State Florists' Association, reported that efforts are being made to hold a meeting of the association in St. Louis, May 15 and 16. Applications for membership were presented by the following: Peter Pfander, Joseph Braun, George Kuehner, Joseph Krager and Martin Ude.

The secretary then read the names of forty-four applicants for membership presented at the last meeting and, as the committee reported favorably on all the applicants, the secretary cast the ballot for the members present.

All delinquent members were given until the next meeting before being dropped from the rolls of membership.

President Hummert spoke on the spring flower show of the St. Louis Garden Club, to be held in the big show house at the Missouri Botanical Garden, May 15 and 16, which would be free to the public.

J. F. Ammann also spoke and commented upon the premium list and made a motion that the club approve of the show and do all in its power to make it a success. He also suggested that a committee be appointed to work with the show committee.

The following members were appointed to work with the show committee: A. H. Hummert, chairman; L. J. Bourdet, W. A. Rowe, F. C. Weber, Carl Beyer and J. J. Beneke.

The following were recommended as judges for the show: F. J. Fillmore, Fred H. Weber and W. J. Pitcher.

F. J. Fillmore, L. J. Bourdet and J. J. Beneke were appointed a committee to draft resolutions on the death of Fred C. Weber.

Flowers were ordered sent to Joseph Witek, who is ill.

A rising vote of thanks was given to the Windler Wholesale Floral Co. for the afternoon's entertainment.

J. F. Ammann was called upon for a talk on the recent meetings of the American Carnation Society, at Chicago, and the S. A. F. directors' meeting, at Cleveland, also on the new growers' association.

The question box brought out some interesting discussions, after which the meeting adjourned. The next meeting will be held March 11.

Library hall Wednesday, February 18.

Eric Johnson and Frank Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, spent February 9 and 10 here with Harry Hall, the local representative. Their visit here was for the purpose of establishing a factory in St. Louis for the manufacturing of florists' baskets and wicker furniture.

Among those who have been reported on the sick list during the last week were: J. J. Windler, George Kuehner, Fred Herman and Fred Strohmeyer. Joseph Witek was taken home from the hospital last week and expects to be back attending to business soon.

The automobile show decorations, at Exhibition hall, were furnished by Schaeffer & Steitz, of Vandervoort's floral department. The work was highly commended by the management. Besides the decorations of the hall, they also furnished all decorations of the booths of all exhibitors, under the personal supervision of Julius Schaeffer.

The following east side florists were in the city last week: Matthew Schoenberger, L. Dintelmann, W. E. Ogle and A. G. Fehr, of Belleville, Ill.; J. F. Ammann and Henry Blixen, of Edwardsville, Ill., and George Madsen, of Alton, Ill. All attended the club meeting, February 12.

J. J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Inc., and George Hampton, of the J. G. Neidinger Co., Philadelphia, spent a few days last week in St. Louis calling on the trade.

Grimm & Gorly report that St. Valentine's day business was much larger than last year.

A. G. Fehr, of Belleville, Ill., says that he will have a fine crop of Easter lilies ready in time for Easter sales.

New faces in the sales force of the St. Louis Seed Co. indicate the busy season's approach. Mail orders during the last week were heavy and the counter trade has improved considerably.

Seibel & Dreimeyer have closed their Cass avenue store and will confine their business to the Labadie avenue greenhouses. They report a splendid trade.

Frank Plotz, manager of the Brix Floral Co., says that business at their St. Louis avenue store is satisfactory and has been all season.

Nat Kingsley, head of the Mullanphy Florists' store on Grand avenue, says that things in the north end are excellent. They are forced to work overtime to keep up with the demand for funeral flowers.

St. Valentine's day business among the west end establishments was better than last year. The demand was especially heavy for violets. F. C. Weber, Joseph Witek and F. H. Weber said that telegraph orders from all parts were

The Market.

With transportation facilities, which were seriously hampered by the recent storm, somewhat improved, the market is better supplied with cut flowers. Many growers who depend upon express service are, however, still experiencing difficulty in getting shipments to market, especially those using motor express service.

The improvement happily came in time for St. Valentine's day business and there was an ample supply of flowers available. Retailers report a fairly good business, the only trouble being the difficulty in making deliveries, the snow blockade making vehicle service almost impossible and the scarcity of messengers delaying hand deliveries considerably. There was an abundance of bulbous flowers, indeed of everything with the exception of roses, which were not any too plentiful. Carnations were in heavy supply and prices dropped materially in consequence. Tulips also were subject to a decline in value. Lilies of the valley moved well and there were plenty of them. Violets met the usual demand, as did orchids, and, under the conditions, prices were reasonable.

At the beginning of this week the market was fairly well supplied and demand near normal. American Beauty roses are not at all plentiful, although sufficient to meet the demand at present prices, which are still on a high plane. Hybrid teas are not abundant and the shortage on the lower grades continues. The quality of arrivals in general is good. Premier is in excellent shape and Sunburst is showing splendid color. The generous supply of long-stemmed flowers moves a little slowly and concessions occasionally are made to accelerate movement.

The supply of carnations is heavier than it has been all season, but prices are keeping up fairly well, although the high figures of the last few weeks are not likely to prevail. With the brighter weather now with us, which should be more constant from now on, the cut should become larger every week, as every grower reports a good crop in sight. Laddie, when it is to be had, brings a little more than the ordinary varieties.

There is a good supply of cattleyas, but the movement is slow and clearances are hard to make. The price range is from 15 cents to 75 cents, with most of the arrivals in the lower grades. There is a fair supply of cypripediums, which command $2 to $5 per dozen.

Easter lilies are in somewhat better supply, but the prices remain the same. Lilies of the valley are in oversupply and move slowly at $1.50 to $8 per hundred sprays, with the lower grades predominating.

There is a wealth of bulbous material and much remains unsold at the close of the day. Arrivals of tulips are particularly heavy and there is no complaint as to quality. Paper Whites are also plentiful and move fairly well, as there is a large demand for funeral work. The supply of daffodils is increasing and there is an abundance of freesias of good quality.

There is plenty of choice in the list of miscellaneous flowers arriving and

Various Notes.

An announcement of the death of Louis C. Elson, music teacher, author and lecturer, last week, in Boston, brings to the recollection of old-time members of the New York Florists' Club the genial gentleman who, in the nineties, gave a series of lectures before the club, at the quarters it then occupied, in the Elks' hall, Twenty-seventh street and Broadway, on "Music and Flowers."

The flower department of Hahne & Co., Newark, N. J., has been taken over by Robert G. Wilson, who has a store at Fulton street and Green avenue, Brooklyn. With his branch store at 345 Green avenue, he has practically three retail stands. At his greenhouses he is working up a stock of the new fern for which he was awarded the silver medal at the show of the Horticultural Society of New York last fall.

George V. Nash, of the New York Botanical Garden, will lecture in the Museum building, at the garden, Saturday, March 6, on "House Plants." March 20, Dr. Marshall A. Howe will lecture on "Forcing Bulbs for the Home."

A. M. Henshaw, of the Henshaw Floral Co., is still confined to his home, but expects to be able to resume his duties this week.

Roman J. Irwin, chairman of the club's dinner committee, reports that a good number of seats for the dinner to be held at the Hotel Biltmore, March 17, have already been reserved. In view of the importance of the event during flower show week, the committee is in hopes of having a banner attendance. The tickets are $5 each, for either lady or gentleman. Several of the club members have reserved tables seating eight and ten persons.

BUSINESS BRISK.

If there is any florist who does not find business brisk it is because he has no stock or fails to offer it in the Classified section of this paper. It works like this:

The ad cleaned us out and we could have sold more. As soon as we have something else to offer we will advertise it in The Review, you may be sure.—Bel Air Greenhouses, R. H. Lee, Mgr., Bel Air, Md., February 9, 1920.

I am sold out of impatiens and am returning checks, so please stop the ad. You will hear from me again as soon as I have more stock to offer.—Victor H. Thomas, Augusta, Ky., February 8, 1920.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Big business and a scarcity of stock usually go together and that was the situation here last week. A big rain helped the violet situation a little for St. Valentine's day shipments, but the flowers are not so good as usual. Roses are still below the demand. Freesias are arriving more slowly than usual. Carnations are scarce and greens are none too plentiful.

Various Notes.

Walter Armacost & Co. have purchased another five acres of land adjacent to their range at Sawtelle, Cal. According to Mr. Roystan, it has not been decided whether it shall be built upon at present, or not. The cut of roses is excellent in every way.

Miss Simpson, of 3656 Ogden avenue, Chicago, and her friend, Miss Sanborn, were visiting in the city last week.

After not meeting for several months, the Los Angeles Florists' Club held a meeting February 12. The get-together spirit was much in evidence and a great deal was accomplished.

T. J. Wright, father of T. Wright, of Wright's Greenhouses, Pittsburg, Kan., is still enjoying the southern California sunshine at Pomona, Cal. Since the return of his son from overseas, Mr. Wright has less responsibility and is trying out the shipping of stock east from here.

M. P. Elliott, formerly of La Jolla, Cal., is now situated in El Paso, Tex., where he is planning to start in business again. The health of his wife was the cause of Mr. Elliott's leaving this vicinity.

Fred H. Allen, of Allen Water Garden, is going into the preparation of lotus and other water plants. His perpetuated stock is beautiful.

The L. A. Floral Co. has been busy in shipping made-up work. The force has been called upon to work all night. One funeral in Imperial valley called for over fifty pieces.

The H. N. Gage Co. has purchased forty-one and a half acres of land near the Rio Honda, about a mile west of Downey, Cal. Mr. Gage says that he intends planting about twenty acres in oranges and, as this is in the heart of the Valencia district, it should be a success. The bulbous stock is now arriving at the company's nursery at Elmonte and probably some from Montebello will be gradually moved to the new location.

H. R. Richards.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

The call for local decorations and the eastern demand made the business in connection with St. Valentine's day especially heavy. Funeral work also has strengthened the demand, which, together with the fact that several flowers have been off crop, has kept prices up. The general scarcity, however, has been somewhat relieved by the incoming spring flowers.

Local growers have been sending in good Ward roses, jonquils, tulips, daffodils, sweet peas and valley. Freesias are popular and much used with Easter lilies, which made their first appearance week before last. Chrysanthemums have shown a slight improvement, especially Maud Dean and Seidewitz. Orchids have arrived in good quantity and have sold well. Narcissi from California and later from eastern Washington are expected to arrive soon.

Cyclamens, cinerarias, baby primroses, tulips and daffodils are the best sellers in potted plants, which continue to sell well. Acacia, salal and asparagus fern are much employed in decoration. The larger ferns are also in good demand.

Various Notes.

The Woodlawn Flower Shop had an especially elaborate funeral piece lately; cattleyas, Seidewitz mums, Easter lilies, freesias and asparagus fern were used for a cross more than seven feet high.

Rosaia Bros. have been bringing in excellent Ophelia roses and Cattleya Trianæ from their greenhouses, also good Columbia and Ward roses. George Rosaia has been ill with the flu.

William Goldsbary, of the Kinney Flower Shop, has been using Californian acacia, salal and jonquils effectively in decorations.

Fred J. Rowe, of C. E. McCoy's store, has been ill with the flu.

The Woodland Park Floral Co. has been making effective use of fancy baskets of tulips in various colors.

H. P. Anderson, of the University Floral Co., reports that the annual varsity ball, at the University of Washington, brought much business to this store.

Freesia Gen. Pershing (Frey)

Extra robust grower, 3 ft. in height, with 4 to 5 long side laterals; large open flowers of lavender pink, yellow lip and somewhat of a bronze cast. The cut flowers have created quite a sensation on the Chicago Market for several seasons and command the highest market prices.

Freesia Viola (Frey)

Like a large Woodviolet, the lower petals of a deeper violet blue, a beautiful, distinct and valuable hybrid. The growth is about 30 inches in height, with 4 to 5 long side laterals, long enough for any floral work. Sold at good prices on the Chicago Market for several seasons.

SPOKANE, WASH.

The Market.

The continued dull weather has had a serious effect on the stock; in fact, Spokane was never so short of flowers before. The last of the chrysanthemums arrived last week. Bulbous stock is starting to arrive, but not in sufficient quantity to meet the demand. Potted tulips and hyacinths are to be seen and find a ready sale.

Various Notes.

A large number of the florists and their wives are on the sick list. The annual banquet was postponed on this account.

William Berry, of Donart's House of Flowers, has resigned.

E. Hedger, of the Davenport Flower Shop, has bought an automobile.

All flower shops have been busy this month with funeral work, the flu being the cause of most deaths at present.

The Glenrose Greenhouses are sending in some fine Laddie, in spite of the fact that about all the help have been sick.

H. E. Reimers has a fine window display of cinerarias.

The Spokane Florist Co. was handicapped by the illness of most of its employees and their families. H. H.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

The report comes from the local shipping establishments of a volume of business unprecedented in the history of the trade. Many of the San Francisco shippers say that they have never experienced such a large St. Valentine's day business. Orders from the east were arriving in such quantities that it was extremely difficult to meet the demand. Flowers of all kinds were none too plentiful and the shortage of roses is still a noticeable factor in the business of the month.

With the exception of one or two nurseries, which are now beginning to cut the second rose crop, growers cannot promise any large amount of cut stock until the end of February, or the first part of March. According to one of the prominent growers of this district, who recently made a trip through the central part of the state visiting the various nurseries, it will be at least three or four weeks before the rose crop can be cut to any extent.

Coöperation on Prices.

An interesting phase of coöperation is now being tried by the San Francisco retail florists. Primarily, the movement among the various retail establishments was started in an effort to bring about an arrangement of prices on cut flowers, particularly roses, but now the idea is assuming larger proportions, covering a wider scope of activities among the trade. A number of meetings held during the last two weeks have resulted in a better understanding among different members of the trade and a desire to coöperate to an extent which will be of mutual benefit to all concerned. One of the leading persons in this new coöperative movement is A. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co. Mr. Rossi has had extensive experience in organization matters and was recently elected to the presidency of the Downtown Association. He expressed the stand that the retail florists are taking in regard to the present high prices somewhat in this manner: "It is not that we, the retailers, wish to cut the growers' prices on their products. We understand that costs, particularly those of labor, have made it absolutely necessary for the grower to increase his prices, just the same as our overhead has increased during the last few years, but, of course, the retailers are the ones who have to stand the brunt of the customers' complaints and it is only right that we come to an understanding with the wholesalers and succeed in establishing as firm a market price as is possible under the circumstances. It is only by coöperation that

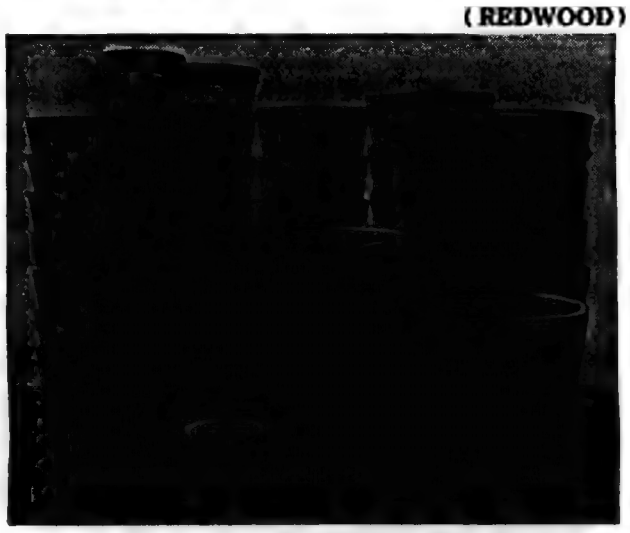
Various Notes.

L. Ross is a recent addition to the sales force of the Hallawell Seed & Flower Co. Mr. Ross returned not long ago from overseas service and has been spending a few months in the northern part of the state. Mr. Hallawell states that business is flourishing in all lines. The weather is tempting just now to the gardener and quantities of bedding flowers are being sold as well as rose bushes and shrubs of all kinds.

L. Piccetti, of the retail store of Chas. Navlet & Co., states that the force has been kept exceedingly busy with early planting stock. He says that the demand for rose bushes and fruit trees has been heavy this year; in fact, the state-wide shortage of fruit trees has caused considerable difficulty in filling orders.

Gen. A. J. Gooch reported the heaviest St. Valentine's day shipping in the history of the business and he had to use all the available stock with which to fill his orders.

Enomoto & Co. were rushed with St. Valentine's day orders and shipped large quantities of spring flowers, including daffodils, Paper Whites, acacia and hyacinths. Mr. Enomoto states that carnations are being shipped successfully this year. A good crop is being cut from the Enomoto nurseries just now.



Domoto Bros. report an excellent volume of shipping business. They are filling orders for acacia, daffodils, carnations and giant willows in addition to the regular items. The nursery stock from the Elmhurst location is in fine shape. The Easter lily crop is showing splendid promise and they expect to have a large stock of both cut lilies and potted stock. Mr. Domoto mentioned the favorable progress of potted hydrangeas and rhododendrons for Easter.

The United Flower & Supply Co. reports good success with long-distance carnation shipments. Its St. Valentine's day business included large orders of carnations and spring flowers.

J. A. Axell is filling orders on the Murray Rainbow freesias, which are

The Market.

Bulbous stock is arriving more freely and is picked up readily. Potted bulbous stock is in demand and a large number of pots were sold for St. Valentine's day. The demand for violets was fair. Sweet peas cleaned up on sight and realized from $3 to $4 per hundred. Carnations are still short of the demand, the quality being good. The rose cut is still limited. The demand for calla lilies has been good. Freesias have been moving well and a small quantity of valley has been available. Calendulas and other novelties are in demand. Greens are about as scarce as flowers, adiantum being in greatest demand.

Various Notes.

James McLaughlin, for some time manager of the wholesale store of the J. M. Gasser Co., has left its employ.

The influenza epidemic has increased the use of artificial flowers, as the stock of natural flowers in many stores gave out too soon.

The flu is making many local florists short-handed at present.

Albert Barber's store froze up last week. Several plants in the window and cut bulbous stock on the counter were frozen solid. W. F. B.

Sheffield, Ill.—Clarence L. Thomas, junior member of the firm of W. G. Thomas & Sons, has gone to the University of Illinois to take a special course in floriculture and horticulture.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Pleasure to Give.

In sending a check for a yearly subscription to the publicity campaign fund, O. F. Eskil, of Iron Mountain, Mich., writes: "Sending this money gives me more pleasure than anything else I can think of—unless it were a larger check."

This is the proper feeling. Mr. Eskil knows that the campaign is a wonderful asset to the florists' trade and he writes just as he feels. It is regretted that more do not appreciate the increased demand for flowers everywhere, which has come as a result of our publicity movement. Every florist in the land is interested in the successful issue of our campaign and is benefited by it. Yet how few are willing to help themselves by helping along the campaign! To date our results are due to the support that comes from less than ten per cent of the trade, men who have subscribed for the benefit of our industry generally, but who are more than satisfied with results as they see them and particularly as they have noticed them in their own surroundings. It is these men who are in greater part bearing the expense of our work this year as far as our publicity committee has been able to carry it.

Some Questions.

Here are a few questions for non-subscribers to consider. They should consider them deeply, for surely they are sufficiently interesting from a business point of view.

Are you not prepared to admit that publicity for flowers has been instrumental in increasing the general demand for them?

Are you not conscious of the fact that our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," is exerting a tremendous influence among people who hitherto have not looked upon our products as a medium for the conveyance of sentiment?

Are you not aware that through individual display, magazine announcements and in various other ways, our slogan meets the eyes of millions of people each and every day?

Artificial Flowers Are a Great Help. We Have Them

WHOLESALE COMMISSION FLORISTS

1108-10 Grand Ave., KANSAS CITY, MO.

CLEVELAND, O.

The Market.

Bulbous stock is arriving more freely and is picked up readily. Potted bulbous stock is in demand and a large number of pots were sold for St. Valentine's day. The demand for violets was fair. Sweet peas cleaned up on sight and realized from $3 to $4 per hundred. Carnations are still short of the demand, the quality being good. The rose cut is still limited. The demand for calla lilies has been good. Freesias have been moving well and a small quantity of valley has been available. Calendulas and other novelties are in demand. Greens are about as scarce as flowers, adiantum being in greatest demand.

Various Notes.

James McLaughlin, for some time manager of the wholesale store of the J. M. Gasser Co., has left its employ.

The influenza epidemic has increased the use of artificial flowers, as the stock of natural flowers in many stores gave out too soon.

The flu is making many local florists short-handed at present.

Albert Barber's store froze up last week. Several plants in the window and cut bulbous stock on the counter were frozen solid. W. F. B.

Sheffield, Ill.—Clarence L. Thomas, junior member of the firm of W. G. Thomas & Sons, has gone to the University of Illinois to take a special course in floriculture and horticulture.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Pleasure to Give.

In sending a check for a yearly subscription to the publicity campaign fund, O. F. Eskil, of Iron Mountain, Mich., writes: "Sending this money gives me more pleasure than anything else I can think of—unless it were a larger check."

This is the proper feeling. Mr. Eskil knows that the campaign is a wonderful asset to the florists' trade and he writes just as he feels. It is regretted that more do not appreciate the increased demand for flowers everywhere, which has come as a result of our publicity movement. Every florist in the land is interested in the successful issue of our campaign and is benefited by it. Yet how few are willing to help themselves by helping along the campaign! To date our results are due to the support that comes from less than ten per cent of the trade, men who have subscribed for the benefit of our industry generally, but who are more than satisfied with results as they see them and particularly as they have noticed them in their own surroundings. It is these men who are in greater part bearing the expense of our work this year as far as our publicity committee has been able to carry it.

Some Questions.

Here are a few questions for non-subscribers to consider. They should consider them deeply, for surely they are sufficiently interesting from a business point of view.

Are you not prepared to admit that publicity for flowers has been instrumental in increasing the general demand for them?

Are you not conscious of the fact that our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," is exerting a tremendous influence among people who hitherto have not looked upon our products as a medium for the conveyance of sentiment?

Are you not aware that through individual display, magazine announcements and in various other ways, our slogan meets the eyes of millions of people each and every day?

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY ADS.

While retailers did not generally do so much advertising for St. Valentine's day this year as previously, because the natural demand took all available flowers without more call being created, yet some efforts were made of a strikingly successful nature.

As novel a form of newspaper advertisement as could be devised was that of Mrs. Lord's Flower Room, at Topeka, Kan. An ad for a previous St. Valentine's day used by Mrs. Lord appeared on the front page of The Review February 5, illustrating the article, "Develop Day of Heart Heralds." Using eight inches across four columns, Mrs. Lord reproduced the page from The Review in the Topeka Daily Capital February 13, with the note that she was better prepared for the day's business than before. The unusual appearance of the advertisement made it especially striking to the eye and gained notice from the greater share of the readers.

Window displays were used to good advantage. In Baltimore, Samuel Feast & Sons showed a valentine poster painted in oils, an original idea that won attention from passers-by. The painting showed a cupid with a messenger boy's cap, carrying a corsage. In the background were dimly outlined the American continents. Large letters emphasized the message, "Valentines to and from All Parts of the Continent via F. T. D."

The Fleischman Floral Co., Chicago, had a number of various sizes and colors of hearts in the two windows, each bearing flowers. The large size of one or two made the window quite conspicuous and the novel valentines evidently proved popular, for the windows were bare when night came.

GROWN INTO NEW QUARTERS.

Steady, solid growth has characterized the business of George A. Souster, Elgin, Ill., through all its forty years of development. Recently Mr. Souster moved into a new store of larger proportions than any he had occupied before. The accompanying illustration shows the attractive interior, with the show case and refrigerator furnished by the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago. While Mr. Souster continues to give the store the benefit of his experience, the active workers at present are his two daughters, Miss Souster and Mrs. Hamilton, and his son-in-law, Mr. Hamilton.

CURING CURIOUS CUSTOMERS.

"In my early days in the business," relates Max Schling, "when I was one of the smallest florists in New York, I had as a customer a nice and refined lady. When she bought something for her friends she always wanted three or four half-open roses with one full-open one among them. She wanted them so, not because of beauty. Her sentiment was really not that such roses were better. She didn't want to spend much money and three or four open roses showed much more than a dozen good tight roses and she was saving money. As soon as I got on to her scheme, I put in the box a little card on which was written, 'Fully developed roses sent by special order of Mrs. W.' Mrs. W. selected the flowers herself. Then I had no more complaints from her friends that the roses did not keep, but shortly afterwards I ceased to get any more orders for open roses or any other orders at all from that lady.

"Such ladies, when flowers are sent to them, expect something quite wonderful. One came into the store one day whose friend out west had sent her a plant. The plant was an inexpensive one. Unfortunately, she thought that this friend had sent an order for a much more expensive plant and that we had made an excessive profit by sending her a plant worth far less than the amount paid for it. After she saw that she could not get any information as to how much her friend paid, she didn't want any plant and didn't want to leave her address, because the salesman told her, 'We will write to your friend stating you have called on us regarding the price and size of the plant.' Incidentally I recognized my old friend with the open roses."

INTRODUCING MRS. MONTAINE.

In the Daytonews, the house organ of the Dayton Co., Minneapolis, appeared the following introduction of Mrs. W. L. Montaine, head of the flower department, beneath an attractive portrait of that person:

"Perhaps more people will associate the name of Miss Barden with the above picture, as she discarded that name in favor of the other just since coming to the store.

"Mrs. Montaine has graced our floral department for the last two years with an efficiency and artistry of touch that proclaim a thorough knowledge of the florists' business. She was designer for a number of years with the L. L. May Co. before coming to Daytonia.

"Mrs. Montaine was born near Milwaukee, Wis., of American parentage, and came to the Twin Cities some ten years ago. She is a graduate of the Johnson School of Music and is a member of the St. Paul Oratorio Club and several dramatic clubs.

"Several years ago, when show horses were in style, Mrs. Montaine owned Cub, state champion for three years in succession, who had something like thirty ribbons to his credit. But the inevitable happened and Cub was replaced by a Studebaker car, which possesses all the speed Mrs. Montaine desires."

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Do you, for one moment, think that a great deal of business does not result from this continuous flashing of a message whose appeal is not to any particular class, but to every man and woman, young or old, in a country of over a hundred millions in population?

Do you realize that this publicity

Telegraph Delivery Department

The florists whose cards appear on the pages carrying this head, are prepared to fill orders from other florists for local delivery on the usual basis.

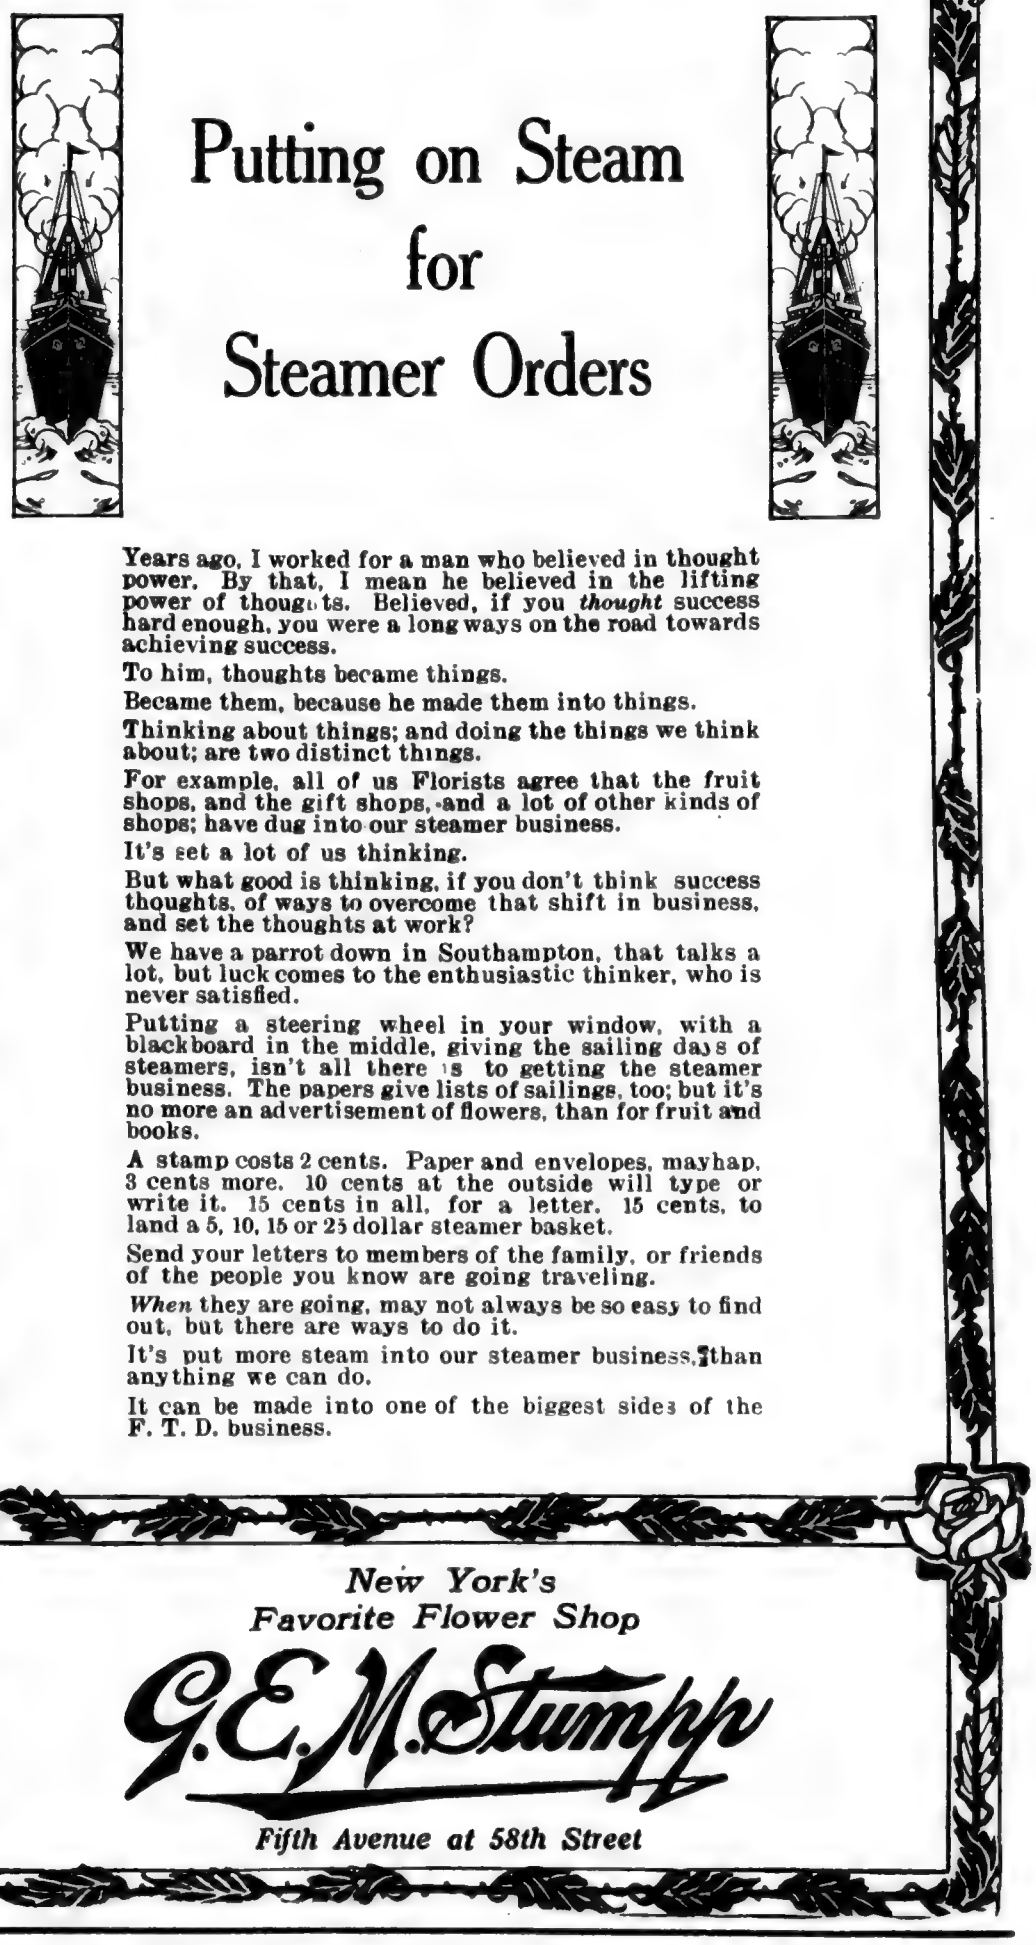
costs money, but comparatively little when the returns are taken into account, and you are only asked to contribute a mere trifle toward the expense?

Is it impossible for you to determine that you will send in this "mite" the committee needs so much to increase and perpetuate the good already obtained? A tenth of one per cent of your profits would, perhaps, make a respectable contribution. If every florist making a living from our industry would contribute even this small fraction of his income, our committee would not have to be continually appealing to those who, in the circumstances, should need no appeal and who should really be most anxious to keep going and extend a movement which is productive of so much good to them.

Do not be afraid to contribute because yours may be but a small mite; there is nothing to prevent your adding to it at any time. A $5 contribution is accepted in the spirit in which it is given. Many who originally sent in this amount increased it as their interest grew. When you once make a subscription you are apt to take a broader view of our work and you no longer look upon your support in the way of a donation. You believe it to be a mighty good investment—and that's what it really is. John Young, Sec'y.

INTERNATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

Only Three Weeks Away.



At this time, three weeks before the opening of the international flower show, at the Grand Central Palace, New York, all arrangements are practically completed.
